BUCS HOPE TO NAIL PENNANT TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—As the Pirates prepared for battle with the Reds today they were glad to know that the Giants were entirely out of all pennant reckoning, but they realized that the Cardinals were still a threat. While it is true that the Redbirds have only an outside chance to win the flag, it is a fact of the figures that they could force a deadlock in the race, thereby sending the flag into an extra series of three games, which would have to be arranged by the board of directors of the league.

The Bushwhackers, however, will be playing out every string to prevent such a regrettable eventuality. Such a thing surely would be distasteful to the Buccos and their partisans, and while they have a blow to strike against it they surely ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—This was a day of funerals for St. Louis. Most of the 88 victims of Thursday's tornado will be buried today. Early this morning the funeral processions started. Many of the mourners showed injuries suffered themselves in the terrific wind which in five minutes ripped a path of desolation six miles square throughout the northwest section of the city, leaving damages of at least $50,000,000, 660 injured and a death list which may reach 100.

The American Red Cross relief fund, which is being collected from local sources only, reached almost $25,000 this morning. It is expected

Ruth's Plane Ready

CURTIS FIELD, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Placed on the mound at the head of Roosevelt field's runway today, Miss Ruth Elder's monoplane, the American Girl, was ready to take off on a projected non-stop flight to Europe.

Weather conditions for the flight looked favorable, according to an announcement by Capt. George Haldeman, who will pilot the Stinson-Detroiter. Definite decision will be made when the 2 o'clock weather map is received, he said.

Joy-Hungry Wife Dies, Suicide

Mrs. Helen Sweeney, 22, of 816 Sandusky street, who swallowed poison because her husband's night job interfered with their enjoyment of life, died late yesterday in the Presbterian Hospital.

Mrs. Sweeney collapsed Monday night in the rooming house in which she lived with her husband, Edward Sweeney, an automobile mechanic, a few hours after they had left a motion picture show because it was time for the husband to go to work. She had purchased poison at a drug store and after phoning him at the place he was employed, took the fatal poison.

JAWORSKI'S JAI GUNMAN TAKE

Caught by Detroit police, positively identified by Pittsbu jail officials and prisoners, Sam Pallas, alias Sam Jaworski, younger brother of Paul Jaworski, jail-breaking murderer, p roll bandit and fugitive from justice, has been ordered extradit and brought to this county for trial. Sam Jaworski is charg with having, single-handed, accomplished the jail delivery August 18 in which he shot two guards in the Allegheny Cou Jail and liberated Paul Jaworski and John Vasbinder, both aw ing death sentence.

The first fruit of the nationwide search for the fugitives and their jail-breaking accomplices, was flashed over the long distance telephone to Chief County Detective George W. Murren, at 10:30 this morning. Acting Police Commissioner James McCarthy of Detroit said:

"We have your man, Sam Pallas, alias Sam Jaworski, and a companion. Arrested last night and held awaiting your instructions."

Chief Murren called First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park, and armed with a photograph of the Detroit prisoner, the two officials went to the county jail where the picture was positively identified by Warden John McNeil, Matron Margaret Taylor, Guard Paul Bieswanger, and others as the man who had repeatedly visited Paul Jaworski in the jail.

BROTHER'S ACCOMPLICE

On August 18 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon Sam Jaworski dashed suddenly from the visitors' box at the jail and thrusting two guns into the oustretched hands of Paul Jaworski turned his own guns on the guards in the jail office and effected the escape of his brother and his brother's jail confederate, Vasbinder.

The three men escaped in an automobile while an alarm brought squads of police to the Ross street entrance of the jail. No trace had been found of them until this morning's news of the Detroit arrests.

Sam Pallas, alias Sam Jaworski, Chief George Murren says, is known to have been an accomplice with Paul Jaworski in bandit activities which have resulted in several killings here and in Michigan. Pallas served time in Michigan for highway robbery.

After a conference with District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, Mr. Park said that extradition proceedings would be started immediately to bring Sam Jaworski here.

He was a candidate at the rec primary and obtained the Repub nomination for judge.

PENNANT POSSIBILITIES

Thwarted by the Cincinnati Reds yesterday from sewing up the pennant in the National League, the Pirates lost ground to the second-place Cards, who were idle. Today the Pirates play the Reds again and the Cards meet the Cubs in St. Louis. If both the Pirates and the Cards win the Pirates will have clinched the pennant and the standing will be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Pittsburgh	94	59	.614
St. Louis	92	61	.601

But if the Pirates should again lose to the Reds and the Cards defeat the Cubs the standing will be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Pittsburgh	93	60	.608
St. Louis	92	61	.601

And if both teams lose the Pirates still have clinched the flag, inasmuch as the Cards have only one more game with the Cubs and will be unable to catch the Pirates, who will have a lead of two games with but one left toplay.

Politician Tamed by Magistrate

Charles Sable, proprietor of the Sable-Richards garage, Center avenue and Dinwiddie street, holder of the concession for supplying the city with automobiles and the towing of stolen cars, was "towed in" himself in Morals Court today and compelled to make a humble apology to Magistrate A. D. Brandon.

Sable was arrested in the courtroom on a charge of disorderly conduct by order of the magistrate when he is alleged to have talked in a loud voice and belittled Brandon's office. Sable, strongly intrenched with the city administration and said to be the political protege of Councilman Daniel Winters, hastened from the courtroom after his apology to report the incident to Mayor Charles H. Kline.

Sable went to Morals Court to appear in behalf of three Negro drivers employed by him, arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. Light fines were imposed on two of the drivers and the third was discharged. Sable was kept from the courtroom until the drivers' cases were disposed of and when he was brought back, Brandon said:

"Your boisterous behavior will not be tolerated in this court. If you apologize, you may go."

"Judge, I'm very sorry, honest I am," said Sable.

In time the development of flying machines will bring nations and individuals close together and that will make war frightfully dangerous and then end war because it will be too dangerous.

THE flying machine problem would be solved rapidly, if the government, which should do it, would concentrate on flying machine possibilities as great railroads concentrate on their problems. Every time you cross this continent you find actual and visible improvement in railroad and sleeping car service, and you find railroads everywhere improving their lines. This railroad, the Santa Fe, is cutting out long expensive slow curves, inevitable in the old days of little money, all along its lines. What is said of the Santa Fe is true also of the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and other trans-continental roads. They are building for the future.

Tornado Victim's Dress Proved Hoodoo

By Universal Service.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—Eva Michaloske, 13, who was killed in the tornado, had a premonition she would die, it was learned.

The first time she wore the dress in which she was clad when found dead, she was in a serious automobile accident. The second time she wore it she fell and injured a leg.

When she put it on and started for school, she remarked: "I suppose I'll not come home alive this time."

nection with the election might reach 110.

The recount had been under way only a short time today when Thomas W. MacDonald, investigator for the Pennsylvania Elections Association, announced that "discrepancies" had been unearthed in two new districts—the Thirty-second District, Fifth Ward, and Twenty-fourth District, Nineteenth Ward, the first South Side ward to come under the association's investigating eye.

MacDonald reported the alleged discrepancies to District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner and expected that informations would be filed against the 10 officials of the two districts, who were:

Thirty-second District, Fifth Ward—S. L. Ostrosky, judge; Daniel Cox, Edward Brown, inspectors; Daniel Karo, Isadore Schaffer, clerks.

Twenty-fourth District, Nineteenth Ward—James F. Bingham, judge; James Howard, James H. Abbott, inspectors; Joseph H. Howard, Joseph F. Finn, clerks.

If informations are sworn out against this latest group the number of prosecutions will have reached 70 election officials. Alderman A. M. Maloney has issued 60 informations to the district attorney's office, 55 of them coming today, and George Murren, chief of the county detectives, distributed them in batches for his deputies to serve. Bond was set at $2,500 for each official.

New petitions for impounding of ballot boxes and recounts of votes in widely scattered districts, some in the county, were being presented to court almost hourly.

Ballot boxes from the Eleventh District, Sixteenth Ward; Twenty-first, Twenty-fourth and Thirty-third Districts, Fourth Ward, were ordered impounded today on petitions presented by Attorneys R. H. Frank, F. A. Ammon and F. C. McGirr.

Those named in warrants to come from the District Attorney's office today, according to Samuel H. Gardner, are:

Sixteenth District, Third Ward—George Mack, judge of elections; Frank Savena and William Donnelly, inspectors, and Clara Jackson and Ida Butler, clerks.

Eighteenth District, Third Ward—Samuel Neaman, judge; Jack McKenzie and David Fineberg, inspectors, and Harry Fineberg and Jacob Rosenberg, clerks.

Fifth District, Fourth Ward—Edward Muldowney, judge; Harry Schack and Felix McKnight, inspectors, and Howard S. Smith and Edward Keenan, clerks.

Twenty-third District, Fourth Ward—Abe C. Lando, judge; Patrick Foley and Celia Lando, inspectors, and H. J. McNally and Mrs. H. J. McNally, clerks.

Twelfth District, Fifth Ward—Morris Gordon, judge; Pattie Monroe and Jenny Murdock, inspectors, and Hannah Jackson and William O. Hubbard, clerks.

FARM RADIO PROGRAM TO START MONDAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Farm and household radio services of the Department of Agriculture will be broadcast by 83 selected stations scattered throughout 34 states this winter, the department announced. The program will begin next Monday and will continue until April 30, 1928. It is expected that by the middle of October the number of broadcasting stations will have been increased to nearly 100.

FAKE OFFICER FOUND GUILTY IN SLUGGING

John S. Mogart, of 1126 East Ohio street, North Side, was convicted yesterday of aggravated assault and battery by a jury in Criminal Court.

It was charged that on the night of August 6, at Ohio and Sandusky streets, North Side, he stopped the automobile of Benno Dreifus, of 1236 Palo Alto street, and, in a traffic jam under pretext of being a policeman and taking the car to the station for a pretended violation of the law, forced Dreifus to drive into Oak alley.

There Mogart slugged Dreifus with a blackjack and broke his jaw, according to testimony. Mogart was also tried for attempted robbery, but acquitted on this charge.

Judge Harry H. Rowand paroled Mogart for three years and fixed restitution for Dreifus at $750. A sentence of 18 to 36 months in the workhouse was fixed for a violation of the parole.

POLICEMAN SHOT BY OWN GUN

Wounded by a bullet from his own revolver, Sub-Patrolman W. B. Peitz, 33, of 4935 Mintwood street, is a patient in West Penn Hospital.

Returning from duty at 7 o'clock this morning, Peitz was hanging his holster on the chair beside his bed when the revolver dropped to the floor and was discharged, the bullet passing through Peitz's left leg below the knee.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASES SHOW DECREASE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Infantile paralysis showed a decrease last week over the preceding week, the U. S. Public Health Service announced. There were 641 new cases as against 656 cases for the preceding week. An increase however, was noted in Ohio, where 97 cases were reported compared with 89 the week before.

ESCAPES FROM BURNING AUTO AFTER CRASH

W. T. Grinder, 55, of 3328 Dawson street, crawled from the wreckage of his automobile at Melwood and Center avenues this morning just in time to escape fire which followed a collision with another machine.

Grinder, a barber in the St. Nicholas building, suffered lacerations of the face and hands in the crash. His machine was destroyed.

Jacob Taksa, 30, of 123 Merewood street, driver of the machine which collided with Grinder's, escaped injury. Both men were arrested and released under bail for Traffic Court hearings.

Stay Off Automobiles, Police Ordered

Policemen who ride to work in their own or borrowed automobiles will be haled before the police trial board, and inspectors who fail to enforce the order will be "booked," Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh declared last night in an order read in all police stations.

The order is the second of its kind to be issued by Superintendent Walsh. The first, issued several months ago, apparently was taken as a joke both by patrolmen and inspectors, as many patrolmen, as well as inspectors and lieutenants, have been reported riding to work in their machines.

NORTH SIDE BOY AND GIRL ARE BITTEN BY DOGS

Joseph Schweiger, 9, 210 Rockledge street, Spring Hill, was bitten on the hip by a dog owned by Frank Jelic, 1417 Hetzel street, and Betty Wilhelm, 4, of 927 Morrison avenue, was bitten on the left hand by a dog owned by Robert Kelterhouse, 904 Morrison avenue, according to reports to North Side police today. Police ordered both animals turned over to the Animal Rescue League.

SLEUTH SLAIN BY BANDITS

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(AP.)—Robbers shot and killed George Miller, 32, house detective, in the second floor lobby of the Spencer Hotel early today and fled with $700 taken from the hotel owner, David Spencer.

The robbers lounged in lobby chairs as Miller and Spencer entered, Spencer carrying a money bag. At the robbers' command to throw up his hands the detective drew his own weapon, whereupon the bandit's pistol blazed.

Although shot five times, Miller opened fire with his gun and a trail of blood found later on the stairway and a blood-soaked cap on the street showed at least one of his bullets found a mark.

Hospitals were being checked today for possible traces of the wounded holdup man.

U. S. TO ARREST JAKIE KLEIN

Bench warrants for arrest of Jakie Klein and Harry A. Meyers, alias "Dopey" Davis, were issued today by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson for failure to post bonds following their indictment by the Federal grand jury at Erie this week.

They are charged with conspiracy to intimidate W. L. King, secretary of the Citizens' League, a government witness. Klein has been at liberty on bond provided before a United States commissioner and must put up new bail. Meyers has never been apprehended.

that $500,000 will be needed for rehabilitation of the devastated districts.

The ruins left in the tornado's wake were combed all last Friday night for additional bodies, but most of the additional deaths are now expected to be reported from hospitals where the injured were taken.

Building Commissioner Christopher estimated that damage of at least $50,000,000 was caused by the raging elements in the brief time they ravished the city.

Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener plans to investigate reports that several of the apartment houses and schools razed by the storm were constructed in violation of building codes' requirements and were flimsy structures.

PROBE BEGUN

Sidener declared he had several reports from citizens charging that brick walls in many of the destroyed apartments were only nine inches thick instead of 13 inches, as required by the building code.

A complaint that Central High School, where five girls were buried under debris, was unsafe, is also to be probed, Sidener declared. He asserted he had been told the high school had merely been repaired and not remodeled and fireproofed, as he had been led to believe.

WIFE TO PLEAD INSANITY IN NEW CASTLE SLAYING

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 1.—The plea of insanity, based on a story of 10 years of abuse, will be raised in defense of Mrs. Ina L. Whitlatch, wan, weary mother of seven children, when she goes on trial for her life for the shooting of her husband, William, in their home here Thursday.

This was indicated today in a review of the woman's life by her brother, George Mayberry, as she waited phlegmatically in jail for a coroner's inquest and preliminary hearing Monday.

"She didn't know what she was doing when she shot her husband. She was out of her head and had been for four weeks. It was the abuse that she had been subjected to for the last 10 years that brought about this terrible affair."

Thus Mayberry explains why Mrs. Whitlatch pumped three bullets into her husband's body as he fled vainly trying to escape the bullet barrage, which stopped only when the fourth cartridge in the gun missed fire.

HER SECOND MARRIAGE

"My sister had had a very unfortunate life," Mayberry continued. "Her first marriage was very happy, and she was grief-stricken when her husband was killed in the mines at Redmond. Then one of her sons, by her first husband, was killed while sledriding in Butler county.

"Her second marriage, to William Whitlatch, was a battle almost from the altar. The real trouble, I believe, came through James, a son of the first marriage, now 22 years old. William hated James, forbade him the privilege of visiting his mother and constantly berated her whenever James would do her some little favor. Once he moved all the household goods except a bed and table from the Whitlatch home at Hilliards, Butler county. He took the children with him and after two weeks of longing for them, Mrs. Whitlatch capitulated and went to him.

"On one occasion, when James brought his mother home from the funeral of her mother, William attempted to have him arrested.

"There were physical assaults on my sister, too, and scores of occasions when William berated her before the children. She stood it for years—as long as she could, in my opinion, and then something snapped in her brain.

"The murder, I think, followed," concluded Mayberry.

BOYS ACQUITTED IN SHOOTING

A shooting expedition for birds near Carnegie brought three 17-year-old Carnegie boys into Criminal Court yesterday, William Millington, Washington avenue extension, on a charge of carrying concealed weapons; Frank Szafran, 329 Carothers avenue, on a charge of felonious shooting, and Michael Gryga, 111 Mansfield avenue, as the victim of the hunt. He was shot during an argument over cigarets, it was charged, but the defendants claimed the shooting was accidental, offering evidence that the Gryga boy admitted this. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

HOLD 2 IN DEATH OF WOMAN

James Ross and Heskel Potter, Negroes, of 25 Fullerton street, are being held by police at the Center Avenue Station today pending an autopsy to determine the cause of the death of Annabelle Dare, 22, Negro, of the Fullerton street address.

Ross, alleged sweetheart of the girl, and Potter are said to have taken the girl to Passavant Hospital last night for treatment. She died there at 9:20 o'clock and the two Negroes were arrested. Police believe the girl committed suicide, they said.

Kumonchik was held for juvenile authorities and the others were held for court in connection with the theft and stripping of 10 automobiles in the downtown and North Side sections.

PRISONER BEATEN, SENT TO HOSPITA

'INNOCENT,' VICTIM SAYS

Swathed in bandages and guarded by a patrolman, William Macrietti, 36, of 1911 Lookout street, was in Allegheny General Hospital today suffering from lacerations of the scalp and a probable fracture of the left elbow as the result of an alleged "brutal beating for no cause" at the hands of a city patrolman early today at Seventh avenue and Grant street.

Macrietti was on his way to his home shortly after midnight, when he was stopped by Patrolman Joseph Zuby, near William Penn way, and asked where he was going. He says he told the officer, and Zuby retorted, "Don't get sassy."

Macrietti says he told Zuby he was not being "sassy" and the officer took him by the arm and said, "Just for that I will lock you up." Macrietti says he was taken to Seventh avenue and Grant street by the patrolman and a call put in for the police patrol.

While waiting for the patrol, Macrietti says, the officer continued referring to him as "sassy" and he remonstrated, whereupon Zuby grasped him by the throat and, backing him against a building, struck him on the head with his mace, he says. Macrietti defended himself and the beating followed, he says.

Macrietti was ordered removed to the hospital by a sergeant at Central Police Station, where Patrolman Zuby reported Macrietti as drunk and resisting arrest.

Dr. G. R. Kennedy, physician at the hospital, stated it required several stitches to close the gashes in Macrietti's scalp and that the fracture of the arm apparently was caused by a blow from a mace.

AMMONIA LEAKS, RUSH FIREMEN

Delegates from the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Red Cross, to the seventh annual convention of the American National Red Cross, which begins Monday in Washington and continues until and through Thursday, October 6, will leave Pittsburgh tomorrow, some by train, some by automobile.

The delegates are J. Rogers Flannery, vice chairman of the Pittsburgh chapter; Mrs. George Phelps Rose, chairman of the volunteer service of the Pittsburgh chapter; Mrs. George E. Alter, chairman of the hospital volunteer hostess committee; Miss Emelie E. Johnston, executive secretary of the Junior Red Cross; Miss Ldye Kerr, chairman, and Mrs. H. P. Dilworth, vice chairman of the volunteer committee on Braille, and Mrs. Frances Speed Reed, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh chapter.

SUES ESTATE OF CRASH DRIVER

Samuel P. Eagelson, 7311 Ferdinand way, Homewood, has entered two suits in Common Pleas Court, asking damages totaling $100,000 for personal injuries, claiming $50,000 from the City of Pittsburgh and a like amount from the estate of Ralph Van Ormer. The plaintiff alleges he received injuries necessitating amputation of his left arm as a result of an automobile collision with a street car last April 16 in Forbes street. In the accident, Van Ormer, who was driving the auto, was killed and three other men passengers in the machine were injured.

Eagelson claims that at the scene of the wreck, by reason of defective drainage, the street was slippery, and the city negligent in allowing this condition to exist.

Eagelson before the accident was a trap drummer and a theatrical performer. Since the accident, he asserts, he is unable to follow his profession.

JOLTED BY CAR, WOMAN SUES

Catherine Malloy, in a suit against the Pittsburgh Railways Company, claims $20,000 damages for personal injuries sustained last September 16, when, according to the plaintiff, she was a passenger on a street car which made a sudden stop, throwing her to the floor.

Judge James B. Drew yesterday granted a non-suit in the case of Paul Kekoch, a minor, against the Pittsburgh Paige Company. The lad was injured in an automobile accident in Woods Run avenue, April 23, 1923, and had demanded $15,000 for personal injuries.

3 INDICTED IN DYERS' WAR

Charged with plotting to destroy a cleaning and dyeing business whose owners would not join the alleged local "trust," Jack Diamond, 325 Melwood avenue; Louis Cohen, 5628 Callowhill street, and A. J. Roth, 6357 Glennview place, were indicted for conspiracy. They were accused of attempting to wreck the business of the Liberty Cleaners and Dyers, owned by Harry Friedman, Isadore Rosenfelt and William Steinberg, because they refused to join the association.

Beaten by Husband, Says Violinist

"He constantly compelled me to write to my home and relatives for money in sums of $300, $500, $800 and $1,500, and things became so disagreeable I had to leave him and make my own living."

That was what Mrs. Belle C. Bissinger told Judge Nelson McVicar in Common Pleas Court yesterday, reciting her reasons for applying for a divorce from her husband, Bernard S. Bissinger, formerly in the tobacco business.

"He struck me, threw things at me and treated me so badly that I could stand it no longer," said Mrs. Bissinger, who lives at 5728 Munhall road. She was in tears most of the time her counsel, Miss Esther Katten, questioned her. She has a job and two children and testified she had been a violinist, had given lessons and for some time has been making her own living.

A maid employed five years by the Bissingers testified: "Mr. Bissinger threw dishes at her, and I once found her on the floor and he was choking her." Judge McVicar told Miss Katten it was not necessary to call any more witnesses.

WIDOW'S SLAYING STIRS TOWN INTO PASSION

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., Oct. 1.—"The man who murdered this woman is probably within the sound of my voice."

This statement by the Rev. E. C. Good, of Leechburg, startled a crowd packing the Presbyterian Church at Rochester Mills yesterday for the funral of Mrs. Mary McGraw, 73, widow, found slain in the kitchen of her home, a week ago yesterday. In the audience were two men who had been questioned by state police and later relased.

Feeling ovr the murder of the aged woman, believed to have been slain for pension money, mistakenly supposed to have ben kept at her home, was intensifid at the services. One thousand persons from this district attended, most of them being unable to gain admittance to the church.

A hatchet with which the murder is thought to have been committed was found by state police in the ashpan of the kitchen stove of the home where Mrs. McGraw lived with her brother, David Hefflick. The handle was practically burned off.

The aged woman had been receiving a pension since the death of her husband 33 years ago, and had accumulated a considerable sum. Most of this she kept in a Punxsutawney bank.

Slain as she was preparing the noonday meal, the woman's body was found by her brother. Two emptyy pocketbooks belonging to Mrs. McGraw were found in bushes near the house.

AUTOISTS HIT 2, SPEED AWAY

Hit and run drivers added two more victims to the list last night. Elizabeth Zwiener, 16, of 429 Flowers avenue, suffered bruises about the head and body when knocked down by a truck at Progress and Chestnut streets. Roy Clark, 19, of 1614 Columbus avenue, was cut about the head and bruised about the body when a touring car containing four Negroes knocked him down at Beaver avenue and Juniata street.

IDENTITY OF MAN KILLED BY P. R. R. TRAIN SOUGHT

Identification was being sought at the morgue today of an unidentified white man, aged about 25, found dead on the right of way of the Pennsylvania Railroad near Grant avenue, Duquesne, late last night, after he had been struck by a train. A leather bill fold containing the letters "R. J." was found in his clothing.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1.

ANY has picked off one of the story plums of the year "Wild Geese," written by Martha Ostenso, a Washing- on school marm, and incidentally the best seller of 1925. a little worried, to tell the truth, when I heard "Wild " was to be filmed by this company, for I feared the worst, an I thought a lot of unknown people would be rushed into cast.

t tell us about Clara Bow, er." Yes, I get plenty of letters g for information about the little hild whose flapperish ways and cative smile have won her an e place in the affections of the of the country. Well, children, s next picture is titled "Get Your Man." Sounds exactly like the title of a Northwest mounted police "drammer." Buddy Rogers, in this case, is her man. Dorothy Arzner will direct. Let's hope this isn't the season when Clara springs a new engagement, for, if she is in a getting-engaged mood, Buddy, who is 21, may not be immune to her charms.

You can scarcely blame Claire Windsor for accepting an offer to play one of the leading roles in "The Man who Laughed." Any chance to play opposite Conrad Veidt is enough to persuade any girl who wants to succeed as an actress to accept such an offer. Mr. Veidt knows his craft and his enthusiasm is a help to the players who are associated with him. Mary Philbin has the feminine lead and Stuart Holmes, Brandon Hurst, Sam DeGrasse and George Seigmann complete the cast. Paul Leni, who directed "The Cat and Canary," which, by the way, won many favorable criticisms in New York when it opened at the Colony, will direct and Paul Kohner will supervise.

"A Girl in Every Port." Yes, you would say it meant a sailor. But isn't it a wow of a title? Victor McLaglen has six leading women in "A Girl in Every Port," each one representing an episode in his life. Howard Hawks, who will guide the destinies of this McLaglen drama, is already working it out, and if it is as good as its title, it should be a money-maker all right. I hope I'm not getting mercenary.

The 17-year-old daughter of Mrs. Antonio Moreno will finish her education in a most delightful manner. Next week, accompanied by her mother, she will go to New York and sail on a trip around the world on a boat that specializes in educating young people in a round-the-world college course. I can think of nothing more delightful than going to school under conditions of this sort.

Patsy Ruth Miller, who gave all of her friends, to say nothing of her family, the fright of their lives by contracting influenza, is better. F. B. O. held up work on "The Red Riders of Canada" until Patsy was able to leave her bed and return to the set. She is now back on the job—a little weak, to be sure, but delighted that the picture was held pending her recovery.

One of our most conscientious young players is Grace Gordon, a niece of Grace Kingsley, who writes of the film folk. Miss Gordon has just finished a bit in "The Serenade," Adolphe Menjou's last picture, and they tell me at Paramount her work is eminently satisfactory.

Conqueror -:- Prisoner's Found Guilty -:- 'At a Girl

GERTRUDE EDERLE, first to make the English Channel bow to a woman, is coming to Pittsburgh later this month in an aquatic act. The Penn has booked Trudy and her company.

BEN B. LINDSAY visited Mary Pickford's court scene for Mary's picture, "My Best Girl." He was put on the bench, just so he would feel at home, and the judge felt so business-like that he promptly sentenced Miss Pickford and her staff, Sam Taylor, director; Charles Rosher, cameraman; Tim Whalen and Clarence Hennecke, to keep on working.

LAURA LA PLANTE follows the advice of moralists to look up instead of down, so she gets a nice little merit card. Ten more merits—then a larger card. Maybe she'll get one for "Silk Stockings," in Aldine soon.

MIDNIGHT SHOW IN SHERIDAN

Under the auspices of the Theater Managers' Association of Pittsburgh, a testimonial midnight show is to be given in Sheridan Square Theater, East End, Friday, October 14. The proceeds of the performance will go for the benefit of the sick and death fund of the Stage Employes' and Motion Picture Operators' Union, Locals Nos. 3 and 171, of Pittsburgh. Representing the stage employes, the benefit is being handled by a committee comprising Charles Nolte, chairman; W. H. Hunziker, Mark R. Lewis and P. J. Toner. The motion picture operators have as their chairman Roger McKelvey; secretary, Tom Schwantz, and treasurer, Art Williams.

The Harris Amusement Company has volunteered the use of the Sheridan Square and its attaches for the fund, and through the good offices of the Theater Managers' Association of Pittsburgh, actors from all the theaters and all the shows in the city that week will participate.

The performance will begin at 11:45 o'clock, immediately following the regular evening show in the Sheridan Square, and will conclude not later than 2:15 a. m. Reserved seats, it is announced, may be had for 50 or 75 cents.

Film Comedian Knows His Figures

The movies have brought into their folds, men and women from every walk of life. Royalty's names have appeared on title sheets of films, great athletes, musicians and others in the public limelight have "fallen" from time to time for the clicking cameras and the director's megaphone instructions. Louis Wolheim, not so many years ago, was a professor of mathematics in an Eastern college. Today he is on the road to heights, via the silver sheet, as a character comedian. Wolheim's initial screen presentation is "Two Arabian Knights."

Prior to his entry in films, Wolheim appeared on the stage in "The Hairy Ape," and as Capt. Flagg in the footlight offering of "What Price Glory."

Mystery Thriller and Tune Play Coming

Beginning Monday evening, the new mystery comedy, "Out of the Night," will appear in the Nixon. This play was written by Harold Hutchinson and Margery Williams. James Spottswood, Mary Loane and Herbert Haywood have the roles.

The world-success of "Blossom Time" will soon be enhanced by the production of operetta in Tokio, Japan. Pittsburgh will have another opportunity to see and hear it in the Alvin next week.

The final performance of "The Monster," the mystery play in which the George Sharp Production Stock Company is appearing in the Pitt, will be played this evening. Next week will bring the engagement to a close with a comedy, "Just Married."

The leading attraction booked for the Keith-Albee program in the Davis next week is Lew Hearn, assisted by Ethel Grey, in a comedy skit, "When Men Leave Home."

The hidden voice in the Penn organ loft that helps beautify the Cavalleria Rusticana overture belongs to James Comoroda, Pittsburgh soloist, of the Amerita orchestra.

Mrs. Davis, who is chairman of program, outlined the year's program of study on Pennsylvania and called attention to a quiz printed on a back page of the year books. These questions are to be put to the members without warning at various meetings in order to test their knowledge of Pennsylvania history. Mrs. W. S. Fulton, Mrs. Sherman Massingham, Mrs. Carl F. Coslowksy, Mrs. C. C. Moyar, other past presidents, spoke. All received with Mrs. Robb prior to the program and were seated in a semicircle at the front of the auditorium during the program. Mrs. D. S. Taylor introduced Mrs. Alberta Murray Baker, who sang several contralto solos, and Mrs. Payton Hisson, who contributed violin numbers, both accompanied by Mrs. Fred Martin. Mrs. G. W. Hill and her social committee produced a birthday cake which Mrs. Robb cut, at the same time blowing out the 21 candles. Mrs. Robb announced that Mrs. T. S. Loring, a valuable member who has served well in several capacities, has been asked to compile a history of the Crafton organization. A cantata for the benefit of the building fund will be given the nights of November 3 and 4 in the high school.

CHURCH TO VOTE ON PASTOR

Following the 11 a. m. service of the newly merged Mt. Zion and Luther Memorial Lutheran congregations Sunday at the church in South Evaline street, a congregational meeting will be held to vote on calling a pastor. The Rev. Dr. J. Kent Itizer will conduct the service and the Rev. Dr. David E. Maxwell will preach.

At the evening service, should a decision be reached, the new pastor will be installed and the Rev. Dr. Ellis B. Burgess, president of the Pittsburgh Synod, will speak.

VOLUNTEERS TO START DRIVE

A drive to raise funds for the continuance of welfare work among children will be started Sunday by the Volunteers of America. "Expansion Sunday" will be observed throughout Western Pennsylvania. J. Kelly Spangler will be the principal speaker at the downtown mission Sunday night, speaking on "Religion and Business." Maj. Frank H. Wise and Mrs. Wise will head a delegation of Pittsburghers who are going to Altoona for meetings there.

WILL HOLD RECEPTION FOR LUTHERAN STUDENTS

A reception for Lutheran students in Pittsburgh will be held Tuesday night in the Lutheran Student House, Bayard and Dithridge streets. Invitations have been sent to more than 500 students at the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Institute of Technology and the Pennsylvania College for Women. Addresses of welcome will be made by the pastors of several Lutheran churches in Pittsburgh.

STATE ENDEAVOR HEAD TO SPEAK AT INGRAM

W. C. McClintock, state president of the Christian Endeavor, will be the principal speaker at the first of a series of three Christian Endeavor conferences to be held Thursday in the Ingram Presbyterian Church by the Chartiers Branch. He will be one of several speakers who will lead discusions, following a supper in the church at 6:15 o'clock.

DENNY M. E. CHURCH HOLDS 60TH RALLY

A special service will be held Sunday morning in the Denny Methodist Episcopal Church, Thirty-fourth street, marking the sixtieth annual rally and home day for the active and former members of the congregation. Both the children and adult choirs will sing and a special sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Albert G. Curry.

SALVATION ARMY TO HEAR DIVISION HEAD

Harvest Home services will be conducted Sunday by Col. Joseph Atkinson, divisional commander of the Salvation Army, in the army headquarters building, Second avenue. He will speak in the morning and again in the evening, talking on "Thanksgiving for a Prosperous Year and Bountiful Harvest."

WILL PREACH ON THE 12 APOSTLES

A series of Sunday evening sermons based on the lives of the 12 apostles will be started Sunday night by the Rev. Dr. A. J. Holl, pastor of the First Lutheran Church, Grant street. The subject of the first sermon will be "Andrew-The Man Interested in his Brother."

REV. NEVINS PLANS SPECIAL SERMONS

A series of sermons on Jesus Christ and how the average person with no knowledge of theology is to think about him will be started Sunday night in the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church by the Rev. Clyde L. Nevins, pastor. His first sermon will deal with "Jesus, the Man."

REV. EWERS TO OPEN FIFTH FORUM

The Rev. John Ray Ewers of the East End Christian Church will open his fifth season of the open church forum Sunday night following the regular service. The Sunday evening sermon will be "Is Religion Slipping?" After the service, Dr. Ewers will answer questions from the floor for one-half hour.

The graduating class of nurses of the Columbia Hospital will attend church in a body Sunday night in the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church, Fifth and Penn avenues. The Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church will deliver a special sermon. At the morning service the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Percival H. Barker, pastor.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Lutheran Church will observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the present building at special services Sunday morning and evening. The services also will mark the sixteenth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Henry P. Eckhardt. Sunday morning Dr. Eckhardt will preach on "Reconsecration." At night his subject will be "The Old Home and the First Mistake."

A special rosary procession will be held Sunday night in the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Shady avenue. The ceremony will consist of a procession of the entire congregation through the aisles of the church, reciting the rosary. The sermon of the evening will be preached by the Rev. Carl H. Demorest. There will be a musical program by the male choir.

FOURTH LESSON

Copyright, 1927, by W. Otto Miessner

Surely you will agree that you have learned a lot about Music in three short lessons and in only three weeks of practice. You can play three pieces:

MAGIC MUSIC TO A RIVER
LITTLE WOODEN SHOES

You understand quite a little about the five elements of which Music consists:

RHYTHM—The "go" of the tune.
MELODY—The "tones" to the tune.
HARMONY—The "chords" for the tune.
FORM—The "design" in the tune.
MOOD—The "feeling" from the tune.

We have said nothing about "Mood" but I am sure you get a different feeling from each of the tunes you have learned to play. The words, the time and the tune together, should guide you in giving the proper expression to the Mood.

You have also learned many musical terms, names and signs:

Terms	Names	Signs
Melody	Tones	Staff
Motif	Fingers	Treble Clef
Phrase	Keys	Bass Clef
Section	Key Finder	Sharp
Period	Letter-names	Flat
Rhythm	Notes	Half note
Measure	Chords	Quarter note
Accent	Chord names	Eighth note
Count	Chord-Finder	Bar
Transpose	Major	D. C.
Measure sign	Scale	Fine

Since I probably left out some terms, names or signs, you might as well read again the first three lessons and see how many you can add to my list. Why do you need to know these facts? Because we must have names for things or ideas:

(a) To understand each other more clearly.
(b) To save time in thinking, talking or writing about Music.

Furthermore, you should review the playing of all three pieces. Practice only a few minutes at a time, several times a day. Then you will never tire of playing the piano. It is very important that you should master the three chords, so you can move instantly from one chord to another.

You will discover these three chords over and over again, in every new piece you will learn. Moreover, you will hear them many times in every piece of Music that was ever written! The Tonic, Sub-Dominant, and Dominant Chords are the very foundation of all Harmony!

Therefore, let us review the three chords:

Chords		I				IV				V				I
Tones	Do	Mi	So	—	Do	Fa	La	—	Ti	Fa	So	—	Do	Mi	So	—
In F—	F	A	C	—	F	B♭	D	—	E	B♭	C	—	F	A	C	—
In G—	G	B	D	—	G	C	E	—	F♯	C	D	—	G	B	D	—

I gave you credit for being unusually bright and alert, when I expected you, in the third lesson, to do all of these things:

1—Learn the chords I and V to "Magic Music."
2—Play the chords to "Magic Music" and "To a River."
3—Transpose both pieces to the Key of G.
4—Learn the melody, "Little Wooden Shoes."
5—Learn the IV chord, Do, Fa, La, in F and G.

If you have had any difficulty, you can overcome it by doing only one thing at a time!

One hand at a time!
One phrase at a time!

How to Study

Hereafter, you must train yourself to study so that you will gain the greatest power, skill and joy from every hour you give to Music.

1—Train Your Ears

Train your ears to know the difference between the ideas or thoughts in Music, as expressed in

Rhythmic figures, motifs and phrases.
Melodic figures, motifs and phrases.
Harmonic motifs (at least two chords).

You can enjoy Music, more and more, as you know exactly what is going on. Most people listen to Music as to a strange foreign language. You can learn to listen intelligently if you will make the effort. It will add greatly to your joy in Music.

Ask someone in your own family, or a friend, to drum, sing or play these motifs from the pieces. Then you tell what they are. You can make this a most interesting "guessing game," with "points" for each item guessed or missed.

2—Train Your Hands

As before, let someone dictate, like this:

Rhythm

Drum: Four quarters.
Drum: Two quarters, one half.
Drum: Four eighths, two quarters.
Drum: Four eighths, one half.
Drum: One quarter, two eighths, two quarters.

Melody

Play, in G:

Do Re Mi Fa
Do Re Mi Do
So Mi So —
Mi Do Mi —
So Fa Mi Re Do —
So So Fa Mi —

Harmony

Play, in F: Chords

V — I
I — IV
IV — I
IV — V

3—Train Your Mind

Write, from memory, all the musical terms, names and signs given in the list near the beginning of this lesson.

4—Train Your Eyes

This is most important if you are to learn to read Music quickly and fluently. Most pupils can see only one note at a time. You can learn to see whole groups of notes. You have learned that notes, like letters, make meaning, or sense, only when you think of them in groups. These musical ideas, phrases, motifs and figures should be seen by the eye at a glance. Then you can read faster and play smoother. Therefore, train your eyes, by 1—Locating familiar rhythmic and melodic motifs in the Music. Frame them between the two index fingers.

2—Copy the motifs on 3x5 cards. Let a friend hold up card after card while you take one glance, then play it.

3—Copy also on 3x5 cards from the Music the Chords, I, IV and V, one chord on each card. Add to this list, these chords in the treble and bass clefs in each new key, just as you find them printed in the Music. This practice will make you able to know instantly each chord in each key the moment you see it.

I earnestly hope that you will follow this advice. You can become skillful only through practice. This does not mean that your practice must become dry or uninteresting. It will interest you if you practice on the parts that are actually in your pieces. You will find yourself playing more easily and more musically, day by day.

Evening Song

Now, you are going to have a pleasant surprise! If you have done as I suggested, you will find yourself able to play "Evening Song" in less than half the time it took to learn your first three pieces! Why?

1—The key of G is familiar to you.
2—The R. H. Melody uses familiar tones.
3—Two of the R. H. chords are familiar.

There are only three new things to learn:

1—Feel the time in three-quarter measure.
2—Give the dotted half three beats.
3—Learn the V chord with Re instead of Ti.

First, review, by playing "Little Wooden Shoes" through just once. This will help you to recall the melody tones and the L. H. chords I and V in the Key of G.

As before, learn to feel the time by speaking the words of the poem in time while you tap with your right foot. Notice that the upper number of the measure-sign (3) tells you that there are three counts or beats in each measure. The lower number (4) means that each quarter note gets one count. Then each half note gets two counts and each dotted half (the dot is after the note) gets three counts.

This is the way it goes, quite slowly:

Feel the Time

Count—	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3
Tap—	Heel	Toe	Toe	Heel	Toe	Toe	Heel	Toe	Toe	Heel	Toe	Toe
Words (1)	Now	—	the	sun	—	is	sink	ing	to	rest	—	—
(2)	Ev'	—	ry	bird	—	is	seek	ing	its	nest	—	—
(3)	Soon	—	the	stars	—	will	peep	from	the	sky	—	—
(4)	Tall	clock	tow'r	strikes	the	hour	bed	time	is	nigh	—	—

Right Hand Melody

First practice the Melody, phrase by phrase. To save space the chords are also included, but you should practice them separately.

FIRST PHRASE

Count—	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3
Tones—	Do	—	Do	Mi	—	Mi	Re	Do	Re	Do	—	—
L. H. Chords—	I	—	—	I	—	—	V	—	—	I	—	—

SECOND PHRASE

Count—	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3
R. H. Tones—	Mi	—	Mi	So	—	So	Fa	Mi	Fa	Mi	—	—
L. H. Chords—	I	—	—	I	—	—	V	—	—	I	—	—

THIRD PHRASE

Count—	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3
R. H. Tones—	Re	—	Re	Fa	—	Fa	Re	Mi	Fa	So	—	—
L. H. Chords—	V	—	—	V	—	—	V	—	—	I	—	—
	(Ti)			(Re)			(Ti)

FOURTH PHRASE

Count—	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3	1	2	3
R. H. Tones—	Fa	Mi	Re	Mi	Re	Do	Re	Mi	Re	Do	—	—
L. H. Chords—	V	—	—	I	—	—	V	—	—	I	—	—

Practice the Chords

First, study the above diagram of the chords, phrase by phrase, naming each chord.

1—	I	I	V	I
2—	I	I	V	I
3—	V	*V	V	I
4—	V	I	V	I

*Notice this V chord Plays Re instead of Ti.

Second, play each chord-phrase with L. H. separately, counting one, two, three for each chord.

(a) On the Table
(b) On the Key Board.
(c) At the Piano.

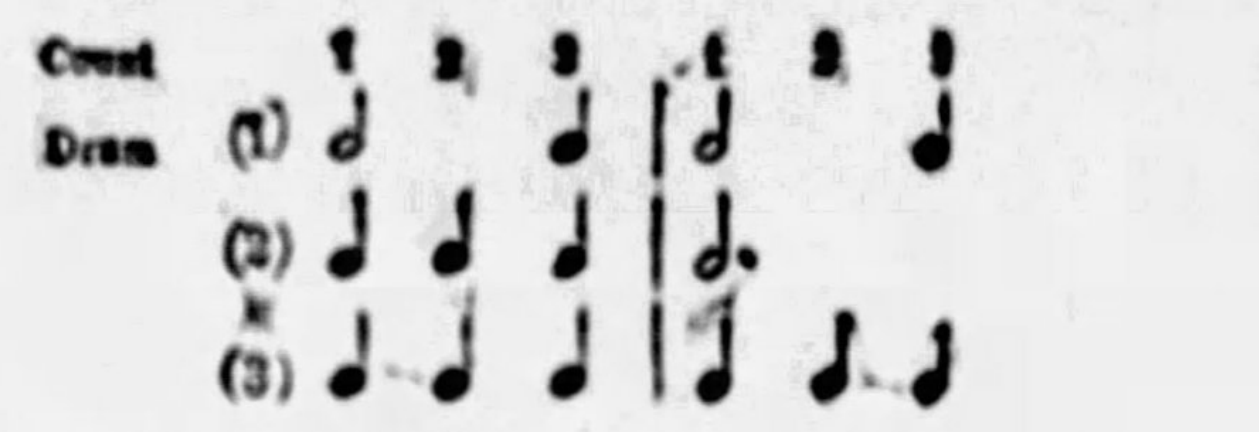
Third, both hands together.

(a) Drum the rhythm of the melody with the R. H. while the L. H. drums the three-count chords.
(b) Repeat on the Key Board.
(c) Repeat at the Piano.

Fourth, play while following the notes.

(a) R. H. Melody.
(b) L. H. Chords.
(c) Both hands together.

Locate, in the printed piece, each of the following rhythmic groups:



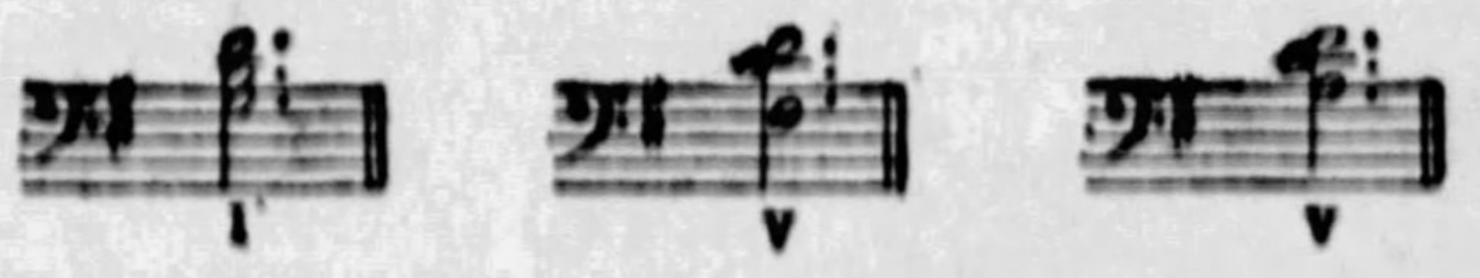
How many times did you find the above?

Motif 1 .... 2 .... 3 ....

Locate the notes of the following melodic figures in the printed piece:

Re	Do	Re	Mi	Re	Do
Re	Mi	Re	Re	Mi	Fa
Fa	Mi	Fa	Fa	Mi	Re

How many times did you find these chords?



Remember, it is not the mere playing of pieces that increases your knowledge or your skill; it is your study and mastery of the details, the elements, which you will find repeated in all Music.

For instance, "Suwanee River" needs only the three chords you already! You might try humming or whistling this tune, while you cide which chords to use, and when to play them.

Making Tunes of Your Own!

In one of the later lessons I shall try to show you how to put m and figures together to "make up" tunes of your own. Next week will have a little melody that I "made up" for you, called "Lady Mo With practice, you may even make up a better tune!

"Lady Moon" has not a single new or unfamiliar element in it, the fore, I shall expect you to learn it mostly by yourself! That will be a achievement for the members of The Melody Way Club!

The Most Brilliant Social Asset Is the Ability to Play the Piano

Acquire the ability to play the piano and you will never lack friends. For the greatest of all gifts will be yours—the ability to entertain, to bring pleasure, to comfort, and to inspire with music. Such a man or woman is always popular, always sought after, whether his music be that of the great classics or the foot-itching rhythm of today's jazz.

Every child deserves the privilege of a piano education. When you give this knowledge to your children, you provide them with a permanent source of attraction and lay the foundation of undying happiness.

Today's pianos are made to fit every type of room and every size of purse—grand pianos, baby grands, uprights, and player pianos with their repertoire of the world's greatest music.

Stop in at the show rooms of these piano merchants, and learn how easy and inexpensive it is to give your family this wealth of happiness and culture—a piano.

URKE MURDER IS ECHOED IN COURT SUIT

An echo of an unsolved murder mystery in Pittsburgh was heard in Supreme Court yesterday when attorneys representing John S. Wilson argued an appeal from a decree of distribution made by the Orphans Court in the estate of Martin Burke, in which decree Wilson's claim for upwards of $25,000 was disallowed.

Burke, local politician and bootlegger, was shot to death on Sunday evening, January 14, 1923, by parties unknown when he came to the front door of his house in answer to a ring at the bell.

The claim of Wilson against the estate involves an alleged verbal contract entered into between Burke and Wilson in August or September, 1922, wherein Burke leased certain of Wilson's property located at 5921 and 5923 Penn avenue, East Liberty, for the purpose of conducting a restaurant and cafeteria after alterations were made.

Wilson alleged that at the time of Burke's death 70 per cent of the alterations had been completed and Burke had contributed $4,700 to the cost of the same, the total cost of the alterations which Wilson completed after Burke's death amounting to $25,678.28.

After the death of Burke, these claims were made to the estate by Wilson but were refused by Judge Thomas Trimble in the decree handed down on February 28, 1927, on the ground that Wilson had not proved his claim.

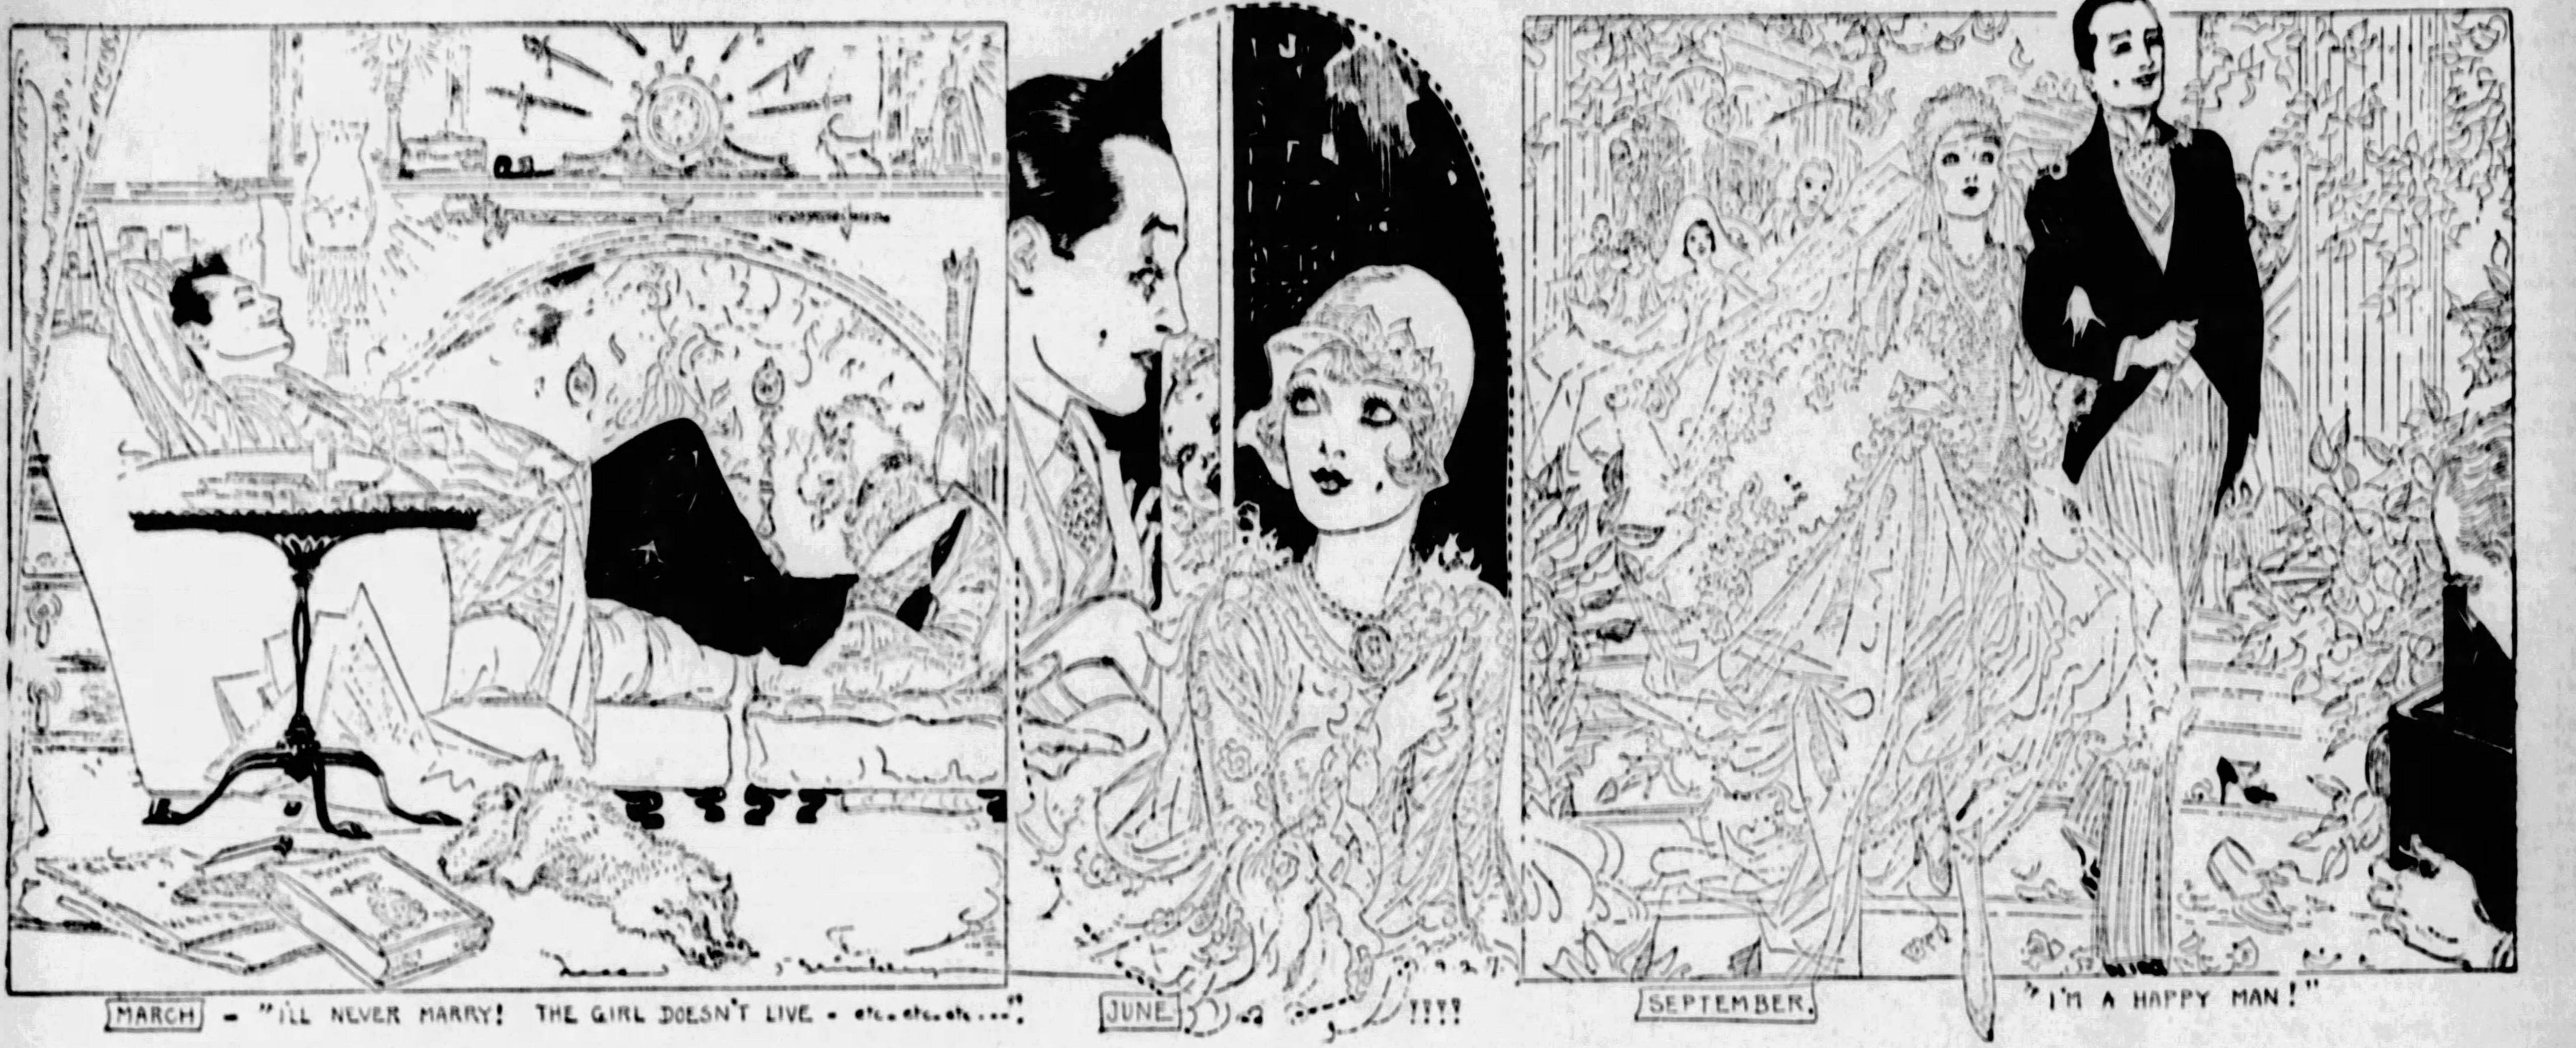
THE FALL OF A FIRM YOUNG MAN

Drawn by
NELL BRINKLEY



MARCH - "I'LL NEVER MARRY! THE GIRL DOESN'T LIVE - etc. etc. etc...!"
JUNE
SEPTEMBER
"I'M A HAPPY MAN!"

THERE was once a very firm young man. He always knew just what he was going to do about things, and just how he was going to do it. He had a decided walk—and decided about life and work and love. And he came to the pub- pinion that he was going to be a bachelor for all his days! nn of the Four Winds of Heaven that stands on the Great he announced it. Why should he court discontent, when he was SO contented? Why should he get discomfort, when he was SO comfortable? Everything in his world he could lay where he wanted to lay it. He could have his slippers on the mantelpiece if he wanted to; and his books in the pantry. But he didn't. Oh, really, his house was better ordered than if a girl came into it with her "feminine touches." The girl didn't live that could get him now, after he had lived as long as this!

And Cupid snickered so plainly that everyone in the Inn of the Four Winds stopped eating and smoking and drinking, and said, "WHAT was that?" And the young with the wild, free heart thought he heard something, too. And then—he held the door open one night for a perfectly strange girl in a passage of the Inn of the Four Winds on the Great Highway! She looked at him.

In three months the determined young bachelor walked down the white steps of the strange girl's home in afternoon wedding clothes with a faery of white mist on his arm. And he told the photographer that he was "a happy man!" And everyone said he looked it! And do you know—he doesn't remember any of the things that he said in the first chapter? He says he always meant to marry when the right girl came along—it's the only way for a man to live happily on the Great Highway!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

ashfulness Problems By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IN this age of self-assurance and flamboyant advertisement, it may seem questionable whether the quality of bashfulness any longer exists. Girls sometimes write me asking rather wistfully whether there are any bashful men. The word "flapper," like the word "shiek," suggests an extreme of self-confidence the opposite of bashful

A an who dreams of a mure, quiet girl as his rt and wife, may find it discover her because her reness and shyness cause her avoid being conspicuous, ereas her flapper friends unsitatingly take the center of the stage.

It is also true that the quiet, bashful young man keeps in the background while the shiek and "go-getter" more often achieve pularity. But a girl who is interested will soon discover any ovable qualities of mind and temperament desipte this shy, even stiff manner.

Even though bashfulness implies a certain timidity or lack of courage, is it not, all things considered, a fault that leans to virtue's side? How charming to eet a man or young woman o is not filled with self-im- tance! Moreover, a person is not too sure of his own erfection, has an open mind and ready for improvement. My suggestion is, girls, beware of the show-off, the shick and braggadocio in choosing friends. They are insincere and undependable. Encourage the shy young man to overcome his bashfulness, by putting him at ease, and making him feel at home. Draw him out, try to bring out his interesting qualities and best characteristics. You may find depths of character and unassuming fineness of disposition of which you did not dream. He may be full of fun and quiet humor and the best of company when you get to know and understand him.

In this way your bashful friend may grow to be your dearest friend of all. And you may be sure that if he loves you he will, in time, find courage to tell you so and ask you to be his wife.

The bashful girl also, when she banishes her shyness to some degree through genuine interest in others, may make the sweetest and dearest comrade, fiance and wife.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

OH! THOSE MARRIAGE BLUES!

THERE are ultra-marine moments when even the most happily married man or women is attacked with that "If-I-hadn't-married" feeling.

Usually, after a quarrel, or on a dreamy moonlight evening, or when the furnace breaks down, or along in the spring when the wedding invitations and the bills for the plumbing and painting begin to come in, and you need a tonic, and the office or the housework leaves you all frazzled out.

* * *

Do you think wistfully—if you are a man—of the glittering new car you might have bought with the money you just paid out for insurance and the doctor's bills and the interest on the mortgage?

HELEN ROWLAND

Do you wonder "what the boys are doing now" while you are discussing the grocery bills or mending the dining-room clock or putting up the screens?

Do you think regretfully of the Big Chance you might have taken in Wall Street if you had had nobody dependent on you for the rent—or the pretty girl with whom you might be strolling in the moonlight or dancing at the country clubs at this romantic spring moment?

* * *

Then, alas, you have the "If-I-hadn't-marrieds!"

Do you think enviously—if you are a woman—of your lucky (?) unshackled women friends who are planning trips to Europe or getting out a new book or in the throes and thrills of a new spring love affair?

* * *

Do you dream, sometimes, of the brilliant "career" you might have had, the applause and tributes and pretty clothes, if you had "used your talents," gone on the stage or tried writing, instead of just being "somebody's wife?"

If you hadn't married you might be doing all these things!

Because there are just three kinds of people in the world—those who wish they could marry, those who wish they hadn't married, and those who wish they had married!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Benefits of Cutting Out Meat Two Days a Week

A FEW days ago I met an old friend who looked unusually thin. When I asked if he was dieting, he said he was, on the advice of his doctor.

Believing it would be a good thing to see how he checked up physically, he had submitted to careful physical examination. Nothing to worry about was found, but the physician said the blood pressure was a bit too high.

The advice the doctor gave my friend was to go without meat two days a week, and on these days to live on vegetables and fruits.

That advice is good for you and good for me. It isn't good just because it is recommended to give up any particular article of food, but because it is good for each of us to give the digestive and eliminative systems a rest at regular intervals.

We overwork our bodies and all our organs. We overwork our minds. Anything to lighten the load is desirable.

The other day at a bankers' convention one of the speakers made what appears to me as a most profitable address. Among other things he said: "The fellow who can hold his sides and laugh once in a while when the situation warrants it wins." That's splendid! One of the troubles with us is that we take ourselves too seriously. . . . We don't know how or when to relax, to smile or to laugh. My, how true this is!

At the table, too, we take ourselves too seriously. We think we must go through with every course. No matter whether we want it or not, for etiquette's sake or some other equally silly reason, we eat and eat and eat—far more than we want or need.

I confess I gaze in amazement upon some diners. They act as if they had paid $18 for the meal and must eat it to the last crumb.

Did you ever sit at a table with a diner of this sort when you had a train to catch? If you ever did, you know exactly how a cultivated and practiced appetite can be trained to so perfect a state of performance that it won't miss a bit, even of microscopical size.

We take our appetites and ourselves too seriously. Let's poke fun at both and see if we are not better men. Eat less every day, laugh more every day, relax a lot every day.

Get up from the table with some portion of your appetite unsatisfied. At the end of an hour, instead of feeling all swollen up and too full for usefulness, you will feel satisfied, frisky and ready for your business whatever it is.

It is good training to begin with two days a week of what will seem like semi-fasting. When you get through with this and thoroughly used to it, you will eat less every day. Then you will be on the way to perfect health and long life.

Answers to Health Queries

A. R. Q.—What causes an itching rash all over the body, causing intense itching, especially at night? The child is healthy otherwise.

A.—This condition may be due to hives or eczema. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.

M. M. R. Q.—What is the cause of varicose veins and what will help them?

2.—Can anemia be cured?

3.—My digestion is poor and I get a pain in my heart when I lie on the left side. Would the poor digestion be responsible?

A.—Undue exertion is the usual cause, such as long standing, for instance. Bandaging and wearing an elastic stocking during the daytime and keeping off the feet as much as possible will help to clear up the trouble.

2.—If it has not progressed too far, careful living and care will bring about a cure. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat the question.

3.—The pain is no doubt due to gases, due to your poor digestion. Watch your diet and correct constipation. For further partic lars send a self-addres stamped envelope and repeat yo question.

For the Lovelorn

Knot-Loved

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am coming to you to tell you that my husband (sorry to say) says there is no such thing as love. I got married to him when I was 17 years old and I thought that I was madly in love with him, but found out soon after we were married that I wasn't. He is a regular mummy. He doesn't believe in kissing me, he says kissing is all bunk. He has gone as long as two weeks without kissing me. I have been married to him for a little over seven years. It has been seven years of sorrow to me, as I am of a loving type, ready for a good time. I have three fine boys and if it weren't for my boys I believe I would be gone long ago. I want love, not sorrow and work, as he gives me. Now, Miss Gale, would you blame me if ever I broke loose and went out with someone else who is willing to show me a good time? I have never done a wrong thing before or after my marriage. He was the first man to ever kiss me. I have had many chances to go out, but I have always refused. But now I am on the verge of going out. What would you advise me to do?

KNOT-LOVED.

If for no other reason refrain from doing anything like that for your boys' sake. You surely wouldn't want to have them ever feel ashamed of their mother, would you? It is hard, of course, but you have a responsibility toward your ons that comes before everything else.

Ford and General Motors Close-Up; Investors Beware!

By B. C. FORBES

HENRY FORD indicated to me that he intends to stick to his old field, namely, supplying the lowest-priced automobile and has no intention of making any medium-priced car. I sensed, however, that he would very vigorously fight any competition which might be offered in his particular field. Now that President Sloan announces that General Motors doesn't propose to wage "war" on Ford, everything should proceed harmoniously.

At the same time, I understand that General Motors is prepared to meet any drastic price-cutting should Ford name an unreasonably low figure for his new car. If the relative price positions of the Ford and the Chevrolet cars be maintained, well and good. But should Ford seek to steal a march by slashing his price mercilessly with a view to smothering completely all competition—and depending upon profits from parts to make his money—the Chevrolet price unquestionably would be lowered accordingly.

Either that or General Motors would bring out an entirely new car in the Ford price class. Indeed, I have heard that General Motors has conducted experiments in building a very low-priced car and has found that it can be done without loss.

The hope, the expectation, however, is that the former price relationships will continue. They proved profitable for Ford, profitable for Chevrolet and satisfactory to the public.

PIERRE DU PONT, addressing a large gathering of General Motors men, paid a handsome tribute to Henry Ford months ago when there was a disposition in certain quarters to gloat over the severe shrinkage in Ford sales. Mr. du Pont emphasized that every individual in the automobile industry owed Henry Ford a tremendous debt of gratitude for having contributed more than any other human being to develop the widespread use of automobiles. He declared in unmistakable language that neither he nor any other responsible General Motors executive, was in the remotest degree eager to see the Ford enterprise decay. And now President Sloan has voiced similar sentiments.

Every now and again you read that war to the knife is brewing between this and the next automobile company. Could you see the friendly hobnobbing of automobile "rivals," including jolly card games on Detroit-New York trains, you would get a more accurate idea of the truth.

Perhaps you don't know that General Motors accessory plants sell enormous quantities of parts to other manufacturers. Not only so, but the corporation charges these competitors exactly the same price it charges its own individual companies, such as Buick, Pontiac, Chevrolet, etc. I understand that Ford has been numbered among such customers.

Industrial wars rarely benefit the public in the long run. They are good things to avoid.

THE importance of having a financially-trained man as president of a very large enterprise is becoming more and more recognized. The latest illustration is the selection of H. Hough as president of Goodrich. Mr. Hough for years was comptroller before his ability won him a vice presidency and now has won him the presidency. This 60-year-old enterprise has had only three presidents.

STOCKS lately have demonstrated that they can fall as well as rise.

DON'T blindly rush in to buy shares of so-called "investment trusts." Merely giving a project that name doesn't make it a trustworthy investment. In principle, investment trusts are sound, and as conducted by Scottish and English bankers, they have proved attractive and profitable to investors.

But some of those launched here look suspicious. They suggest that promoters have been much more interested in feathering their own nests than in providing desirable investments for the public. Some have all the earmarks of "blind pools," meaning that the investor hands over his money to be handled—speculated with—as the promoters may see fit. The various investigations to be undertaken by governmental authorities are likely to reveal these unpleasant facts.

Of course, many thoroughly meritorious investment trusts have been organized. Bankers and others of unimpeachable character have sponsored this worthy method of employing investors' funds. And though it is true that practically all recent concerns have had to pay high prices for their securities, the results should prove satisfactory.

But investors should investigate before they invest even in investment trusts.

Pittsburgh Plate Sells Off on Local Board

Mixed price movements were noted on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short session today with the turnover showing no change from the moderate totals of the past three days. Widest movement was a break of 4 points in Pittsburgh Plate Glass, which sold down to 221 as against the last previous sale at 225.

The company recently declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share, omitting the $5 extra, which had been paid heretofore with the October quarterly, and this circumstance has occasioned mild liquidation in the shares. There has been no heavy selling, however, and friends of the company point to its dominating position in the plate glass industry and express confidence that present conditions are only temporary. Foreign competition has hurt domestic glass to some extent over the past year or so, but leaders of the business may be looked to meet this situation satisfactorily.

Consolidated Ice preferred moved up a point this morning, a two-point gain for the week, in response to declaration of two dividends on the issue. The payments were assumed to be on account of arrears, which, up to July, amounted to 51 per cent, or $25.50 on the stock, which is a 6 per cent cumulative issue. The dividends declared yesterday consist of two payments of 75 cents each. Similar payments were ordered at this time last year.

First National Bank at Pittsburgh recovered the $3 dividend deducted yesterday when a block of five shares sold today at 212, unchanged from the last previous sale early in the week.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Baker on Mine Injunction.

President Baker of Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company, referring to decision of Federal Court against the mine union, stated: "It will have a splendid effect in assisting the whole Pittsburgh district in operating its mines without interference. Price of coal is very low and there does not seem to be any particular reason for an immediate advance because of great volume being mined here and other districts."

Continental Oil Financing.

Denver reports state that the Continental Oil Company has made arrangements through a group of New York bankers for additional financing to the extent of $10,000,000. It is believed the financing will be in the form of a bond issue.

Tidewater Associated.

The Tidewater Associated Oil Company has sold to Blair & Co. an issue of $1,500,000 5 per cent one-year Marine Equipment trust notes. No public offering is likely as it is believed the entire issue will be taken privately.

Nek York Bank Call Out.

The state superintendent of banks, New York, has called for the condition of state banks, trust companies and private bankers as of September 30.

Richardson With Stout & Co.

S. W. Richardson, formerly manager of Cassatt & Co.'s Pittsburgh office, is now associated with Stout & Co., investment bankers, with offices in the Union Bank Building.

P. R. R. Moves Fewer Cars.

The Pennsylvania Railroad System in the week ended September 24 handled 172,477 loaded cars, compared with 176,292 in the week preceding and 187,314 in the same period last year. From January 1 the road moved 6,275,568 cars, against 6,483,902 in the 1926 period.

Market's Weak Points.

Moody's market review says in part: "Some of the less strong points in the defenses of the present high stock price level are the smallness of stock yields, the current decreases in corporation earnings, and the fact that the upward movement in the stock market has lately been financed to an unusual extent by means of bank funds from the interior. All these, however, are reasons not for any alarm, but rather for uncertainty as to whether or not a so-called normal reaction is going to occur. Such recessions in the past have often amounted to about 10 per cent."

Fail to Fill Gary's Place.

Directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute have not selected a successor to Elbert H. Gary, founder and sole president of the institute. After adopting a minute recording their sorrow and sense of loss through his death, they adjourned out of further respect to his memory.

Scrap Price Lower.

Heavy melting steel scrap, No. 1, is 50 cents a ton lower in the Pittsburgh district, new quotations ranging from $14.50 to $15 a ton.

Copper Imports.

Imports of copper into the United States in August amounted to 2,330 short tons, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports. Great Britain imported 10,455 tons.

Failures Increase.

An increase in commercial failures in the United States last week is reported by R. G. Dun & Co., 385, against 337 the week before.

Railway Express Net.

American Railway Express had net income of $1,101,432 in the first half of 1927, equal to $3.17 a share, against $1,111,192 in the first half of 1926, or $3.20 a share.

Montgomery Ward Sales Gain.

September sales of Montgomery Ward & Co. were slightly larger than a year ago, $16,377,863 against $16,259,002. The total for the nine months of 1927 showed a decrease of 1.23 per cent under the same period last year, $134,445,892 against $136,126,897.

Coal Prices Weak.

Coal prices continue weak in the Pittsburgh area. Domestic lump coal has dropped 25 to 50 cents a ton, being available around $3. Dealers in standard spot furnace coke are quoting a $3 minimum, but sales are noted in lots of 25 cars at $2.85 and $2.90. Foundry coke also is weak at $3.75, supplanting the $4 level retained for many weeks.

A. E. G. Stock Increased.

The National City Bank of New York has been advised that shareholders of the Allgemeine Elektricitats-Gesellschaft (Aeg) at a meeting in Berlin had authorized an increase in capital stock by an issue of additional common stock, aggregate par value 30,000,000 reichsmarks, and that holders of common stock now outstanding will have the right to subscribe to new common stock at 140 per cent of its par value (100 reichsmarks) at the rate of 100 reichsmarks of new stock for every 600 reichsmarks of old stock held. National City has been appointed agent to receive subscriptions in this country.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Aggressive buying on the part of speculators ran wheat prices up today after a downturn at the start. Initial declines were due to a bearish construction which in some quarters was placed on Canadian crop estimates. Starting unchanged to ¼c off wheat sagged a little more and then rose to well above yesterday's finish. Corn, oats and provisions also developed firmness, corn opening unchanged to ⅛c higher and continuing to display strength.

NEW YORK CLOSE WITH COMPARISONS

THE NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP.)—Prices of high grade railroad mortgages again swung upward in today's market, after a temporary check when many traders paused to take their profits. Trading was comparatively light, even for a Saturday short session.

Fractional gains were recorded by such issues as Southern Railway 4s, Denver and Rio Grande 5s, New York Central 6s and Northern Pacific 4s. "Katy" 5s, on the other hand, inclined to heaviness.

Six cent bonds of a few industrial corporations, such as Bethlehem Steel and Gotham Silk Hosiery were in moderate demand. Public utility liens were inactive.

Quiet ruled the foreign division, in which prices were firm. A few French and Japanese issues attracted buyers.

Federal government securities were dull.

New York, Oct. 1—(Associated Press)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, (00 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

CRIMSON'S PROSPECTS BRIGHT

By JOSEPH GORDON,

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—As Arnold Horween is about to launch upon his second Harvard football campaign, the horizon over the ancient Charles River is tinted with a deep Crimson and the general atmosphere at Cambridge is one of peace, calm confidence and good will toward men, including those of Princeton.

Opinion to the contrary notwithstanding, Harvard is better prepared for the impending season than it has been in five years.

Perhaps no head coach in the East is so well supplied with well-wishers and anxious watchers as is Horween on the eve of the 1927 season. Non-partisan sympathy is all with this young man who was put in there cold last year to take command of a team over which all the squads of the east had been riding rough shod, for several years and with no relief in sight.

The riding continued, but it wasn't quite so rough shod. True, they were beaten by the iron men of Brown and by the ancient enemy of New Haven. They lost to little Holy Cross and though they claimed foul they also lost to Princeton, and under laws of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission the decision stood.

DARTMOUTH DEFEATED

But there was much encouragement in the Harvard ranks when, through the valiant efforts of little Art French, the Crimson rode to victory over the powerful Dartmouth machine. The spirit of Horween was beginning to show itself. There was only one minute to play when French, undismayed, grabbed the ball, caught the great Dooley flat-footed and ran down the field for one of the immortal touchdowns in Harvard history.

Graduation has cost Horween but little. Miller is gone. Daley also is gone, but he was an appendicitis victim and did not play in '26. Coady, the best of the graduates, was out much of his last season on the varsity because of severe injuries.

The return of Joe Crosby, one of the best backs Harvard has had in years, and of Ralph Urner, the great center, both of whom were ineligible for active duty last year, will more than make up for the losses.

WESLEYAN SET FOR N. Y. TILT

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The West Virginia Wesleyan College football squad arrived at the Pennsylvania Station, New York, at 1:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon and immediately taxied to the Hotel Pennsylvania, where the Wesleyan headquarters are located.

The squad of 20 players seemed in good condition after the long ride from Clarksburg, and expressed themselves as ready for the New York eleven. All cripples are now in the best of shape and ready for the struggle tomorrow at Ohio Field, starting at 2 o'clock.

Coach Ross ordered a short signal drill for 3:30 o'clock on the New York practice field, the party going by bus to the stadium, where they donned light togs for a short drill. After the long ride from the Mountaineer state this abbreviated practice took some of the kinks out of the boys, and also kept the squad from missing the usual Friday afternoon drill.

The eleven Gothamites that Wesleyan combats today are ready for the battle. Head Coach Chick Meehan put his charges through their last workout yesterday, the squad leaving the field a short time before the West Virginians arrived. The Violet coach announced his team as "ready to go." The lineup for the New York eleven will likely be the same that started against Niagara University last Saturday and turned in such a neat 27-to-0 victory.

Railbirds concede the West Virginia team a "Chinaman's chance" to defeat the husky Violet gridders, and, from reports in the metropolis, from two to five touchdowns will be the margin of victory for the Meehanites.

TAD'S TIDBITS

MR. WILL GIBSON, who does most of the talking for Mr. Tunney, the sock champion, is grabbing many a giggle over the claim of Dempsey and L. P. Flynn regarding the knockdown of Gene Tunney.

"How do they figure that Tunney was helpless on the floor?" pipes Will with a smile. "Why should Dempsey and Flynn declare that Tunney was insensible? That's the laugh of the year. Dempsey never flattened anyone with ONE PUNCH. He knocked Gene down, yes, but Gene was far from out. You know the old Salvation Army gag, don't you: 'A MAN MAY BE DOWN, BUT HE'S NEVER OUT.' Dempsey knocked lots of them down, but MOST OF THEM GOT UP, and they were not half as good fighters as Gene.

"Dempsey knocked Willie Meehan down, but Meehan GOT UP and fought Dempsey all over the ring, winning the four-round decision. Dempsey knocked Carpentier down in the third round, I think it was, and Carpentier, face downward in the ring, looked dead to the world. He got up, though, and fought another round.

"Dempsey knocked Willard down seven times in the first round at Toledo, but Willard got up each time. Dempsey blew up and couldn't even knock Willard's head back in the next two rounds. Willard could have gone on until the finish, but he threw up the towel. He wasn't knocked out.

"Dempsey knocked Firpo down five or six times, but old Dead Pan Louie got up every time and knocked Dempsey out of the ring. He might have won the fight if he was a bit gamer, but he quit in the second.

"Dempsey knocked Brennan down in the twelfth round of their fight, but Bill was up at the count of 'eight,' when the referee stopped it.

"If those birds all got up after a knockdown, don't you think a fellow like Tunney, young, strong and in great shape, was O. K. after a second or so on the floor? You can bet your life he was! He was stunned for the moment, but that's all.

"Dempsey blew up as he always does after a knockdown, and Gene just kicked his head off after that. Don't let anyone tell you Tunney was out. That's a laugh!"

HERSHFIELD SAYS DEMPSEY SHOULD REST FIVE YEARS

HARRY HERSHFIELD, that great big cartoonist who wears a cane and a fur coat and who visits all the big sporting events, is back from Chicago.

The boys call him "Hash" for short, you know. He thinks that Jack Dempsey should rest five or ten years before fighting again.

"I'd hate to see Jack walking on his heels and talking to himself," said "Hash" in a well-known Broadway herring establishment last night. "He is too nice a fellow and has fought too many great fights to end up in a booby hatch, but that's where he'll be if he doesn't retire.

"I saw Jack Sharkey right after the fight," continued "Hash," "and Jack had just left Dempsey's dressing room. He told me that Dempsey was still groggy and talking to himself. He didn't think Dempsey knew what he was talking about at all.

"It was a great fight, full of kicks for me and one that I'll never forget. I hope Dempsey decides to quit the ring. He can't keep on taking those lickings. He has little defense, but great heart. The beating he got in Philly and the one he took from Sharkey and this licking in Chicago are enough. I hope he feels the same way."

CANADA CAL'S CHEERFUL CHIRPS.

OSWALD consulted the doctor and gave his symptoms and the doctor told him he was threatened with hay-fever, which he explained came from inhaling the pollen of certain plants. But, said Oswald, I should think if the plants were going to threaten anybody with anything they'd do it with their pistils.

"Conditions are such," stated the dry official, "that it would require an army of enforcement agents to dry up New York State alone. Nevertheless," he added reflectively, "I think we have rum running."

LAFAYETTE OUT TO INCREASE WIN STRING

EASTON, Pa., Oct. 1.—A team that won't be beaten can't be beaten!

Not a player on the Lafayette squad who goes out to the practice field or who leaves the dressing room after practice is over, but who sees those words staring him in the face in bold type three inches high. They constitute an expression that typifies the fighting spirit of Lafayette's youthful head coach, G. Herbert McCracken.

McCracken is young in years but not so young in coaching experience. He still has two years to live before he reaches 30. But seven of those years have been spent in coaching college football teams. He is a fightin', scrappin' mentor who demands the will to win in every man who plays for him.

Proof that McCracken has instilled the spirit of those words into his players is offered in the record that has been compiled since he has been at Lafayette. This is his fourth year. Twenty-eight games have been played by McCracken-coached elevens and only three times have reverses been suffered. A record for consecutive victories that began three seasons ago has progressed until now the continuous run of triumphs has reached 14. And not even a tie game mars that record.

This string of unbroken triumphs will be broken this fall. McCracken himself is the authority for this statement. He does not expect another undefeated season in 1927 such as was experienced in 1926. Only twice in the history of football at Lafayette has such an accomplishment been attained. McCracken will naturally do everything in his power to prevent it, but he will not be too greatly disappointed if the team loses one game, maybe two, and possibly three.

Muhlenberg comes here today, hoping to be the first team to place a stain on the record of the Maroon since mid-season of 1925. For years the two colleges have met on the gridiron, but it has been many a year since Muhlenberg returned home triumphant. Not since 1918 has an invasion ended successfully. The score that year was 7-6.

With one exception, Lafayette's full strength will be available. Thompson, veteran guard, will be out at least two weeks with a dislocated shoulder. Bruce Miller will replace him. Guest, Wilson and other backfield men have been kept out of scrimmage during the week, but all will be in shape to work against Muhlenberg. Guest and Pursell continue to wage a merry fight for fullback, while Hanlon and Wolbert argue over who will call the signals. But it is probable that Guest and Hanlon again will start.

COACH BOLES PROMISES SURPRISES AT WOOSTER

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 1.—When Coach L. C. Boles sends his 1927 Wooster College football squad out on the gridiron against Ashland here today, he will be the oldest Ohio Conference football coach in years of service. This will be the twelfth year for Boles at the helm here.

Boles spent the 1926 football season in California, where he was associated with Coach (Pop) Warner, and where he studied the formations and plays of Jones at the University of Southern California. This last spring, Boles worked with Coach Spalding at the University of California.

This year's leave of absence was given to Boles by the board of trustees of Wooster as a reward for his splendid work here for the 11 preceding seasons. In 11 years the Boles-coached teams won 73, lost 12 and tied 7.

Boles is drilling his 1927 squad in many of the football fundamentals he learned last year. He has revamped his own style of play and Wooster's opponents and the scouts who watch the play, will find some surprises in Wooster's attack.

W. Va. and Lafayette May Pack Stadium

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Director of Athletics H. A. Stansbury has already received an unprecedented number of ticket applications from Lafayette Alumni for the Lafayette-West Virginia University football game at Mountaineer Field October 15. The early advance interest indicates that there will be a much larger group of Lafayette alumni at Mountaineer Field than Penn State brought to the dedication of the stadium two years ago.

One block of 150 tickets has been ordered by the Western Pennsylvania Alumni Chapter of Pittsburgh. The Philadelphia Chapter of Alumni has ordered 40 tickets and these old grads have already chartered two special Pullman cars. These reservations were made by F. S. Brown, Jr., prominent Lafayette alumnus.

Individual orders galore have been received from such remote points as Norristown, Pa.; Easton, Pa.; Tatamy, Pa.; Columbus, O., and scores of nearby towns such as Parkersburg, Crafton, Pa.; Johnstown, Greensburg, Uniontown, Martins Ferry, O., etc.

SECOND DAD'S DAY GAME

The Lafayette-West Virginia encounter marks the celebration of the second annual "Dad's Day" game. The dads of the varsity players will be seated on a long bench immediately behind the players' bench on the field, and they will be made to feel at home even though they do have to take a "back seat" in favor of their sons.

Director Stansbury announced that the term "dads" also includes the mothers and that the student section would be enlarged sufficiently to accommodate the parents of the 3,000 students enrolled here at the university.

The dads and mothers will take part in the cheering and in general become a part of the student body on this particular occasion. Many students have already made reservations for their parents and a large attendance of dads and mothers is assured.

WESTINGHOUSE, SCHENLEY STRONG

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

A couple of really good games and several one-sided ones marked the scholastic football war of yesterday. The best contest of the day saw the Allegheny High School squad hold the strong Carrick High School crew to a 6-all tie in one of three City League openers. Schenley shamed itself by mauling South all over its own field to the tune of an 82-0 score, while Oliver routed Langley, 18 to 0. The W. P. I. A. L. champion, Washington, took over its fellow townsmen, Trinity, 31 to 6, in a tilt which saw Johnston go over the line for four touchdowns. Westinghouse showed it has another real team this year by walloping Swissvale, 42 to 6; when it meets Schenley next week a real battle should ensue.

Monongahela took over Duquesne, 6-0, in a good game; Crafton and Sewickley played to a 6-all deadlock; East Pittsburgh and Glassport went scoreless; West Newton pulled a surprise act by downing McKeesport, 7-0; Arnold walloped Oakdale, 33-6, and Peabody's second squad tied in a scoreless tilt with Ralston Vocational.

The strength of South Hills remains unknown. It appears that the city championship lies between three teams, Schenley, Westinghouse and South Hills, and we might count Carrick in as a dark horse. Schenley has a particularly strong machine this year, with plenty of good reserve material to back it up. McSorely is a great little runner, and is given fine interference. What might happen to him if his interference was ruined is a matter of conjecture.

Kenneth Ormiston, Brown, Ayres and Sullivan made a formidable backfield for Westinghouse; they should do a lot of damage before the season is out.

FLOWERS WHIPS LATZO

WILKES-BARRE, Oct. 1.—(UP.)—Tiger Flowers, former middleweight champion of the world, decisively defeated Pete Latzo, former welterweight titleholder, in a 10-round decision bout here last night, winning every session with the exception of two, in which Latzo was given an even break.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 1.—(UP.)—Hundreds of friends welcomed Mrs. Mariam Burns Horn, National women's golf champion, when she returned to Kansas City after winning the title in the East. She was guest of honor at a dinner dance and reception at Milburn Golf Club.

Dempsey Given Warm Welcome In New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP.)—Although he failed to regain the heights of pugilism, Jack Dempsey is as popular as ever in New York, the home of Champion Gene Tunney.

Stepping into the arena at Madison Square Garden last night just before Tom Heeney, of New Zealand, heavyweight, knocked out Jim Maloney, of Boston, in the first round, Dempsey was given thundering applause by some 13,000 admirers.

CHAIN GROCERY SYSTEM TO EXPAND

Plans for expansion were discussed at the first meeting of the board of directors of the newly-organized Keystone Stores Corporation, which took over the assets of the Keystone Grocery and Tea Company and the Unity Grocery Corporation. With Pittsburgh as headquarters, the directors planned the operation of a chain grocery system in Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

The new directors are Robert J. Hamilton, president; H. L. Myers, vice president, and Attorney George R. Wallace of Pittsburgh, Robert F. Johnson, treasurer, and J. W. Keitz of Jeannette; C. A. Hamilton, secretary, Wilkinsburg; D. P. Hudson and Attorney H. E. Cope of Greensburg and H. H. Smith, Latrobe.

The corporation will maintain administration offices in Boulevard of the Allies for the more than 200 stores.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

The demand for fruit and vegetables was slow today at the local wholesale produce district. The market was dull and the changes in prices were trifling. The fruit market was steady without change in quotations.

Poultry was in moderate supply and the demand was fairly good. The market was firm and the quotations remained about the same.

All grades of butter listed were increased a half cent per pound, the prices being effective Monday. The butter market was firm. Eggs and cheese were firm and closed at unshaken quotations.

Carlot supplies were rather light, a total of 563 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 3 cars of apples, 3 cabbage, 5 cantaloupes, 1 cucumber, 33 grapes, 2 lettuce, 9 onions, 7 oranges, 3 peaches, 5 pears, 2 peppers, 18 potatoes, 3 prunes and 2 sweet potatoes.

Hay receipts were somewhat limited and the market was firm. Straw receipts were light with the market firm. Grain was also light in receipts with the market steady.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 7 to 20 points, active months showing net advances of 11 to 23 points in early trading on covering, combined with trade and commission-house buying on apprehensions of unfavorable weather in the South over the week-end.

December sold up to 21.73c and March to 22.00c, but the advance met considerable realizing and reactions of 6 or 7 points from the best followed before the end of the first hour.

A private report placed the condition of the crop at 51.2 per cent and the indicated yield at 12,239,000 bales.

Private cables reported continental liquidation absorbed by trade calling and covering in the Liverpool market.

VIC ALDRIDGE

AS IN ALL OTHER BIG events, the Sun-Telegraph will lead in covering the world series games which will open next Wednesday.

THREE OF ITS staff specialists, James J. Long, Charles J. Doyle and Havey J. Boyle, will cover all of the games in both Pittsburgh and New York.

DAMON RUNYON, colorful writer for the Hearst newspapers, will write the drama of the play as only he can.

HARRY KECK, sports editor, will contribute editorial comment throughout the series.

JOE HARRIS—Coulter Joe—Pirate first baseman, war veteran and one of the stars of the Washington Senators in the 1925 series with the Pirates, will size up the series before play begins and then will contribute a story of his impressions after each game.

VIC ALDRIDGE, Pirate pitcher, who won two of the games for the Pirates in 1925, also will write. In fact, Aldridge, the "Hoosier Schoolmaster," will pen his own stuff, writing each line of it. He has the academic background, and the fans will get a peek at how a pedagogue would report a big series.

BOB MEUSEL of the Yankees will write the New York end from the players' viewpoint.

ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY, staff writer, and Corinne Rich of the Hearst services, will write from the women's angle.

GEORGE E. PHAIR, humorist, will add his bit to the general roundup, and news reporters and photographers will take in every conceivable angle of the blue ribbon classic.

FANS UNABLE to attend the games will be given their annual treat, the remarkable reproduction of the series games on the electric scoreboard in Sun-Tele square.

IF IT'S THE BEST you want on the series, you'll find it in the Sun-Telegraph columns.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

WITH the approach of the world series, fans of the Pittsburgh district are waiting with great interest the next official announcement by President John A. Heydler of the National League, which will be the naming of the umpires of the senior circuit who are to officiate in the big struggle opening here next Wednesday afternoon.

The American League umpires for the series were appointed last Tuesday, when R. F. Nallin and E. T. Ormsby were named to handle the big games, but thus far no word has come from President Heydler as to the men whom he intends to assign from the older loop for the important contests.

REGULAR game-goers of Pittsburgh and environs who have had a chance to observe the work of the various members of Heydler's staff during the season are hopeful that when the league chief finally makes his selections he will be governed solely by the ability and merits of the men.

Practically all of the fans who have watched the games here are agreed that the present National League staff of umpires is, with a few exceptions, about the poorest will be bearing down in this direction.

REDS CRIMP PIRATES' TITLE DRIVE

The second clash of the series will feature Remy Kremer or Carmen Hill on the mound. Manager Bush has several pitchers ready for the assignment, but the Frenchman is due to get the assignment.

Red Lucas and his Redland supporters kept the Pirates from winning the flag yesterday, although Red had to have a lot of breaks to score a 2-to-1 success over Vic Aldridge. In the early innings of the game the Pirates slammed the ball with much vigor, but most of their wallops went straight at somebody, and a line smash by Paul Waner in the first just missed being a homer when it swerved into foul territory.

REDS SCORE FIRST

The Reds scored their first run through two very scratchy hits. Aldridge had two out in the sixth and was sailing along like a champion when Ethan Allen pushed a single past Grantham. The ball was hit cleanly, but Grantham did not miss it by more than a foot. Ford then hit a dinky fly behind Grantham and Allen sprinted to third on the fluke hit.

Aldridge took a hitch on his belt. Hughey is just about the best second-baseman in the game defensively, but he is not what is termed a dangerous batter. In this crisis he hoisted a little fly behind Grantham and it fell for a double, scoring Allen with an important tally.

The Reds scored a safety tally in the seventh on Dressen's double and two sacrifice flies. In the eighth the Buccos had a chance to get on even terms with the enemy, but they failed.

Coulter Joe Harris started their eighth with a walk. Brickell batted for Gooch and forced Joe at second. Earl Smith, batting for Aldridge, put in a fine lick with a single to center, sending Brickell to third.

The feverish spirit of the fight was manifest a moment later when Catcher Val Picinich tried to nick Brickell off third. The action was very close, Umpire Quigley calling Fred safe. Picinich came all the way to third to bawl out Quigley and he got away with it, but when he re-

W. & J.-WEST. MD. GAME TOPS GRID CARD

By JESS CARVER.

Topped by the passage at arms between Western Maryland College and W. & J. at Little Washington, and with all the teams in the section save one in action, the tri-state collegiate football card for the day takes on somewhat heroic proportions.

Folks who owe allegiance and taxes to this fair city of Pittsburgh can take their choice of three games, one downtown between the Dubious Dukes of Duquesne University and Broaddus College of Philippi, W. Va., and two out in Oakland between Pitt and Grove City in the Stadium and Carnegie Tech and Thiel College in the Tartans' Bowl. Bowl or cup, take your choice.

It will make the second week in succession that Dr. T. V. Holleran had chaperoned his Theilians into Pittsburgh, the Lutherans having assimilated a 45-0 shellacking at the hands of Pitt's fine team last week. They will undoubtedly take another one on the chin today, though, if they play inspired ball they can force Carnegie to open up a bit and at the worst, will make things fairly interesting for those who wish to take in the struggle.

MUST WATCH GROVERS

Grove City could bring a team of high school kids to town and give Pitt a tough game, and Charlie Berry probably has a well drilled and determined eleven ready for action against the Golden Panthers. There will be no Cribbs to plunge the line, but there will be a Rosenberg to kick and run, so that Pitt cannot afford to take the contest too lightly.

The Dukes will display for the first time this year their newly acquired wares in Pittsburgh, probably planning a Rockne attack for use against Chenoewith's Broaddus varsity. Coach Layden, despite a 12-6 thumping handed him at St. Bonaventure last week, has a pretty good football team up on the Bluff, and don't you forget it.

I look for Western Maryland to lose to W. & J., but not by more than three touchdowns and probably by not more than two. The low down on Harlow's eleven is this: It's a light, fast team, built around the dazzling ability of Neale, 162-pound halfback, and a dangerous team on a dry field. In the mud, Western Maryland will have nothing but a prayer and hope—and the grim spirit of battle always instilled by Dick Harlow.

MARYLAND LOOKS GOOD

They worked out in the Stadium yesterday afternoon, and they showed a variety of sound ground-gaining plays. The eleven seems to be exceedingly well drilled in fundamentals and looks to be the sort of

Pitchers Will Beat Yanks

By HARRY KECK, Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

WHY PIRATES WILL WIN

IN yesterday's issue I broke the ice by saying I was picking the Pirates to beat the Yankees in the w. s., which opens at Forbes Field next week, and let it go at that. Of course, I must have a reason for the selection. In a nutshell, here it is:

The Yankees, with all their vaunted slugging strength, are notoriously bad world series performers. They've won many pennants handily only to act up like bushers in the fall classics. Their batting strength somehow dwindles in the face of bearing-down pitching in each game of the money play, and the Pirates have the pitching staff to tame them this year. The Cards turned the trick last year, and what the Cards have done the Pirates also can do. The local men demonstrated that they were the class of a tough campaign, while the Yanks had a walkover in their own circuit, proving anything you want it to prove, but mainly the fact that Donie Bush's crew will find it no novel experience to be put to the test in the big battles just ahead.

It is likely to be a hard fight, and tighter pitching by the Pirate corps ought to prove the determining factor. With Kremer, Aldridge, Hill, Meadows and Miljus going great guns, the American League champions should find their powerful offensive held well under control, and when that happens the Yankees aren't so tough.

And I am wondering how many homers the Ruth-Gehrig-Meusel-Lazerri combine WILL NOT hit in the far reaches of Forbes Field, where the outfielders get a workingman's chance.

HOPES TO NAIL FLAG TODAY

DONIE BUSH

Manager of the Pirates, who is hopeful of ending the suspense in the National League pennant race by defeating the Reds in the next to last game of the schedule at Cincinnati today. Donie and his club have been through a severe strain all season and would relish a few days' letdown before entering the world series with the Yankees at Forbes Field next Wednesday—provided, of course, they win the pennant, which appears to be, at least so far as the fans are concerned, a foregone conclusion.

YOUNG PLANS TO QUIT AS WESTERN GOLF HEAD

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(AP.)—There is to be a new president of the Western Golf Association, as President Hobart P. Young today let it be known that he was retiring with the expiration of his present term.

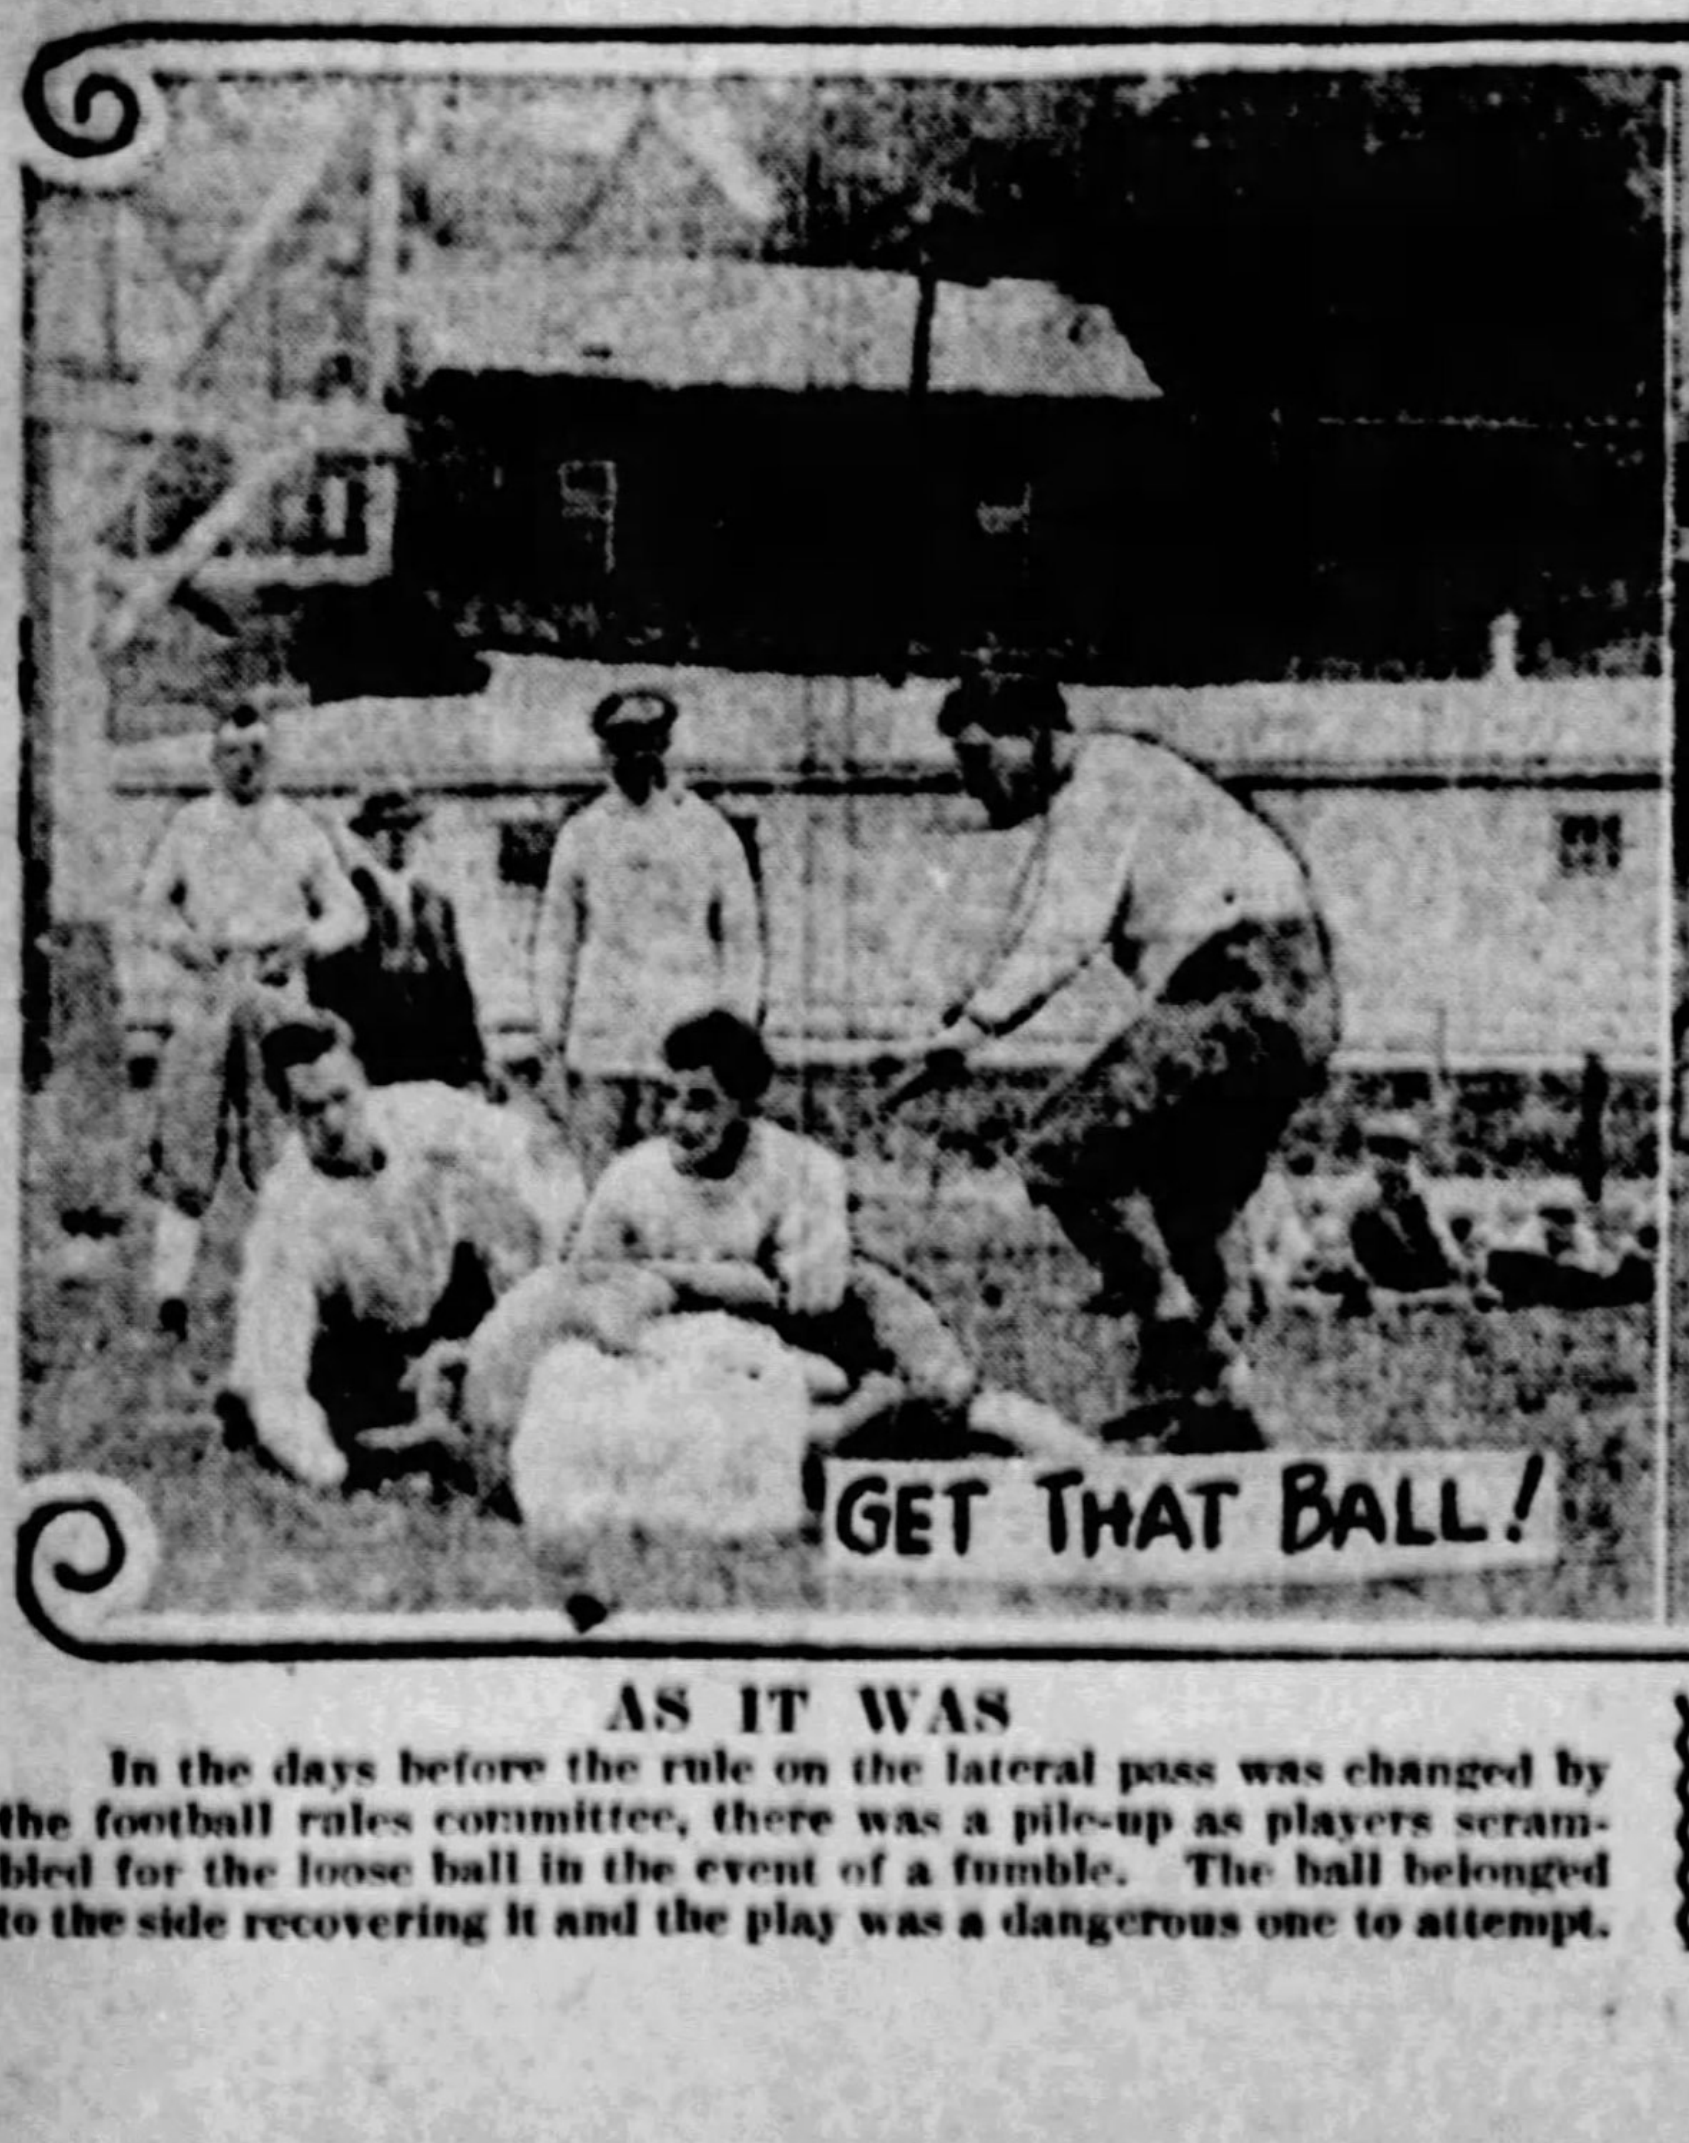
It has not been announced who will take over the reins at the annual meeting in December, but Robert T. Cutting, now vice president, is naturally in line for the position.

If Cutting is chosen to head the association, he will have squared the match of "golf officers" with his wife, who has been head of the Women's Western Golf Association, an independent golfing body, while Bob was one down, being only a vice president.

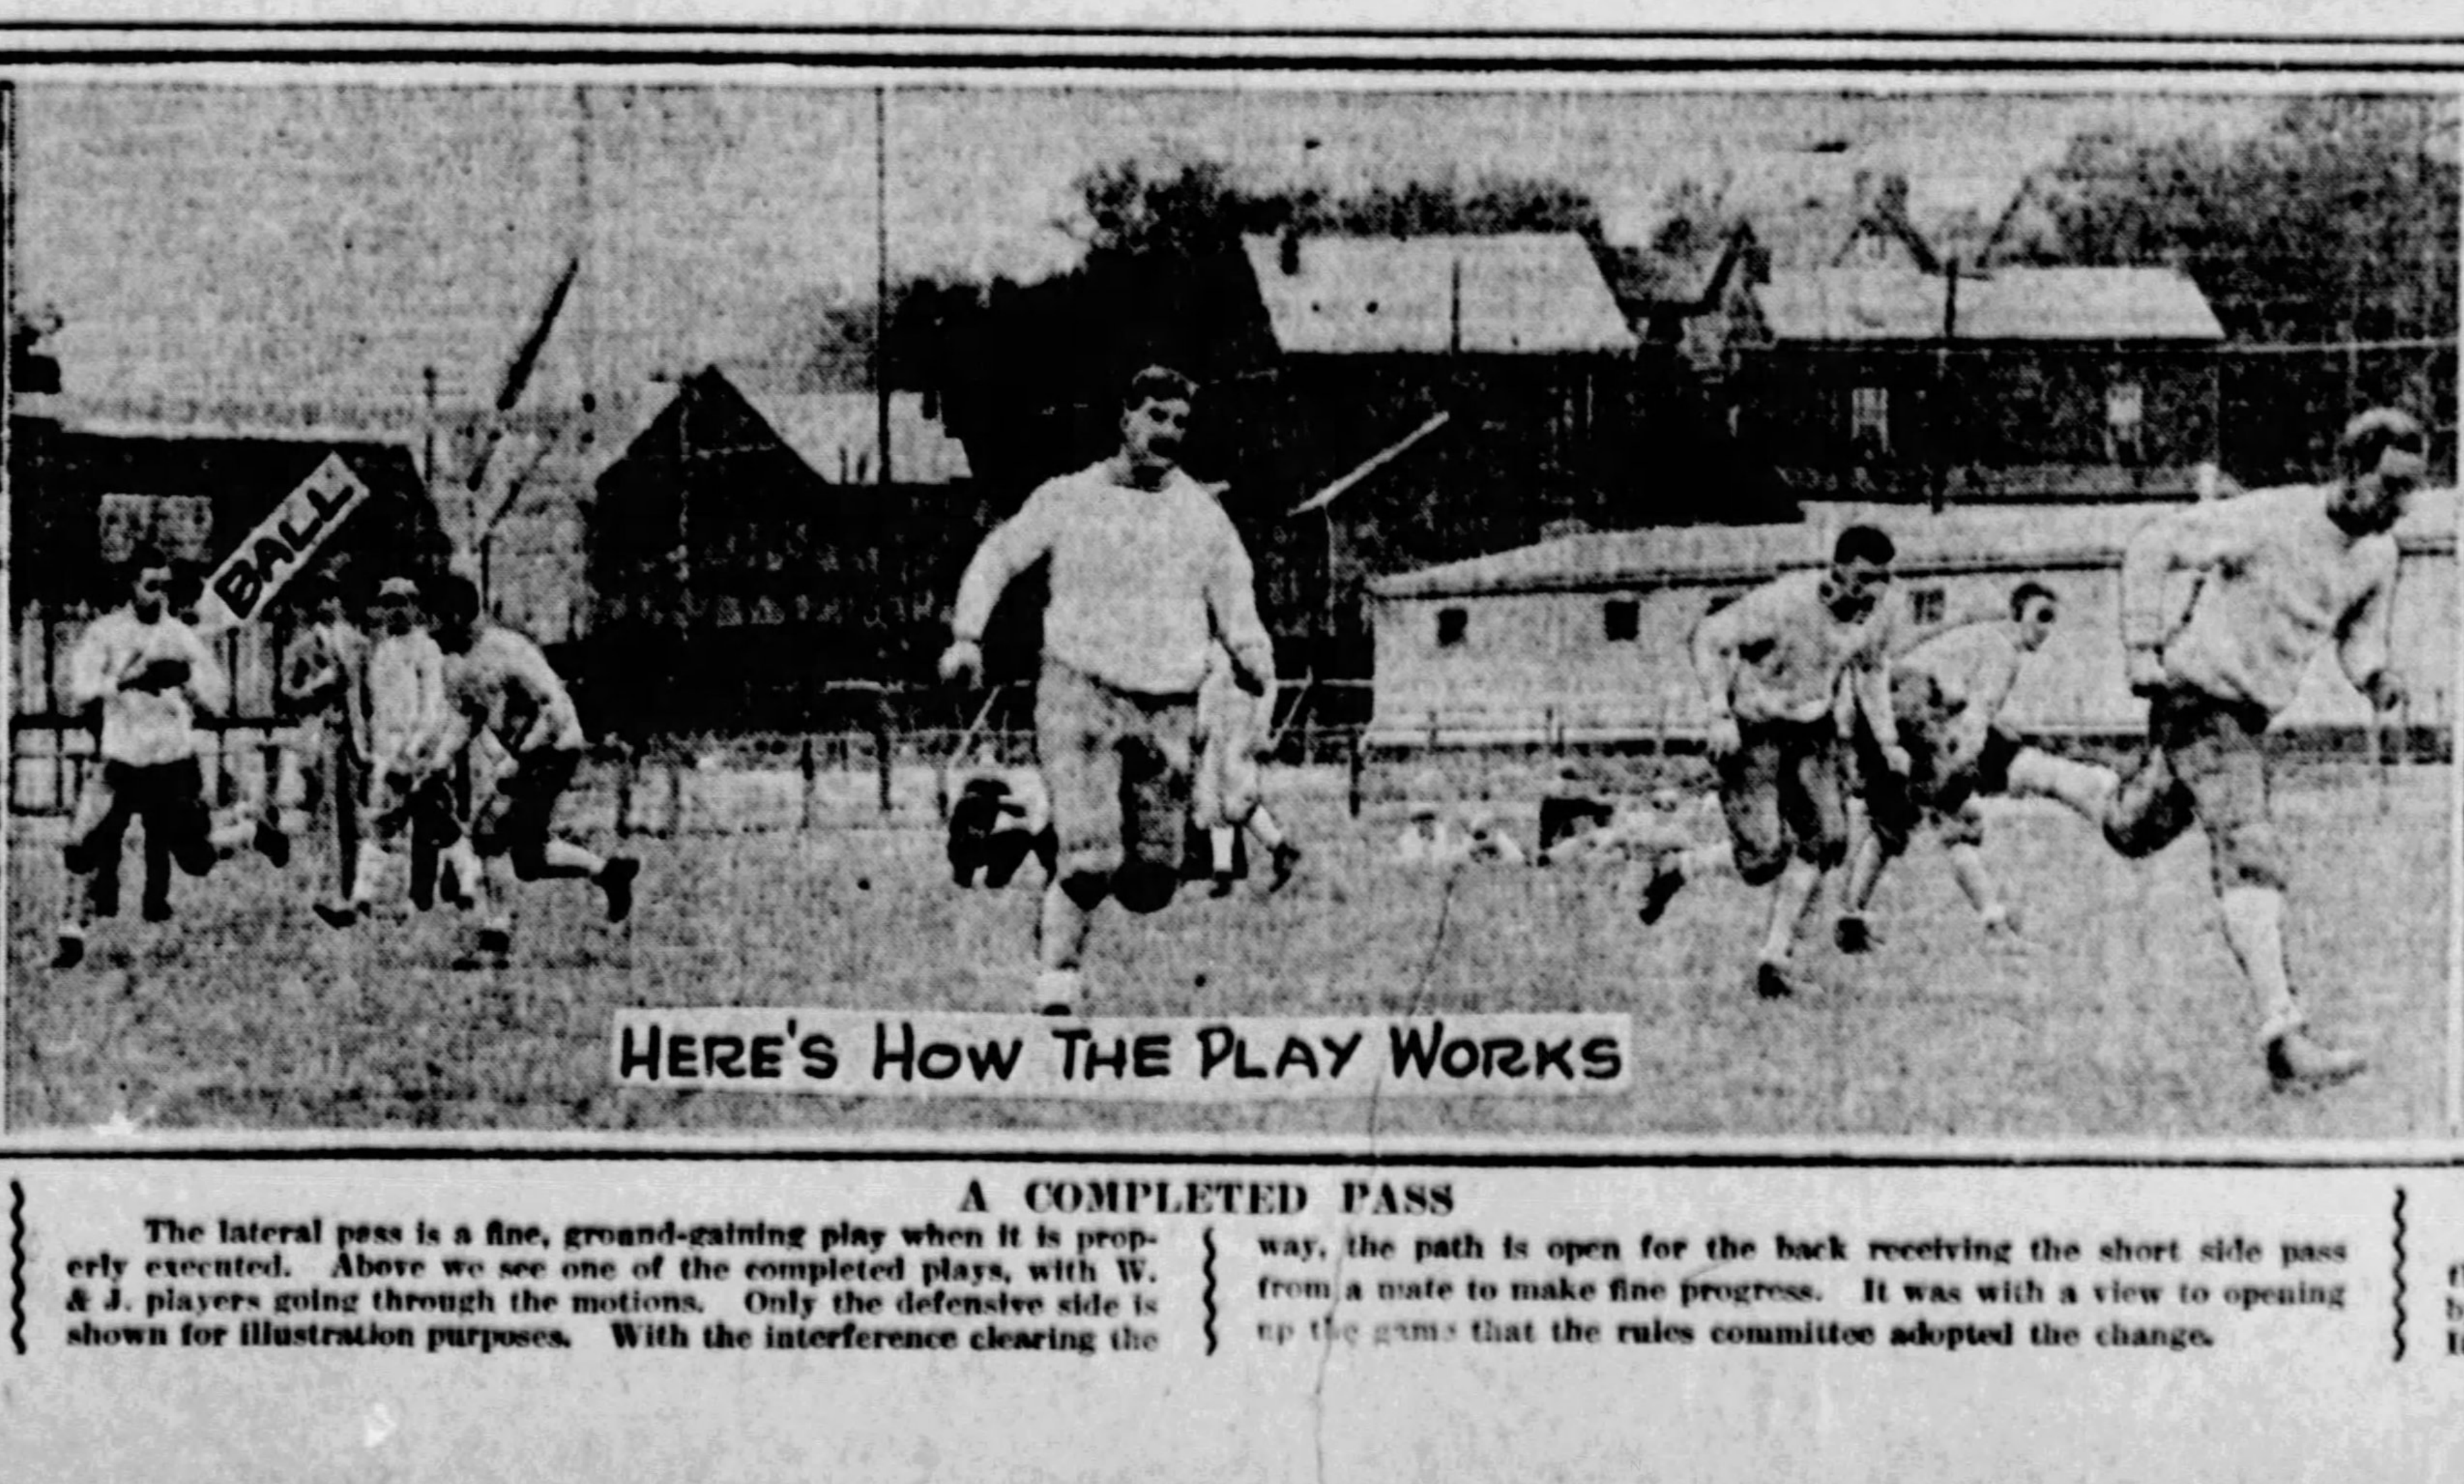
There has also been talk of making Cutting's father, former Judge Charles S. Cutting, president of the Illinois Seniors' Golf Association.

The elder Cutting, who is fourscore years of age, played a vigorous game Thursday at the Illinois Seniors' championship, plodding through water and rain with his son to compile a score well below three figures.

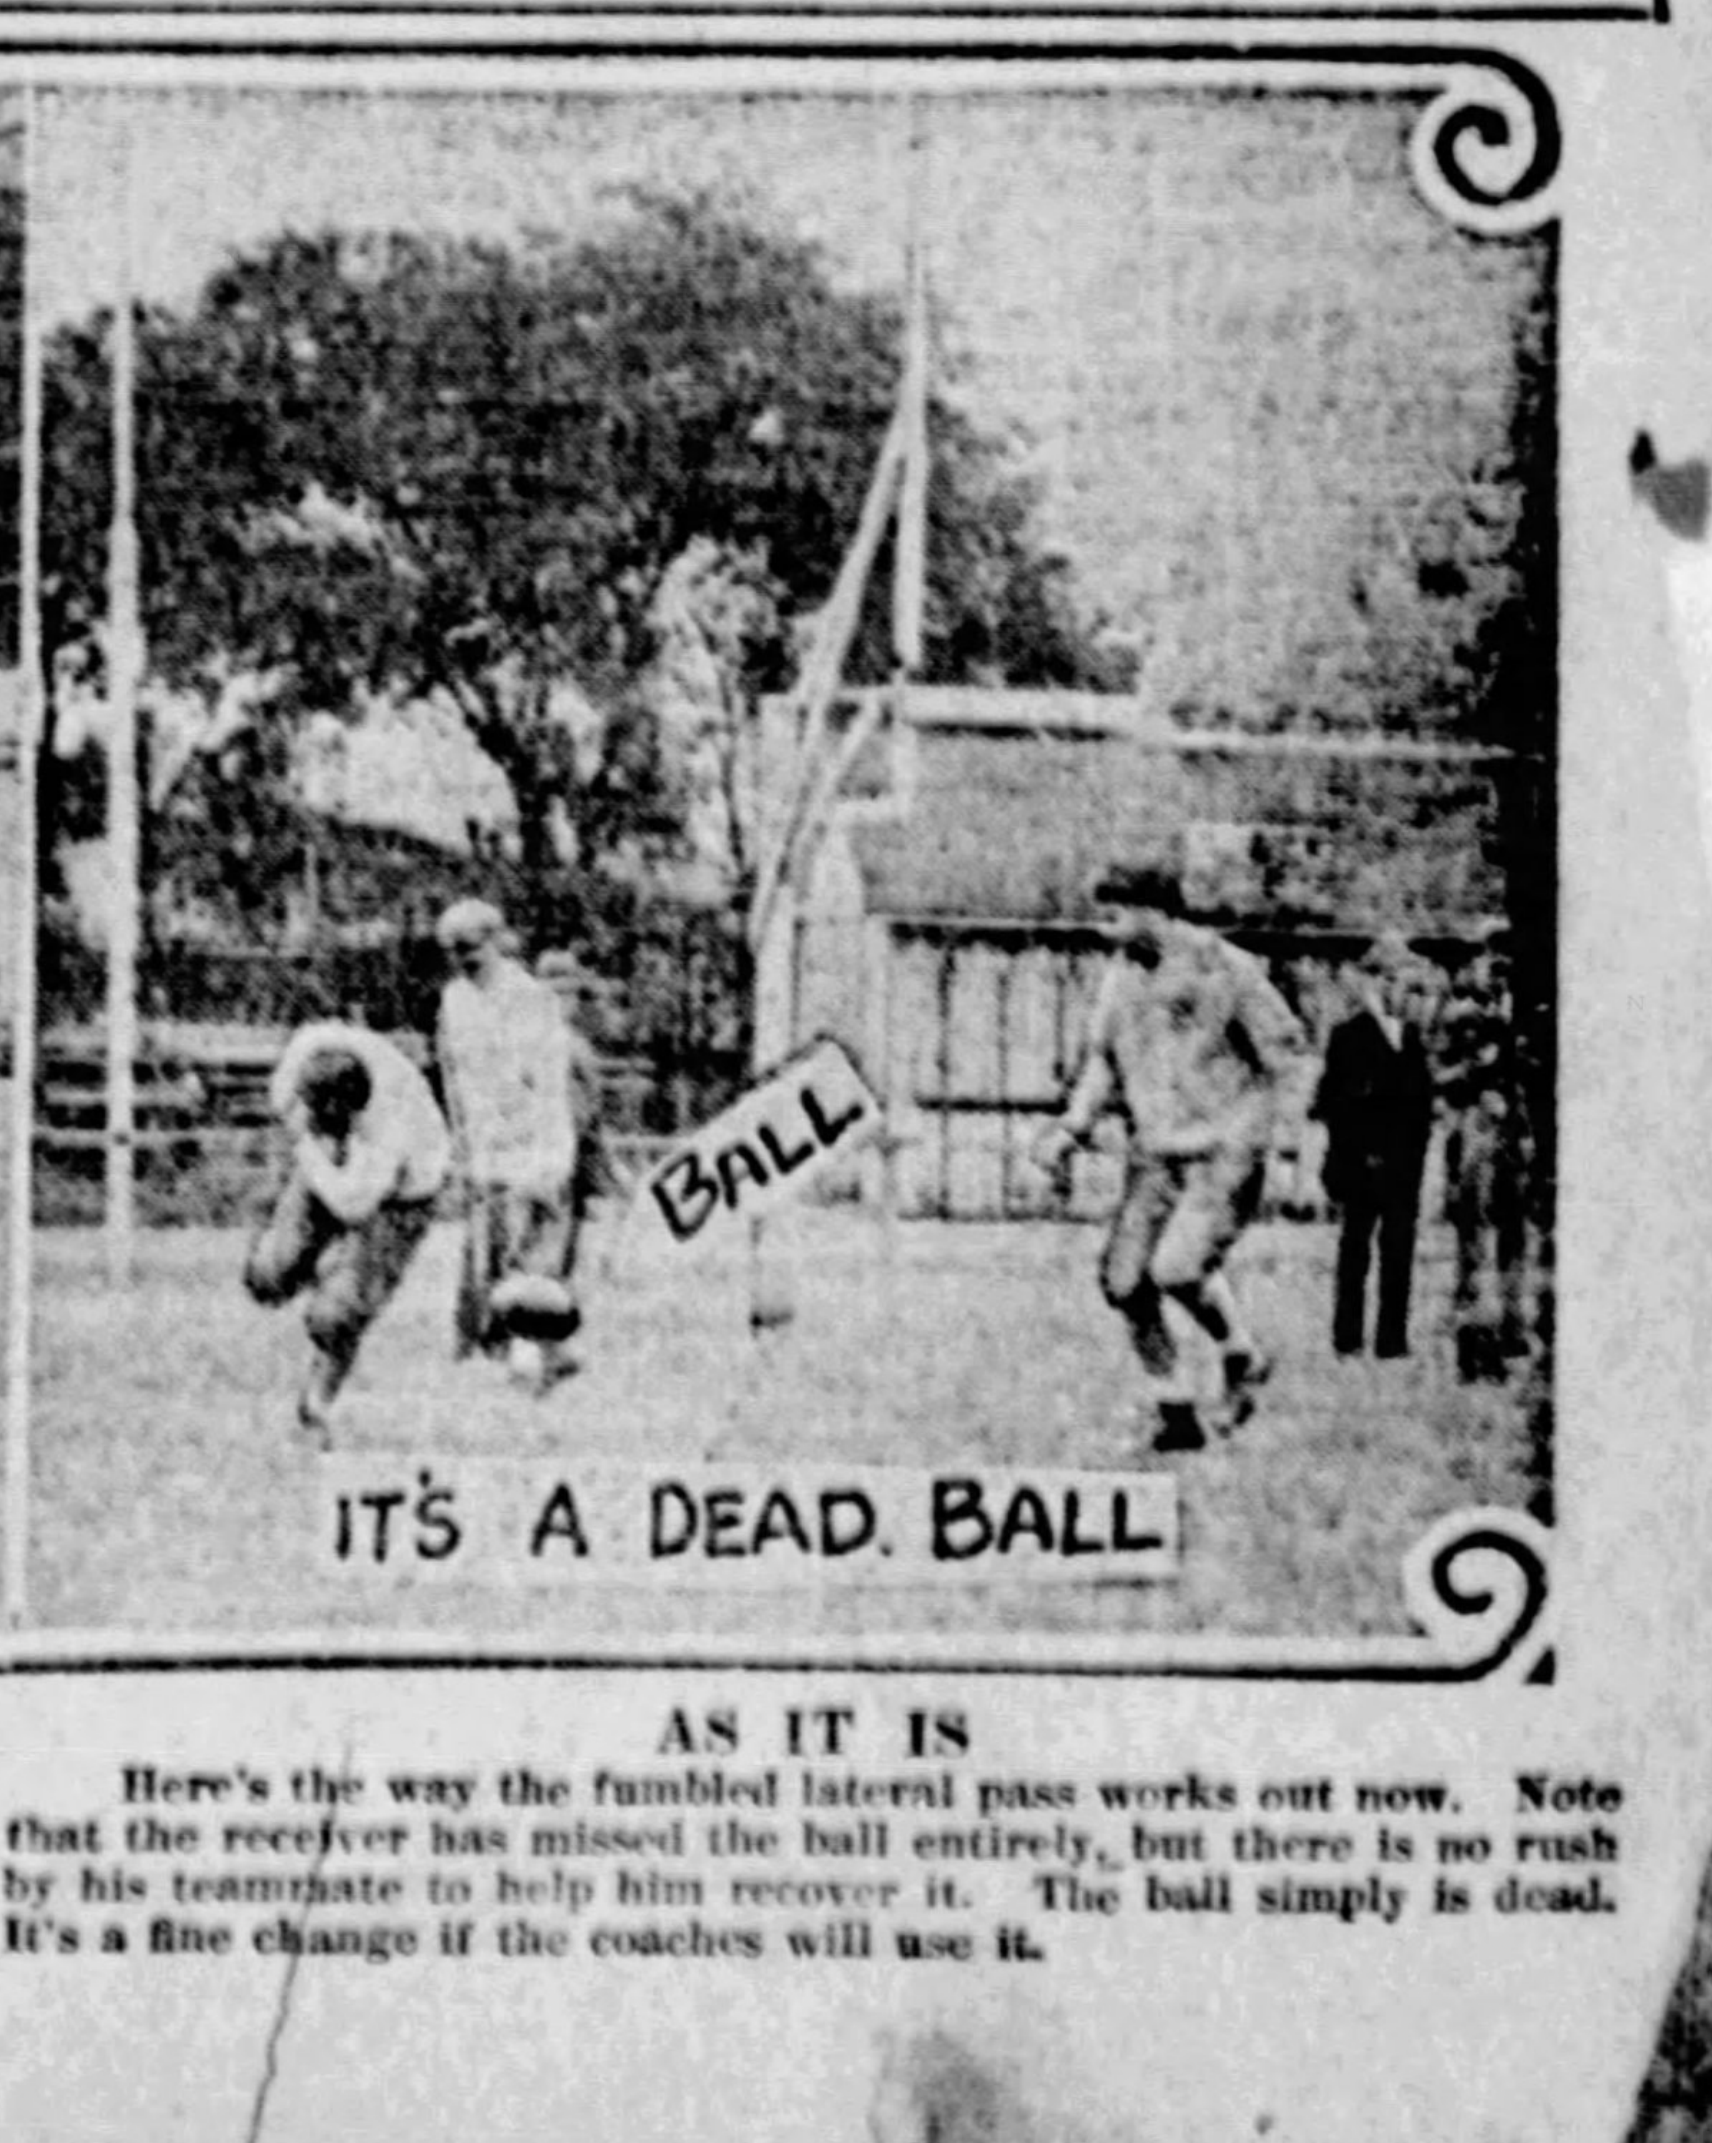
HERE'S THE LATERAL PASS -:- AS IT WAS AND AS IT IS -:- UNDER THE REVISED RULES



GET THAT BALL!



BALL
HERE'S HOW THE PLAY WORKS



AS IT WAS

In the days before the rule on the lateral pass was changed by the football rules committee, there was a pile-up as players scrambled for the loose ball in the event of a fumble. The ball belonged to the side recovering it and the play was a dangerous one to attempt.

A COMPLETED PASS

The lateral pass is a fine, ground-gaining play when it is properly executed. Above we see one of the completed plays, with W. & J. players going through the motions. Only the defensive side is shown for illustration purposes. With the interference clearing the way, the path is open for the back receiving the short side pass from a mate to make fine progress. It was with a view to opening up the game that the rules committee adopted the change.

AS IT IS

Here's the way the fumbled lateral pass works out now. Note that the receiver has missed the ball entirely, but there is no rush by his teammate to help him recover it. The ball simply is dead. It's a fine change if the coaches will use it.

THROUGH the SPORT LENS by HAVEY BOYLE

Havey Boyle.

EXPLAINING how the world series profits are divided should call for a prize, say a 2¼x3½ cream puff—as the baseball authorities have had a lot of fun in making the division so involved that only a few customers take the time to figure the thing out. After a little fasting and looking over my shoulder into a mirror I have come upon the method by which the world series coin is divided up. This explanation at least is clearer than the railroad schedules in which just at the time you believe you have the correct dope on the running times of the trains you run across this: "Now turn to page 28, note triple dagger, meaning 'Exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays in Pennsylvania, Maine and New Hampshire.'"

All this world series division is explained in one column, and there are no asterisks, daggers, and what-nots to confuse the unwary.

Fifteen per cent of every game's receipts go to the office of the baseball commissioner. Of the remainder—for the first four games—the players' pool gets 60 per cent with the other 40 per cent of the remainder being divided equally between each clubowner. Seventy per cent of the players' pool is divided into parcels of 60 and 40 per cent, with the winning club getting the larger share. The remaining 30 per cent of the players' pool is divided among the second, third and fourth place clubs of the National and American leagues. The second place clubs in each league gets 50 per cent of this amount; the third place gets 33 1-3 per cent, and the fourth place clubs get 16 2-3 per cent.

After the fourth game the commissioner continues to get 15 per cent of all receipts, and the respective clubowners evenly split the remaining 85 per cent. However, out of his share each clubowner turns back to his league half of what he gets. Now are they are questions? Well, that's splendid.

THE money split among the second, third and fourth place clubs is intended to add spice to the last days of a pennant race when without a prize for second, third and fourth place clubs the race might lag a little.

The 15 per cent of the total goes to the commissioner's office to pay the $65,000 annual salary given Commissioner K. M. Landis and to take care of various expenses attached to his office.

The portion which the club owners turn back to their respective league treasuries is presumably to take care of various contingencies, one of which, possibly, is a baseball war. Of course, the league treasury needs a good round sum to handle the executive end of the league's work, such as umpires' salaries, traveling expenses and other items.

HOW the player split their share up is ostensibly left to themselves, although in awarding full shares, half shares and smaller portions of shares of the pot the players very often defer to recommendations of the manager if he is inclined to do any persuading.

There are 23 players on the Pirates eligible for a divvy, not counting the manager, Stanage and Jewell Ens, the latter two coaches. Other men come in for consideration, such as the club secretary, who is a part of the family, the scouts, the trainer and the clubhouse boy.

In 1925 Mr. Watters, the club secretary, was awarded a full share amounting to more than $5,000; two of the scouts each got $1,000 each and Fred Clarke was awarded $1,000—an amount that a spy reports he turned back.

THE players cut in on items beyond their share, too. For instance, newspaper syndicates offer pretty good amounts for the privilege of using the players' names over stories. The manager always gets more than any other member of the team. Other men get what their importance, by comparison, merits.

ON top of this each player is awarded a trophy by Commissioner Landis, which is valued in cash at approximately $100. However, these are turned into cash as ball players keep these excellent trophies as reminders of their pennant days.

ALL this is on the financial side, yet there is something beyond this cash return that the players value. There is a thrill in getting into the world series which wears off only in a fellow like Ruth, accustomed to many baseball honors much acclaim.

All through the winter the contestants wherever they go, as the result of the widespread publicity, are personages, and being human, the ball player of the big series likes this extra notice.

Major Teams Start Grind

By MALCOLM ROY,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Football's heavy artillery will fire its first salvo today when teams of the so-called Big Three of the Western Conference Big Ten will play their inaugural games of the 1927 season, Preliminary skirmishing brought Dartmouth, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Cornell, New York University and a number of the lesser lights into action last week, but the season really gets under way in the length and breadth of the land today. Incidentally, the first intersectional clash is to be played when the Army tackles the University of Detroit eleven on the plains at West Point,

On the eve of what promises to be one of the most spectacular years the game has ever seen, with the revamped revolutionary rules commanding the interest of coaches, player and spectator alike, forecasts of the relative strength and weakness of the leading elevens become highly nebular in character. Yet in the East the Army and Navy are both regarded as teams of great potential ability.

HARVARD IMPROVED

Harvard, under the skilful coaching of Arnold Horween, is believed to have safely emerged from the doldrums in which Crimson football has been struggling for the last few years. Princeton, bereft of its star performers of last season, is regarded as having another first class team in the making, while Yale, alone of the once all-powerful Big Three, is thought to be headed for a none too encouraging year. Likewise it is the last year that Tad Jones will be at the helm of the football craft at New Haven and this knowledge may either bestir the squad to great heights or cause it to sink back into hopeless lethargy.

Of the other Eastern elevens Chick Meehan's New York University team has a wealth of power both in the line and the backfield and will probably be heard from in no uncertain fashion before the season is well under way. Dartmouth has exhibited a strong backfield, but a line of little real merit in the one game it has already played.

Columbia ran up a big score on a weak Vermont eleven last week by virtue of the splendid work of its line and despite an indifferent showing of its backfield. Both Cornell and Pennsylvania appear to have evenly balanced teams, although the Quakers fell below the expectations of Coach Lou Young in their opening game. Cornell, on the other hand, displayed all kinds of power. Syracuse, Colgate, Holy Cross, Fordham, Penn State and Georgetown, as well as Brown and Lafayette, have all shown promise of smoothness and strength.

In the West, Notre Dame, directed by the incomparable Knute Rockne, stands out again with another team that is already stamped with the mark of greatness. Rockne's biggest ace is Flanagan, who almost single-handed defeated the Army last season, but he is merely one big star among 10 others of only slightly inferior magnitude.

Northwestern and Wisconsin are ranked high in promise in the Western Conference. Northwestern, despite the loss of "Moon" Baker, one of the greatest backs in the conference last year, has developed a powerful team under the coaching of Dick Hanley, who succeeded to the place left vacant when Glenn Thistlewaite went to Wisconsin. Gustafson and Lewis will probably share the duties that were Baker's last year. Wisconsin, which has had topnotch material for several seasons, is expected to be close to unbeatable under the tutelage of Thistlewaite, who resurrected Northwestern from a football grave in a comparatively short time.

CHICAGO FACES TEST

Chicago has a tremendously hard schedule, but a team of which little is known, although the fine material in last year's freshman eleven is expected to make the Maroon much more formidable than it was a year ago. Illinois and Bob Zuppke have lost a powerful player in Frosty Peters, who has left college, but withal Zuppke has a way of getting his teams into such condition that they are usually at or near the top. The same is true of Ohio State. Dr. Jack Wilce has his two stars of 1926—Marek and Eby—still on deck and in consequence much is expected of the Buckeyes. Not so with Michigan, however, where "Hurry-Up" Yost has laid down the reins as active coach after a quarter of a century.

PIRATES

turned he became involved in a verbal controversy with Umpire Reardon and in the end he was ejected from the field.

BRICKELL TALLIES

After a lapse of time Bubbles Hargrave replaced Picinich and the Reds went to work on Sprout Waner. Sprout forced Comorosky, who ran for Smith, Brickell scoring on the play. Barnhart came through with a hit to left, L. Waner taking second. It was up to Brother Paul, but he failed as he forced Lloyd.

The Pirates were unfortunate as they failed to score in the opening round. With Lloyd Waner removed, Barnhart singled. One of the hardest shots of the game followed off Paul Waner's bat, but the hard-hit ball bounded into the seats on the foul side of the line. Paul then returned and bounced one off Pipp's glove. The ball was not hard hit, but the Reds won another break when it caromed to Critz and resulted in a putout at first.

Wright followed Paul Waner with a savage liner that had a base hit ticket. The ball almost floored Lucas, who threw up his glove in defense. The hot rocket hit the glove and fell about ten feet from the pitcher and he threw out Wright.

Sprout Waner smacked a triple to center in their third, but there were two out and he was left at third. Brother Paul opened the fourth with a smash that all but toppled Dressen, who threw him out. After sharing such support, Lucas eventually had the Indian sign on the Freebooters. Critz' fielding was spectacular, the star keystone tender playing a heavy part in downing the Buccos through fielding alone. His double was a fluke, but it was the turning point of the game.

John Miljus and Roy Spencer was the Pirate battery in the eighth, they taking three Reds in a row.

Chicago to Use Knitted Pants On Gridiron

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(AP.)—Knitted pants for football? Sure, at the University of Chicago.

Coach Stagg's Maroons had the knitted trousers ready for today's game against Oklahoma, and the coach believed they would serve much better than the more orthodox moleskins. The knitted kind, which were accepted after successful tests last spring, are three pounds lighter.

Oklahoma planned colorful garb, with silk football breeches, jerseys of red and yellow, and stockings and headgears in yellow also.

CHILLY SAUCE BY CHILLY DOYLE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—Unless the Pirates are able to drop safe and timely drives on Redland Field today or tomorrow their position will be endangered, On a fast field today the Pirates probably would have had more base hits, as they were pummelling the ball, only to see some Red bob up with it,

Aldridge's pitching could hardly be improved upon, A couple of tantalizing Texas leaguers with two down in the sixth brought him to defeat. The run made in the seventh by the Reds was clean, but they had to have the advantage of their lucky tally to win the verdict.

THE fighting spirit of the Reds as they battle the Pirates would lead one to believe that they are in the flag fight. There may have been occasions in baseball where winning teams have drifted in on the last game or two, but the Reds are battling in furious manner. Val Picinich staged a warm scene today because Umpire Quigley would not call Fred Brickell out at third. Picinich was ejected and the fans were in an uproar over the act.

Hughey Critz appears to get a delight out of starring against the Pirates and Cardinals. Critz was telling a good one concerning the reactions of Rabbit Maranville in the series between the Cardinals and Reds. In the International League through most of the summer Rabbit had no chance to get an inside view of major leagues, and the lowly position of the Reds during the summer gave him the idea that the Reds were a sort of a setup to a high-class club like the Cardinals.

IN the midst of the torrid series with the Reds as the latter club reeled off a couple of snappy plays, Rabbit screeched out: "Where the dickens have you fellows been all summer, anyhow. I thought I was with the champions?"

The two off days apparently did not help the batting eyes of the Pirates, although they clicked up some promising drives in the early innings of yesterday's game. It may sound a bit strange to Pirate fans to hear that the Buccos yesterday experienced their first batting practice since last Saturday in Pittsburgh. The Buccos and Cubs could not take batting practice in the Chicago series on account of the moist conditions.

THE Pirates thus won four games in three days without the usual preliminary stuff. Then followed two days of reaction in Cincinnati before they could unlimber their willows.

Paul Waner has been in a terrific batting slump. If it had not been for the timely hitting and batting of Brother Lloyd and George Grantham there is no telling where the Buccos would have been today. Paul has not missed a game this season, and he is due to have a slump like any other batter.

that ever spoiled ball games in the parent girdle. Reports of repeated protests, disturbances and wrangles in other cities, East and West, have borne out Pittsburgh's opinion in that respect.

THERE are only about three men, four at the outside, who have given general satisfaction, and in whom patrons of the sport here have been able to place any great measure of confidence.

The others, or the majority of them, on many occasions have appeared incompetent, and numerous games have been spoiled for both spectators and players by poor decisions. It wasn't that these umpires favored one club or the other. Their incompetent officiating was the general rule, rather than the exception, with the result that both clubs suffered from the pop-eyed verdicts given on important plays and the result of a game not infrequently was changed.

If it may be said that the general standard of play in the major leagues, as is the general opinion, has been lowered considerably since the World War, the umpiring has gone back even farther, and this year it appeared to have reached the depths of inferiority.

PITTSBURGH fans are hopeful that League President Heydler will take these points into consideration in naming his two umpires for the series to work with Nallin and Ormsby. They hope that he will be governed by the work of the various umpires on his staff during the regular season and that he will appoint two of those who have given the greatest satisfaction and have proved themselves more confident than their mates.

Their concern on this score is due to the fact that it has been President Heydler's policy in recent years not to appoint the best men each fall as proved by their season's records, but to use a sort of rotation system in order to give most of his men a chance to figure in the extra money that is paid out for umpiring in the series.

UNDER the present system, each umpire who officiates in the world series receives a remuneration of $2,500, in addition to his regular salary for the season, and it is President Heydler's idea to "keep peace in the family" and have "fair play" all around by allowing his umpires to get a piece of the financial pie in their regular turns by making different appointments from year to year down through his list of diamond judges.

In the last three world series five different National League umpires have appeared, these being Bill Klem, Hank O'Day, Cy Rigler, Barry McCormick and Bob Hart.

This year, if the league head sticks to his policy, a couple of new names will be added to the list, and that is what Pittsburgh fans hope President Heydler will refrain from doing.

WITH all due regard for the fairness of the National League boss in desiring to divide the melon so that each of his umpires will get a share of it in turn, it would appear from the outside that the best interests of baseball, and the general wish to have the world series decided fairly on the merits of the contending teams, demand that the best men on the staff be appointed. The two teams that play in the world series annually are in there because they've proved themselves to be the best in their leagues. If they had not proved themselves to be the best they would not have won their respective pennants, and would not be allowed to play for the big stakes.

The same ought to go for the umpires. Only those who have demonstrated throughout the season that they are superior to their mates should be allowed to handle such important games. One poor decision by an incompetent man at a critical stage might cause the superior club to lose the deciding game and the series itself.

FOLLOWING out the same line of reasoning from President Heydler's rotation system, it might be argued that in order to be fair, Manager Donie Bush of the Pirates ought to take out Pie Traynor and send Heinie Groh or Hal Rhyne to third base in his stead because Traynor played in the last world series in which Pittsburgh participated.

Or that inasmuch as Babe Ruth has already participated in seven world series, Manager Miller Huggins of the Yanks ought to keep him on the bench and let Bob Paschal or Cedric Durst patrol right field.

THOSE players are in there because, like their teams as a whole, they proved themselves the teams that were best in their respective leagues, and from the standpoint of good baseball the umpires in the series also ought to be the men who are known to be the best in their circuits.

Ruth Hits 60th To Smash Mark For Homers

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP.)—The baseball season has ended successfully for Babe Ruth. In the next to the last game of the Yanks in the American League season Babe produced No. 60 yesterday, establishing a new record for home runs in a single season.

While some 8,000 fans got a thrill, Babe crashed the ball into the bleachers to erase his old mark of 59, first achieved by himself in 1921, which he tied on Thursday.

Babe had been pulling for the new mark for six years. The veteran, Pitcher Zachary, of the Senators, had the distinction of hurling the ball which made the dream come true. It happened in the eighth inning with one strike and one ball on the Babe.

Col. Ruppert paid more than $1,000 for each home run, as the idol of the baseball fans rates $70,000 per year.

Since 1915, when he started bludgeoning with the Boston Red Sox, Ruth has patterned out 416 of his mammoth wallops. Figure demons have doped out that if the distances of Ruth's 416 big drives were pieced together they would stretch for 50 miles. Delving further, it has been found that the Babe has traveled approximately 30 miles on the base paths in scoring on all circuit belts.

Not until 1919 did Ruth start corraling four-baggers to any noticeable extent. He made 29 in that season with the Red Hose. With that same team he connected for four home runs in 1915, three in 1916, two in 1917 and 11 in 1918.

This is what he has done with the Yanks: 1920, 54 homers; 1921, 59; 1922, 35; 1923, 41; 1924, 46; 1925, 25; 1926, 47; to date in 1927, 60.

a team that will make its own breaks. And that counts a lot.

Geneva College of Beaver Falls is in Lewisburg for a contest with Bucknell. Bucknell says it fears Geneva. Well it may. The Covenanter eleven of 1927 is stronger than the 1926 team, and that is saying a lot, and all this despite the fact there is no Cal Hubbard playing an end. Geneva will be a favorite to sink the Bisons today.

Down at Charleston, W. Va., West Virginia University's Rodger-coached varsity will try conclusions with Pat Herron's Washington and Lee warriors. This game is attracting the major portion of interest in West Virginia, and will give the Mountaineer fans an opportunity to size up the eleven that is to face Pitt here next week.

BIGGER AND BETTER BABE

BABE RUTH

Who went his old self one better when he broke his world record for home runs by crashing out his sixtieth in yesterday's game. After being given a hard chase all season by his teammate, Lou Gehrig, it was thought the Bambino would find his old mark of 59, set in 1921, too tough a hurdle to take, but he came on and cleared the barrier. The fans will see a recrowned King of Swat in action when the Bambino goes to the plate against the Pirates in the world series at Forbes Field next week.

SANDLOT GRID TEAMS START

GAMES TODAY

Allison Park at Herman's Homewood Club.

Haynes Billiards at McKeesport Olympics.

Chalfont Tigers at Mortins.

Majestics at Springdale Buccaneers.

Braddock Park at Hyde Park.

Blawnox at Glassport Odds.

Marshall Tech at Valencia A. C.

Superior at Pleasant Valley.

Braddock Collegians at McChesneytown.

Wellingers at W. J. Soosts (Mellon field).

With Herman's Homewood club swinging into action today at the East End Playgrounds, and the Haynes Billiards Colored stars meeting the McKeesport Olympics, and the Glassport Odds clashing with the highly touted Blaw-Nox gridders, local fans following the fortunes of the independent gridiron have three classy games heading quite a long list of scheduled games in the tri-state territory today.

Irish Tyler has primed that East End combination for another good season, with a number of independent stars in the lineup all the best clubs will be met in the elimination race, Allison Park is no set up and the fans out in the East End are looking forward to a good game.

Up in McKeesport the fans are fortunate to have two games to select from. At Glassport the Odds will meet the Blaw-Nox outfit which astounded local [illegible] defeating the Tiffany Tigers last week in the opening games.

Then at Cycler Park the McKeesport Olympic coming back into big time independent football will meet the Haynes Billiard Colored stars from Ohio. This trio of battles heading the list should show the class of some of the independent contenders for the titular honors this season.

Fans will watch with interest the Odds, Homewood, Olympic, and Blaw-Nox form in the battles today. Other games are listed for Springdale when the Buccaneers meet the Majestics. Chalfont Tigers will meet the Mortons at Etna, Hyde Park from Westmorland County will meet the Braddock Park Arrows, Braddock Collegians face a stiff test at McChesneytown, Marshall Tech meets Valencia A. C. on the Butler Plank. Out on the North Side the Pleasant Valley Tigers will stage a local derby with the Superior club.

DRAKE SENDS TWO TEAMS EAST FOR NAVY CLASH

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 1.—More than two full teams will comprise the Drake varsity football squad when the Bulldogs start East early next week to take on the United States Naval Academy in an intersectional battle at Annapolis October 8, according to tentative plans made public by Head Coach Ossie Solem today.

In that shipment of gridders will be included nine lettermen from a year ago and a first-class contingent of sophomores. The lettermen include Bill Cook, fullback; Archie Johnson, halfback; Irving Meyers, quarterback; Clarence Simpson, center; Charles (Chuck) Delmege, end; Lester Jones, Roland Anderson, Ray Helser and Gibson Holliday, all linemen. These players made the trip to Annapolis a year ago when Drake went down before the Middies, 24-7.

TODAY'S GAMES.
DISTRICT LEAGUE.

U. S. & S. at Central A. C. (Forsythe).

Turtle Creek Thistles at Pittsburgh Celtics (Doneghay).

New Kensington at Leechburg Steels (Sherrard).

Pittsburgh Sport at German Club (Brown).

SCOTTISH CLAN LEAGUE.

McPherson at Gordon (Hulet).

Cameron at Clan Grant (Corns).

SIX games are carded today for soccerite locally to become enthused over. All the games are well balanced on previous form, with the stellar test to be served up at Lawrence Park when two undefeated aggregations, the Celtics and Thistles, tangle in the District League.

Another good game will be played out on the Perrysville highway when Pittsburgh Rovers with a sad recollection of the national challenge cup still fresh in their minds travel to meet the Sport combination in the District League. This should be a good fight, with the Rovers classed as pennant winners.

In the Scottish Clan League the McPhersons will travel to Ambridge to meet Gordon. This will be the opening home game for the Bridgeworkers and a banner crowd is expected.

The Switch and Signal boys will meet the Central A. C. and this should result in another brace of points for the Swissvale aggregation. Central plays a nice scientific brand of soccer, but the goal getting dash is missing around the penalty area.

Pittsburgh Transformers would like to book games abroad with teams in 20-30 class. Call Fairfax 3492; ask for John.

JUNIOR SERIES SCENE SHIFTS

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 1.—(AP.)—Five hundred Toledo fans followed their champions of the American Association here today, hopeful of seeing their team register another victory against the Buffalo Internationals in the second game of the little world series.

Buffalo will be the battleground for the third game tomorrow, after which the teams return to Toledo Tuesday to resume the series until one team has won five games.

Bobby Veach and Jess Barnes, the Toledo twirler, joined in nailing the first game for the American Association champions, 5 to 2. While Barnes held the Bisons to five scattered hits, Veach drove in three Toledo runs with a home run clout that cleared the fence, and socked out a long triple and a pair of singles.

The LIFE AND LETTERS OF WOODROW WILSON

Wilson's Early Ambition Points to Senate

In College His Thoughts Turn To Government Leadership; He Pictures Himself in Senatorial Toga; as Governor; Never as President.

In yesterday's installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson," published in the Sun-Telegraph, a picture was given of the personal power which Wilson wielded over his college mates, which power they early recognized. Withal, he was intensely human, as was made plain by the incidents told.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

(Copyright, The Doubleday, Page Co.)

Letters to College Friends

With some of the friends of that time Woodrow Wilson carried on an ardent correspondence all his life, letters full of expressions of his affection.

"I believe that I love the fellows of that crowd and value the genuine friendships existing amongst us now more than I ever did before," he wrote to Robert Bridges in 1885.

"I often long for a renewal of our old comradeship more than I can tell you," he said in a letter to Bridges in 1918. "The old love never dies down for a moment, but I can't keep myself from occasional heart-sickness now and again, because of the dispersion of the old crowd and the necessity which keeps us apart."

And even during the stress and sorrow of his crowded later years he could write:

"It was a deep distress to me that I could not get over to Charlie Mitchell's funeral. His death has affected me very deeply. My thought, like yours, goes back to the old days of our delightful comradeship, and those memories, thank God, are a permanent possession. Death seems to me in such instances a very unreal thing, but it has this terrible aspect of reality, that it does take the dear fellow away from us for the days to come, and I grieve with all my heart."

A Characteristic Letter

We have one letter from him written to his classmate J. Edwin Webster during a summer vacation from college, which is here reproduced entire for the glimpse it gives of the spontaneity of his friendship and his keen interest in the politics of the time:

"Columbia, S. C., July 23, 1878.

"Dear Ed, alias Daniel:

"I suppose that my long delay in writing to you has filled you with secret joy because you promised to write to me only on condition of receiving first an epistle from me. But I have not by any means forgotten my promise and I do not intend to leave you any excuse for not writing to me but that of disinclination. You need not think that you are the only one whom I have neglected in the matter of letter-writing. I have been neglectful of all alike. Talcott was the first to be favored (?) by me and it is but two or three days since I wrote my first letter to him. I promised to write to 'Pomp' Woods and Bridges, but have yet written to none of them. They all seem to expect me to open the correspondence for some reason or other, I hardly know why. I suppose, however, that they think my writing powers—my gift of gab—unlimited. Although the vacation is well nigh half over, I give you fair warning that I shall expect no less than two letters from you before college opens.

"And now I proceed to ask the all-important question, How's Buffalo? I hope that your correspondence with the fair inhabitant of that fair city flows happily on. Have you yet succeeded in replacing the lost watch ornament?

"As you will see by the heading of this letter, I am in Columbia on a visit to my younger sister. I have been here for a week and will leave for home in a few days. The weather has been oppressively warm here, but by keeping quiet and idle I am managing to keep comparatively comfortable. I believe that you know that I lived here for some four or five years just before I went to Princeton. I feel at home upon coming here, where I have quite a large number of acquaintances, some of whom it is very pleasant to meet again.

"Columbia is the scene of some of my old love adventures, of which I have from time to time given you some partial accounts. You may naturally imagine that this place, therefore, recalls some strange memories to my mind. I have made a considerable fool of myself here in times not very long past. The Columbia people have a good deal of the old South Carolina hospitality and hearty warmth of manner and make very kind and pleasant friends. The fair ones especially are most of them free from affectation and pretense. I have just returned from calling on a whole family of girls who are all old acquaintances. They all knew me as a boy and embryonic young man and know me as 'Tom.' I always enjoy getting among people who know me well enough to throw aside the formal prefix Mr., and call me Tommie, simply.

Vacation Romping

"Much of my leisure time I employ in the undignified occupation of romping with the younger of my two bright nephews here. He delights in having me chase him on all fours, and I constantly indulge him to the material detriment of my breeches. The little chap has an immense amount of determination housed in his diminutive frame and can rule me with ease. He will be master of those with whom he comes in contact as long as he lives, probably. He has already interrupted me more than once in the writing of this letter and I am finishing it while his morning sleep gives me temporary freedom. I believe I am quite a willing slave, however.

"One would not think that this was the same city that it was during the campaign of '76. Hampton has now long been in quiet possession and has administered the government of the state with more ability and success than might have been expected in view of the fact that he is in most respects a very ordinary man. He is certainly no statesman—little more than a rough and honest soldier with a soldier's aptness at orderly administration and the control of the rank and file of his followers. As usual politics is the all-engrossing topic of conversation. Southerners seem born with an interest in public affairs, though it is too often of late a very ignorant interest.

"I have not received Woods' scrawl yet nor a letter from Bridges with its quaint caption: 'Friend Wilson.' I hope soon to hear from you, however—the sooner the better.

"Your very sincere friend,
"T. W. WILSON."

Wilson enjoyed the theater. He was fascinated by "Pinafore" and sang the airs to his friends. He went to visit a classmate, William B. Isham, in New York and saw Booth in "Othello" at the matinee and was so carried away that he went again to see him as "Iago" in the evening. He and his friend, Hiram Woods, spent all their money on a trip to New York to see "Julius Caesar."

His Early Aspirations

We have thus a picture of an ardent, enthusiastic, friendly, brilliant, intense young student guided underneath by a deep and serious purpose to make the most out of his life. We find evidences of his high aspirations—the remarkable definiteness and clarity of them—as well as his capacity for devoted friendship, in his account of his "solemn covenant" with his classmate, Charles Talcott.

"I remember forming with Charlie Talcott (a class-mate and very intimate friend of mine) a solemn covenant that we would school all our powers and passions for the work of establishing the principles we held in common; that we would acquire knowledge that we might have power; and that we would drill ourselves in all the arts of persuasion, but especially in oratory (for he was a born orator if any man ever was), that we might have facility in leading others into our ways of thinking and enlisting them in our purposes. And we didn't do this in merely boyish enthusiasm, though we were blinded by a very boyish assurance with regard to the future and our ability to mould the world as our hands might please. It was not so long ago but that I can still feel the glow and the pulsations of the hopes and the purposes of that moment—nay, it was not so long ago but that I still retain some of the faith that then prompted me."

Charles Talcott, who was among Wilson's closest friends, had a notable career which led him to Congress in 1911, but it was cut short by his untimely death.

"There was," writes Robert Bridges, "a certain integrity in his ideal from boy to man that gave his friends a peculiar confidence in his ultimate destiny as a leader of men. It was a jest of his in college which ended 'when I meet you in the Senate, I'll argue that out with you.'"

He had all along that instinct, familiar in the youth of men of power, of unusual capacities, of a future—"When I meet you in the Senate"—for which he was to spare no pains or labor in preparation. He was so certain of his powers that he wrote out a number of cards in his own flowing hand:

"THOMAS WOODROW WILSON SENATOR FROM VIRGINIA."

It is singular, however, that in his wildest flights of imagination he seems never to have imagined himself as President of the United States. Secretary of the Navy, yes, and Senator from Virginia, and Governor of Virginia, but never the White House.

Refused to Win Prize

One incident of his senior year is of the highest interpretive importance. It represented a kind of crisis in his life—a formal decision which was to govern his conduct on many future occasions where a conflict arose between what he considered a principle, a "settled conviction," and his desire for success, or his devotion to his society, his organization, his "crowd."

This was the Lynde prize debate between the two famous old societies at Princeton—Whig and Clio. The final debate was one of the noteworthy events of commencement, and the prize one of the highly regarded honors of the senior class. Wilson was considered by his own hall—the Whig—and by the college generally as its outstanding speaker, the man most likely to win. We have evidence that he himself looked forward eagerly to the debate, preparing himself thoroughly upon the announced question, "Free Trade vs. a Tariff for Protection." He had been for some time a convinced free trader; a disciple of Cobden, who was one of his heroes, and his study of the question only sharpened his belief.

Under the rules of the contest, preliminary debates were held in each hall to select the three speakers who were to appear in the great final contest in June.

On the morning of the preliminary contest, when the lots were drawn, Wilson found that he must defend the tariff side. He arose once and announced that he was for free trade and could not argue against his convictions, that there would be no force nor sincerity behind what he said. As a result, the three men chosen by Whig Hall were Robert Bridges, M. G. Emery, Jr., and Samuel A. Harlow. Clio chose A. W. Halsey, Peter J. Hamilton and Chalmers Martin. In the final debate in June, Halsey (Clio) took first prize, Bridges (Whig) second and Harlow (Whig), third.

By his decision not to enter the preliminaries, young Wilson undoubtedly lost a prize that he might, in the judgment of his fellows, easily have won, and he lost not only for himself, but for his hall.

A Criticism Answered

Was he right? Though this was a mere college contest yet it involved issues often raised at later times in his career. Which was the more important, a man's personal convictions—his intellectual integrity—or his obligations to his friends, his group? Is winning the important thing?

It may be said that this was only a kind of college game, and that he need not have been so squeamish, but to Wilson, with his high aspirations and his intense convictions, to argue for a cause that he utterly disbelieved in was intolerable. Prof. Sumner, of Yale, once expressed exactly the same belief in these words:

"We cannot express opinions which we do not honestly entertain, even in jest, without straining our sense of truth and losing the delicacy of our sense of right.

One of Wilson's biographers observes that "he refused to take pot luck with his fellows. . . . The feeling of his society, left unprotected by his withdrawal, he did not understand. Nor did the desire of some other boy for a favorite side of the debate ever get to him. If only the gang at Augusta could have larruped the habit of teamwork into him, the 'Happy Warrior' might not have had so many melancholy hours."

This quotation is from William Allen White's "Woodrow Wilson." But White's account is mistaken. Wilson's society had not "made him its debater and staked its game upon him," nor was he "chosen upon the final team." A letter to the author from Robert Bridges (August 9, 1926) says: "We were all sorry that he withdrew, but he had not been chosen and had not accepted any trust. Any one of us could have dropped out in the same way."

A Man of Decision

One wonders whether the trouble in America today is not due to the fact that the gang has "larruped" the intellectual integrity out of its leadership. Every one wants to play the game to win, to get the immediate prize. The organization is more important than the truth. The college debate, indeed the Congressional debate growing out of it, too often has become a farcial game in which the debaters themselves have been "larruped by the gang" until they have no positive convictions. Everything must be smooth, politic, expedient. The gang, the machine are supreme; the man of faith in his own convictions and the courage to stand by them rarer and rarer.

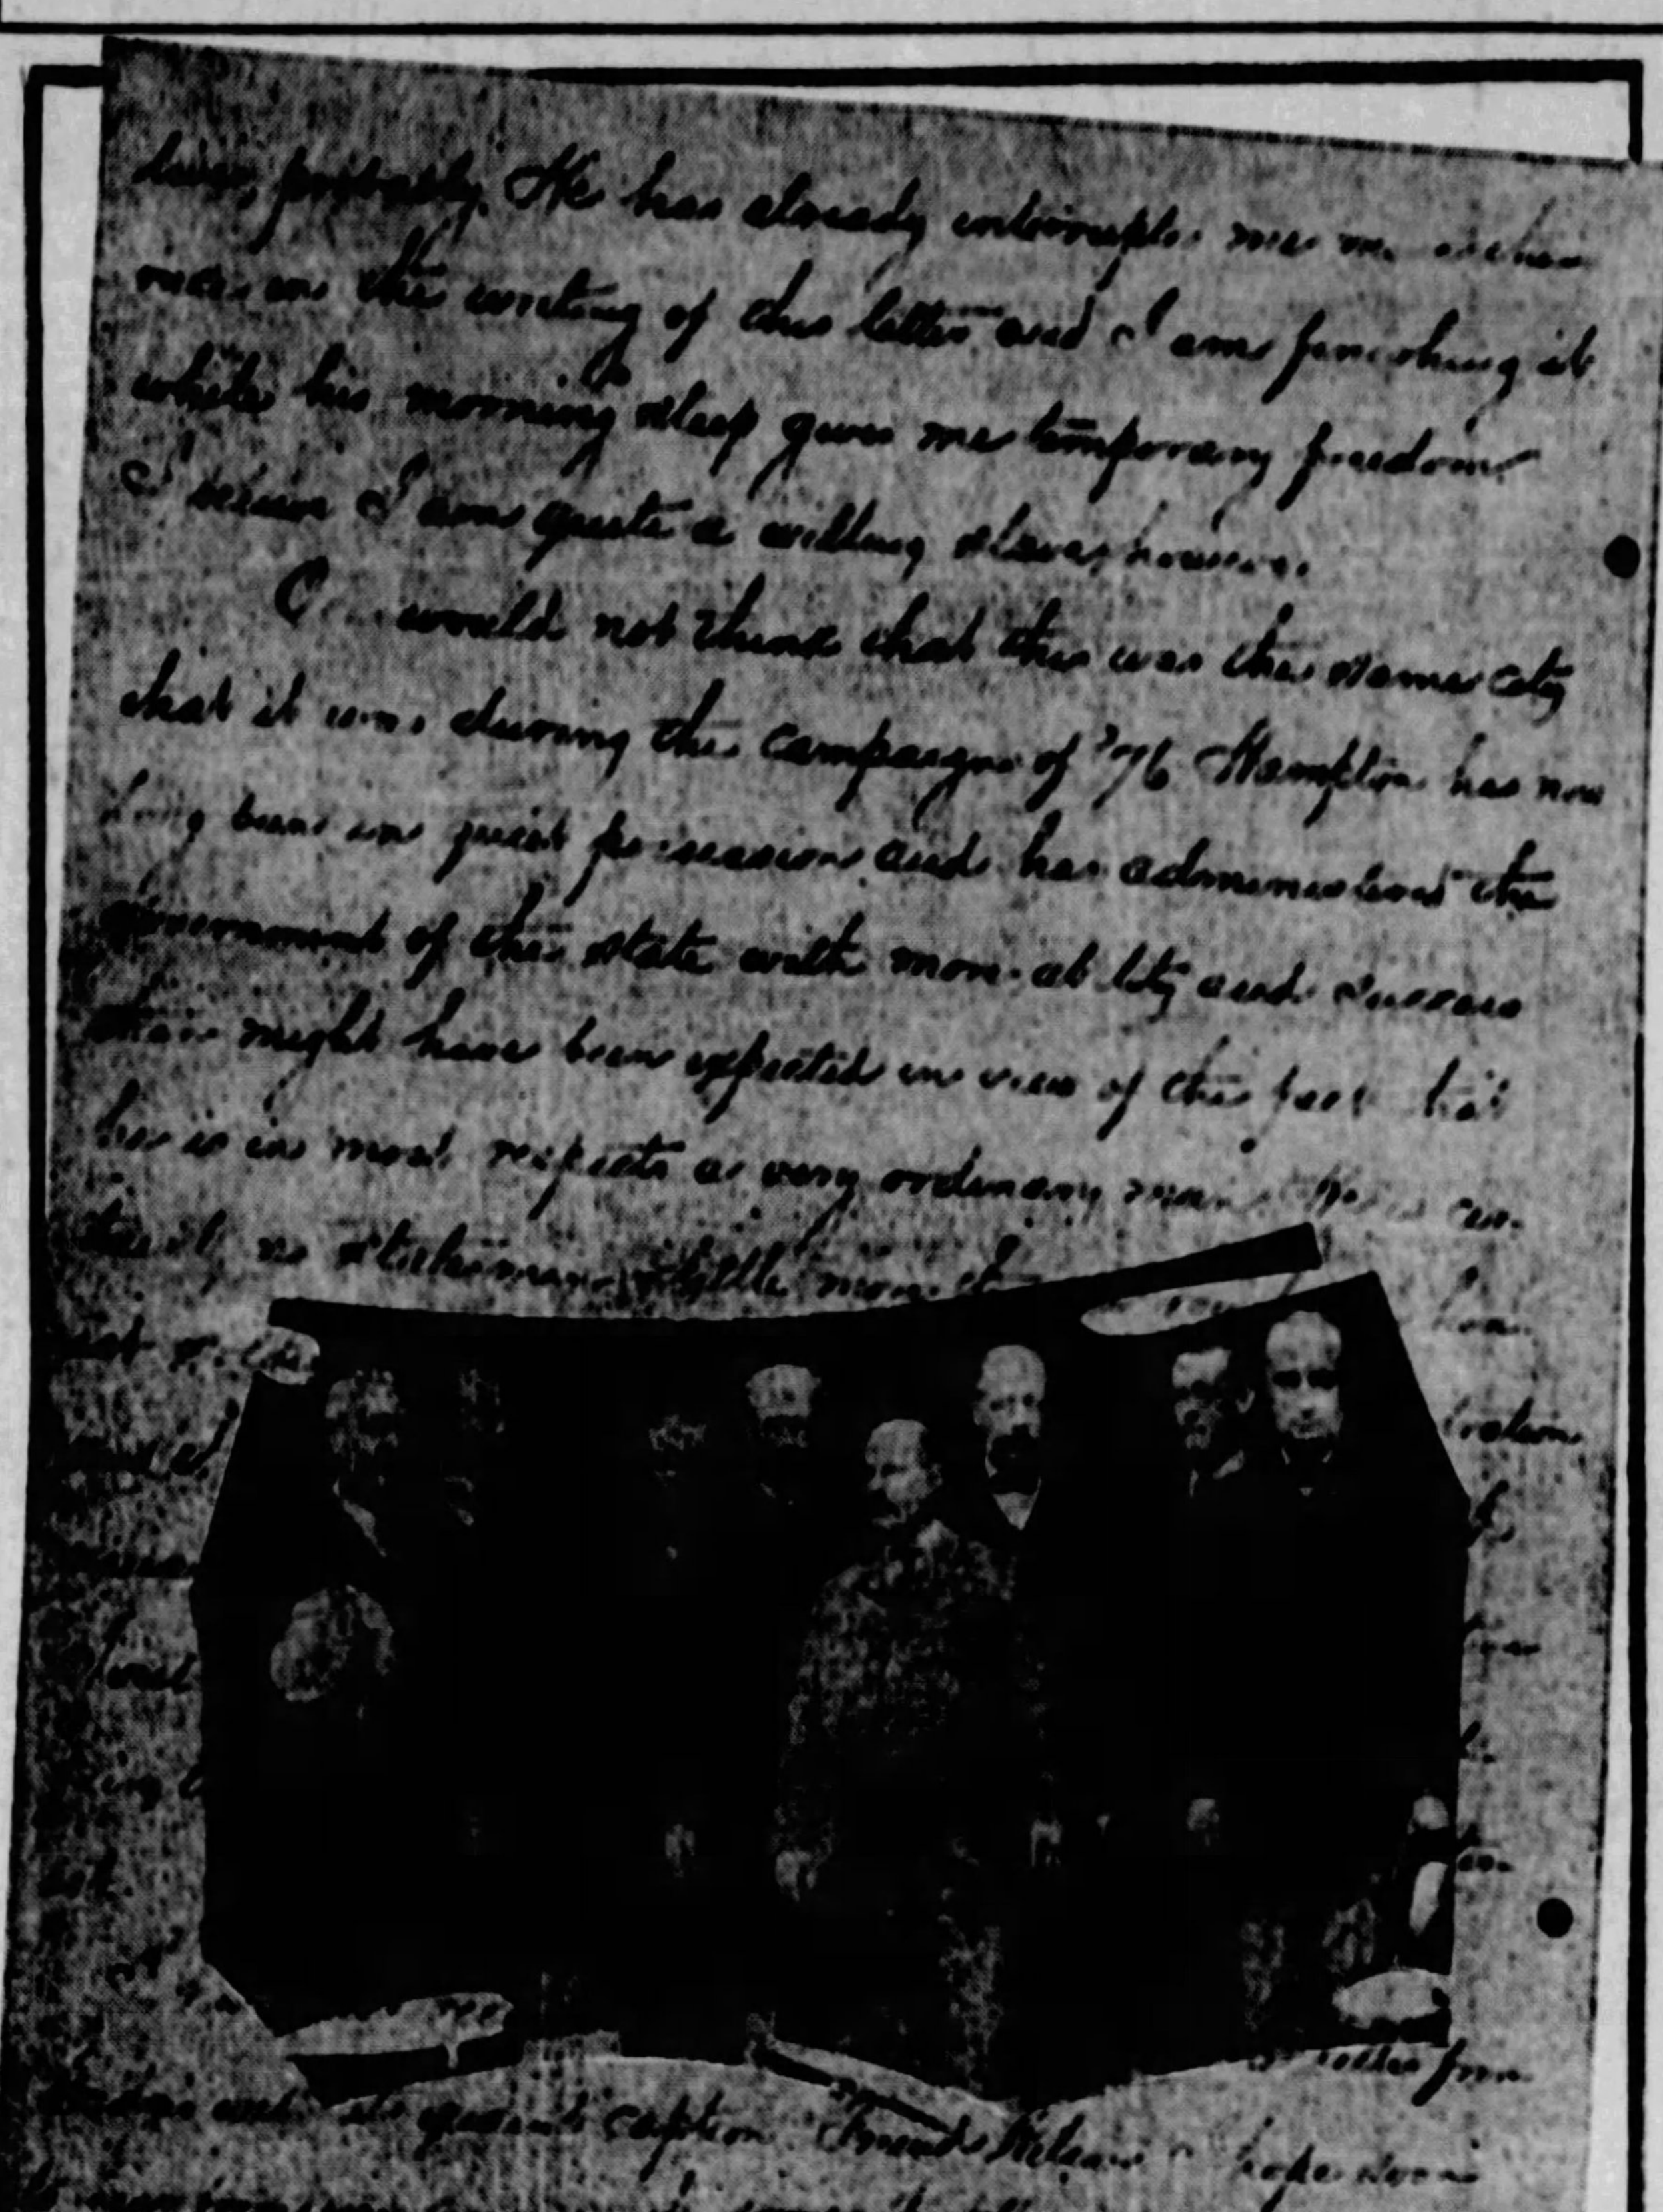
But while he is charged with sacrificing his society by failing to go in against his convictions and win the trivial college prize, this young student has shed an undying fame upon his hall, his class, his college and his country.

Again and again in after life he made the same decision and it raised the same questions. The "larruping of the gang" never moved him. His convictions, religious, political, educational, were the essence of the man. If the crowd was with him, well and good; if it was not he would stand alone. This is not arguing that he was always right, that he did not make serious mistakes, that he might not have been more conciliatory; it is not arguing that he did not change in his beliefs; it is setting forth the kind of man he was—which is the purpose of biography.

He was graduated from Princeton in June, 1879, and returned to Wilmington, N. C., where his family was then living.

Wilson's notable career at the University of Virginia, where he became known as an orator and made many lasting friendships, will be described in tomorrow's chapter.

WILSON'S LOVE FOR CHUMS UNDYING



SCHOOLMATES ADMIRE HIS HUMANNESS

LAWYER IS ACCUSED IN MURDER PROBE

HAMMONTON, N. J., Oct. 1.—(AP.)—Search in a graveyard to determine whether a pistol was buried occupied the attention of authorities today in the investigation of the mysterious slaying of Dr. A. William Lilliendahl.

The burial plot in Oak Grove Cemetery owned by Willis Beach, fugitive accused of abetting in the slaying, yielded no trace of a pistol when partly dug up yesterday and the diggers were ordered to continue their work.

A few days before he disappeared, Beach, a poultry dealer and friend of Mrs. Lilliendahl, said he had a conference with a tombstone maker in the graveyard on September 11, the day the doctor was shot while motoring with his wife.

The authorities had information which led them to believe that Beach might be in Baltimore or Washington, but search for him in Washington at the home of relatives of Edison Hedges, Beach's attorney, failed.

LAWYER ACCUSED

Hedges is under $2,000 bail on two indictments charging him with obstructing justice. He is accused of urging his client to leave the state. He denies, however, that he made statements to reporters upon which the charges are based.

ENDS LIFE READING ESSAY ON DEATH

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—A youth, feverishly eager to apply a smattering of science and philosophy to the imponderable mysteries of life and death, was overwhelmed by his subject and added another case to the strange epidemic of student suicides.

The philosophical seeker, Franklin Chattan, 24, student at the Grand Central Art School, was found dead in a gas-filled room on Lexington avenue, propped up in bed with a novel, "Death of a Young Man," by W. L. River, and a confused essay of his own, "What Is Death?"

It was ended in the middle of a sentence, as though he died while attempting to record his planned adventure.

"Each of us is present at his own death," was one line from his paper. The essay also bore mention of "superman"—a conception of Nietzschean philosophy that unbalanced young Loeb and Leopold, the Chicago student-slayers.

Chattan's treatise was eight and three-eighths pages long. Beside it police found $13 and a bank book showing an account of $30.88 had been closed out September 17. No one remembered him at the art school.

Sally Checks Davidson and Sloan; She Ponders on Millie's Sarcasm

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys ill health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for MR. PEEVEY afternoons. BEAU and MILLIE, her sister and brother give almost nothing to help her support the home. In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, a "dancin' fool," who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose real estate office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Millie is his secretary and he becomes infatuated with her. Millie, however, prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON. Davidson is secretly in love with Sally, and Millie is jealous of her. The wayside inn business does not thrive, and finally Aunt Em hires a jazz band and Sally puts on a dainty little "shimmy" dance. The combination makes a hit, and the business "peps up." John Nye comes one day to ask Sally to work for him once more, but Sally refuses again. Millie has told her that John Nye laughed about all the extra jobs she did for him and she believes Millie. She decided to forget him and asks Ted Sloan to stay to supper with her and Millie and Davidson one Saturday night.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"I'M NOT conceited, Sally," she answered soberly, "but I know I could." Again she nodded her bright head in calm self-satisfaction.

"I don't know why it is, but I can make any man I want to make," she ran on. "I'm not any prettier than other girls, as far as I can see. And I'm not half as smart as you, for instance. But there's something about me that men fall for like a skyrocket. . . What is it, Sally? I mean it."

Sally stared at her in wonder. It must be marvelous, she was thinking, to feel that way about yourself—to be sure of your beauty and your charm and your power to draw men like a magnet.

"And yet," she said to herself later, as she brushed out her hair before the glass, "And yet, Millie's all wrong. Davidson isn't in love with her—and Ted isn't, and never will be."

Then another thought struck her. Perhaps Millie was wrong about John Nye, too! Perhaps he wasn't in love with her any more, either! Perhaps he wasn't jealous of Davidson, but just bored with Millie lately.

"And maybe he did come out here that day to see me, after all," she told herself. The thought soothed and comforted her.

That night he came again.

CHAPTER L.

THE dinner guests who filled Aunt Em's brightly-lighted rooms that Saturday night had a rare treat.

For not only did Sally and Ted dance three times—and they were really good—but Davy Davidson got up and sang some of the songs made famous by Nick Lucas. Like most Welshmen, he had a beautiful, deep voice, and some of the more sentimental diners who had flasks concealed in their hip pockets or under the edge of the tablecloth had tears in their eyes when he finally sat down.

The last song he sang was the song that Sally had heard John Nye whistling on that day nearly a year ago when she had noticed him for the first time—"High—high—high, up on the hill—"

Her deep, shadowy eyes were wistful as she watched him come back to the little table in the private dining room. So wistful that Davy—who couldn't believe that she wasn't in love with him—was sure of it at last.

He reached for her hand under the table, and Sally thrust his violently away from her and got up.

"Come on, Ted, let's go out and get a breath of air," she said to her red-headed dancing partner, who was just beginning his dessert of cherry pie.

He sprang up, and together they went out into the cool, darkly green depths of Aunt Em's garden. But Sally knew every inch of the place by heart, and she found some straw cushions in the back yard where she and Aunt Em had sat doing their weekly mending that morning.

"I can't stand that Davidson man," said Sally with a shudder as they sat down. She put her head back against the trunk of the old willow tree behind her, and looked up at the moon.

Instantly she felt Ted's arm going around her shoulders, and he edged closer to her along the glass.

"Hands off!" said Sally, crisply. "I didn't come out here to neck, Ted."

But plainly Ted had thought hopefully that that was exactly what she had come for. . . In his simple and short experience that was what girls usually left a brightly-lighted place and went out into the darkness with a man for. As usual, Sally baffled him by not doing the expected thing.

"Well, what did you come for then?" he asked Sally, "to look at the moon?"

He meant that for a mild joke. It was unthinkable to him that anyone should want to look at a moon. A good automobile—a pretty girl—a peppy show—those were the things that young Mr. Sloan considered worth looking at. Certainly a moon was nothing to fire cannons about. Not in his estimation!

"Yes, to look at the moon—partly," answered Sally, coolly. "And partly to get away from Millie's Davidson. I can't bear him—" Her voice trailed off as she thought of the other night when he had kissed her so impatiently, and with such hard eagerness.

Then she remembered something else that had happened that night. Something that she had been turning over and over in her mind all week—the thing that Millie had said to her: "Even John Nye had to laugh about all the funny things you did for him."

For the thousandth time she wondered how he had come to tell Millie about the sandwiches she had brought him when he missed his lunch, the flowers she had put and his desk one morning, the pencils she had sharpened for him. In the silvered darkness she flushed with shame and humiliation, remembering those things. How she wished now that she never had done them for him!

"After all, Teddy's the only man who really treats me decently," she said to herself. "And I treat him like the dirt under my feet—it's pretty mean, isn't it?"

She turned her head and looked at him. He was looking at her and his face was very close to hers. His shoulder touched hers, and through the thin linen of his shirt she could feel that he was trembling.

"Sally," he said slowly, huskily. Even in the dim light she could see the sharp lines of longing that were in his face that was so cheerful and boyish most of the time.

"Sally, don't you know I'm crazy about you?"

"Are you?" asked Sally. "Honest, for sure." She moved away from him the least bit.

"Honest for sure!" She could tell that he meant every syllable of it, and more. "Do you think I'd get up and dance every night like a jumping Jack—make a daggoned fool of myself—for anyone but you?—Do you—Not on your ballroom socks!"

He covered her hand, that lay between them on the grass, with one of his. "Not on your precious young life!" he repeated, and put his arm tight around her. "But I'd do anything for you. Anything you asked me to!"

He drew her head down to his shoulder, and leaned over, looking down at her. Sally knew—as every girl knows accurately at such a time—that he was going to kiss her.

"Why should I care," she thought. "He really likes me—and no one else does—why should I care?"

His head bent lower—

Suddenly a light flashed into their faces, and then swerved away from them. A long touring car had rounded the corner of the house and had come to a standstill in the gravel-sweep beyond the lilac bushes.

Sally and Ted moved apart as a man got out of the car and started toward them, his quick feet crunching in it noisily.

"He's coming over here," murmured Ted, and just then the man spoke to them.

He asked one single word: "Millie?" It was John Nye's voice.

Too astonished to move, Sally could not even raise her voice to answer him. It was Ted who replied.

"No—it's Sally and me!" He jumped to his feet and held out his hand. Something in his voice told Sally that he was glad that John Nye had found them here together, their arms about each other. He had been jealous of John Nye ever since that night when he had come upon them in the little private dining room.

"O, I see," Nye answered quietly. "I see. Good night."

And then he swung about and went straight back to the long car that gleamed and shone under the moon. He got in, started it, and was off to a racing start. The pebbles showered about the wheels as they sped away down the drive.

"He didn't even ask where Millie was," said Sally dully, when he had gone. "Wasn't that the funniest thing you ever saw—the way he turned around and went without going into the house?"

Ted dropped down beside her again. "Yes, but let's not waste a perfectly good night and a hundred candle-power moon talking about John Nye and Millie. . . . Come here, woman, I'm going to show you what a real kiss is like!" He was very cocky and sure of himself.

But the spell of the moon and the summer night was gone for Sally—broken by the sound of a man's voice, saying seven short words into the darkness. She got up and slowly drew her hands away from Ted's hands that tried to hold her.

"No, I'm going in," she said, "and dance once more—just for the fun of it."

"I'll go with you," Ted put in, eagerly.

She shook her head.

"Oh, no, you'll never dance in there with me again" she declared firmly. "Now that I know how you feel about it, do you think I'd let you? Do you think I'd let you humiliate yourself for me? Not—as you would say, Ted—on your ballroom socks!"

She left him and went back to the little dining room where Millie and Davidson were sitting in silence at the table. Davidson was looking angry and ruffled and Millie seemed to be on the verge of tears.

That night after he was gone Sally heard her sobbing to herself in her room.

"I could cry, myself, to think of John Nye's finding me all wrapped up in Ted's arms—I'm sure he saw me," said Sally to her bright reflection in the mirror.

Then she decided that she was glad because he had come upon them there together.

"It showed him that I didn't do all those nice things for him because I was in love with him," she told herself with an energetic nod of her head. "He'll think, now, that I'm wild about Ted."

The thought gave her a certain painful pleasure.

That night Mabel'se son, Beauregard, Jr., was born in Bethlehem Hospital.

Sally drove her there at 2 in the morning in Aunt Emily's comfortable car. Beau followed in his own ramshackle red one. And at 4 he was a proud father.

Two weeks later Mabel brought her baby home, and Sally took upon herself an entirely new job. She became a sort of second mother to the tiny new bundle of pink, blossamy flesh that was Beauregard Jerome, Jr.

CHAPTER LI.

ONE night early in August a dreadful thing happened. It was a hot Saturday—an airless night, lit by a red moon that hung like a copper lantern low in the blue-black sky.

All evening long the dining room in the House by the Side of the Road had been packed with hungry revelers. All evening long the garden outside the house had been filled with automobiles that came and went through the wide gateway. All evening long Aunt Em's two little waitresses had rushed back and forth from the kitchen to the dining room, with trays of cool pink watermelon, bowls of cracked ice and platters of chicken Maryland in their hands.

Sally had danced four times, and made salads in the kitchen between dances. Then she had helped Aunt Em wash dishes, and at 1 o'clock, when she started upstairs to bed, she was dog-tired.

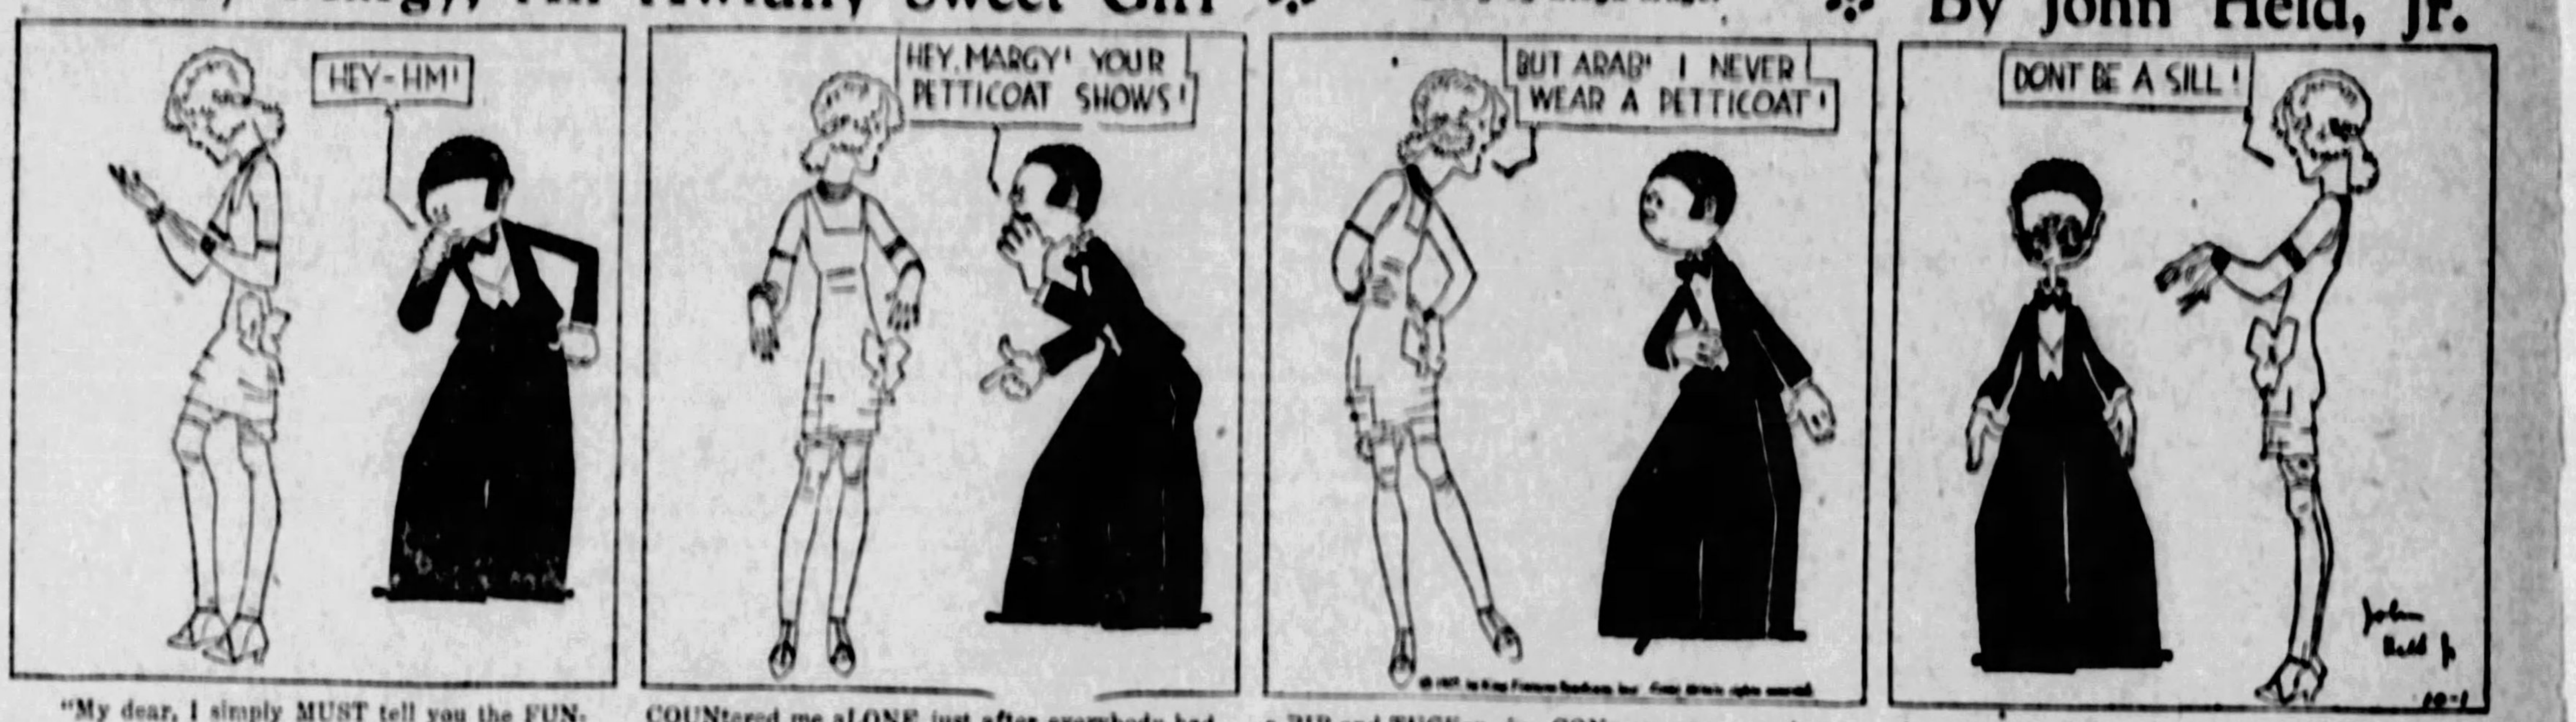
TO be fashionable it is highly essential that one be lopsided—only in the matter of clothes, however. The newest conceit Ritzy Rosey has adopted is a frock with one full sleeve and one tight one, with a draped effect on one side of the uneven skirt. All according to the dictates of gay Paree.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.



HEY-HM!
HEY, MARGY! YOUR PETTICOAT SHOWS!
BUT ARAB! I NEVER WEAR A PETTICOAT!
DON'T BE A SILL!
John Held Jr
10-1

"My dear, I simply MUST tell you the FUNniest INcident that transPIRED at this HOUSE party that Arab and NOIsy and I gouged IN on, because I mean you KNOW how ARab is all the time sort of PRIding himself on being a man-of-the-WORLD type and all? WELL, my dear, it was SIMply exCRUciating because he sort of enCOUNtered me aLONE just after everybody had dressed for DINner one night and I couldn't IMAgine why he acted all sort of hot and BOTHered—I mean he seemed overCOME with emBARrassment or something—you know the type! So I sort of WAITed exPECtantly for a proPOsal or something and I was actually all-of-a-BIB-and-TUCKer in CONsequence, my dear. WHAT do you s'pose he proceeded to anNOUNCE at this point in sort of subterRAnean ACcents? That my PETticoat was showing, no less! Can you BEAR it? I mean, I NEARly had hysTERics, because can you IMA gine a man of the WORLD thinking that girls still wore PETticoats! But I was HONestly conVULSED, no less, because when I sort of CASurally inFORMED him of his ERror, my dear, he proceeded to BLUSH like NOTHing HUman. HONestly, my dear, it LAID me an EGG because I REALLY think it is SIMply KILLing for a youth who has been aROUND as much as ARab to be so sort of naIVe and inGEnious and all about GIRLS—I mean I ACtually DO!"

WHAT'S the ANSWER?

1. Where is the "Lost World"?
2. For what town is muslin named?
3. Who is Michael Borodin?
4. Where is Mount Marcy?
5. Who made the first flag of the United States?
6. How long has it been known that there is gold in California?
7. When were billiards invented? How did they get their name?
8. What is the sidereal system?
9. What was the first book printed in the Anglo-American colonies
10. Who first said "Of the people, by the people, for the people"?

The answers to these questions may be found in tomorrow's paper.

Here are the answers to yesterday's questions.

1. Frederick A. Sterling is the first Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to the Irish Free State.
2. The Dutch plan to remove the Zuyder Zee by blocking it off by a dike and draining it. This will increase the country's total area by more than a tenth. Begun in 1925, the project is well under way and will probably be completed in ten years.
3. The best harbor in the United States is probably the Bay of San Francisco, which has anchorage sufficient for all the navies of the world. It is protected completely from the waves and winds of the open sea.
4. The "seventh continent" is Antartica. It approximates Europe in area.
5. Smooth-barked trees get off with the least injury from lightning, due to the ease with which water, a good conductor of the electric current, runs down their trunks.
6. The highest dam in the world is nearing completion at Pacoima Canyon, near Los Angeles, Cal. It is a 385-foot wall of masonry.
7. Ammonia is a colorless gas primarily obtained as a by-product in the manufacture of coke and illuminating gas.
8. Porto Rico means in Spanish "rich port." This name was given to the island because of the fertility of the soil and the plentiful supplies of food.
9. A tortilla is a flat cake made of corn meal by the Indian women of Mexico. They take the place of bread in the native diet.
10. Laity means the lay people as a whole as distinguished from the clergy. The singular is "layman."

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Two Ferocious Looking Foreigners Appear on the Scene

I ALWAYS have known my neighbor, Mrs. Ticer, as a brave woman, and a resourceful one as well. But never did she more ably demonstrate those qualities than in the seconds following the rush of the strange savage dog toward her son, Jerry.

As if endowed with superhuman strength and agility, she tore open the door, seized a hoe leaning against the kitchen porch and without a sound ran swiftly toward the dog.

But even as I followed her out, armed ineffectively with a broom the only thing within reach, I saw that more effective aid than ours was at hand. Continuously I had heard the raucous shouts from the other side of the barn and realized that while we could not see the men uttering them, they could see Jerry and the dog and were shouting at them.

There were two voices. One, guttural, in an alien tongue was calling some insistent command to the animal which sounded more like "Kill him," than anything else. But the other voice was shouting in English:

"Don't move! Stand still!"

Jerry will never be jailed for his brilliancy, but he possesses a good stock of native shrewdness, and, besides, he is used to dogs. So he stepped short in his tracks, and even as the dog reached him, it whirled again and stood motionless, a superb statue of obedient arrested movement.

The next second two men rounded the corner of the barn and ran up to us. They were followed by Jim, who evidently had been busy in the barn, and only just had realized that something unusual was afoot. Feeling unutterably absurd, I quietly slid my broom behind a convenient tree, but Mrs. Ticer still grasped her hoe, and a look at her flushed face and snapping eyes told me that she would be glad to use the weapon on either the dog or his masters who had let the animal loose.

But my eyes did not linger on Mrs. Ticer. There were more amazing things for me to see. I said to myself, as I faced the two owners of the dog, that rarely had I visioned odder or more repellent looking men.

Both were sturdily built, but while one was short and stocky, the other had the height, the mighty thews and the pantherlike grace of an ancient gladiator. Both men were heavily bearded, and their hair straggled over their ears and down their necks, uncut and uncombed. The shorter of the two, evidently the owner of the dog, which now stood motionless under his hand, had jet black hair, beard, mustache and eyebrows, while the taller man—I caught my breath in sheer amusement at the brilliant red of his hair and beard. Even his unusually bushy eyebrows were the same fiery color, and I suddenly recalled an old childish image I had had of an ancient English king, "Rufus the Red.'

"So sorry, so sorry," both men were repeating in so foreign an accent and such evident difficulty with English that it was torture to hear them. "Dog no bite," was their next contribution, and at that Mrs. Ticer took the rostrum.

'Don't hand me anything like that!" she exploded. "Bite! It would have torn my boy to pieces if he hadn't had sense enough to stand still, and you hadn't been close by. Now, let me tell you something. I don't care who you are or where you come from, but you've got to get that dog a muzzle and a chain and keep 'em on him, or I'll have the law on you."

The men looked blankly at her, that is the short one did. The tall man appeared to have some affliction of the eyelids which enabled him only to open them half way, so that it was hard to determine the color or expression of his eyes. Yet I gained the impression that they were dark and piercing, and a certain twitching of them told me that if he did not understand Mrs. Ticer's words, he did her tone and gestures and derived a cynical, even brutal amusement from them.

But the apparently blank look on both faces as if in ignorance of our language rang a little warning bell deep in my consciousness. One of those voices had shouted the command, "Don't move! Stand still!" in unmistakable English, free from any foreign accent.

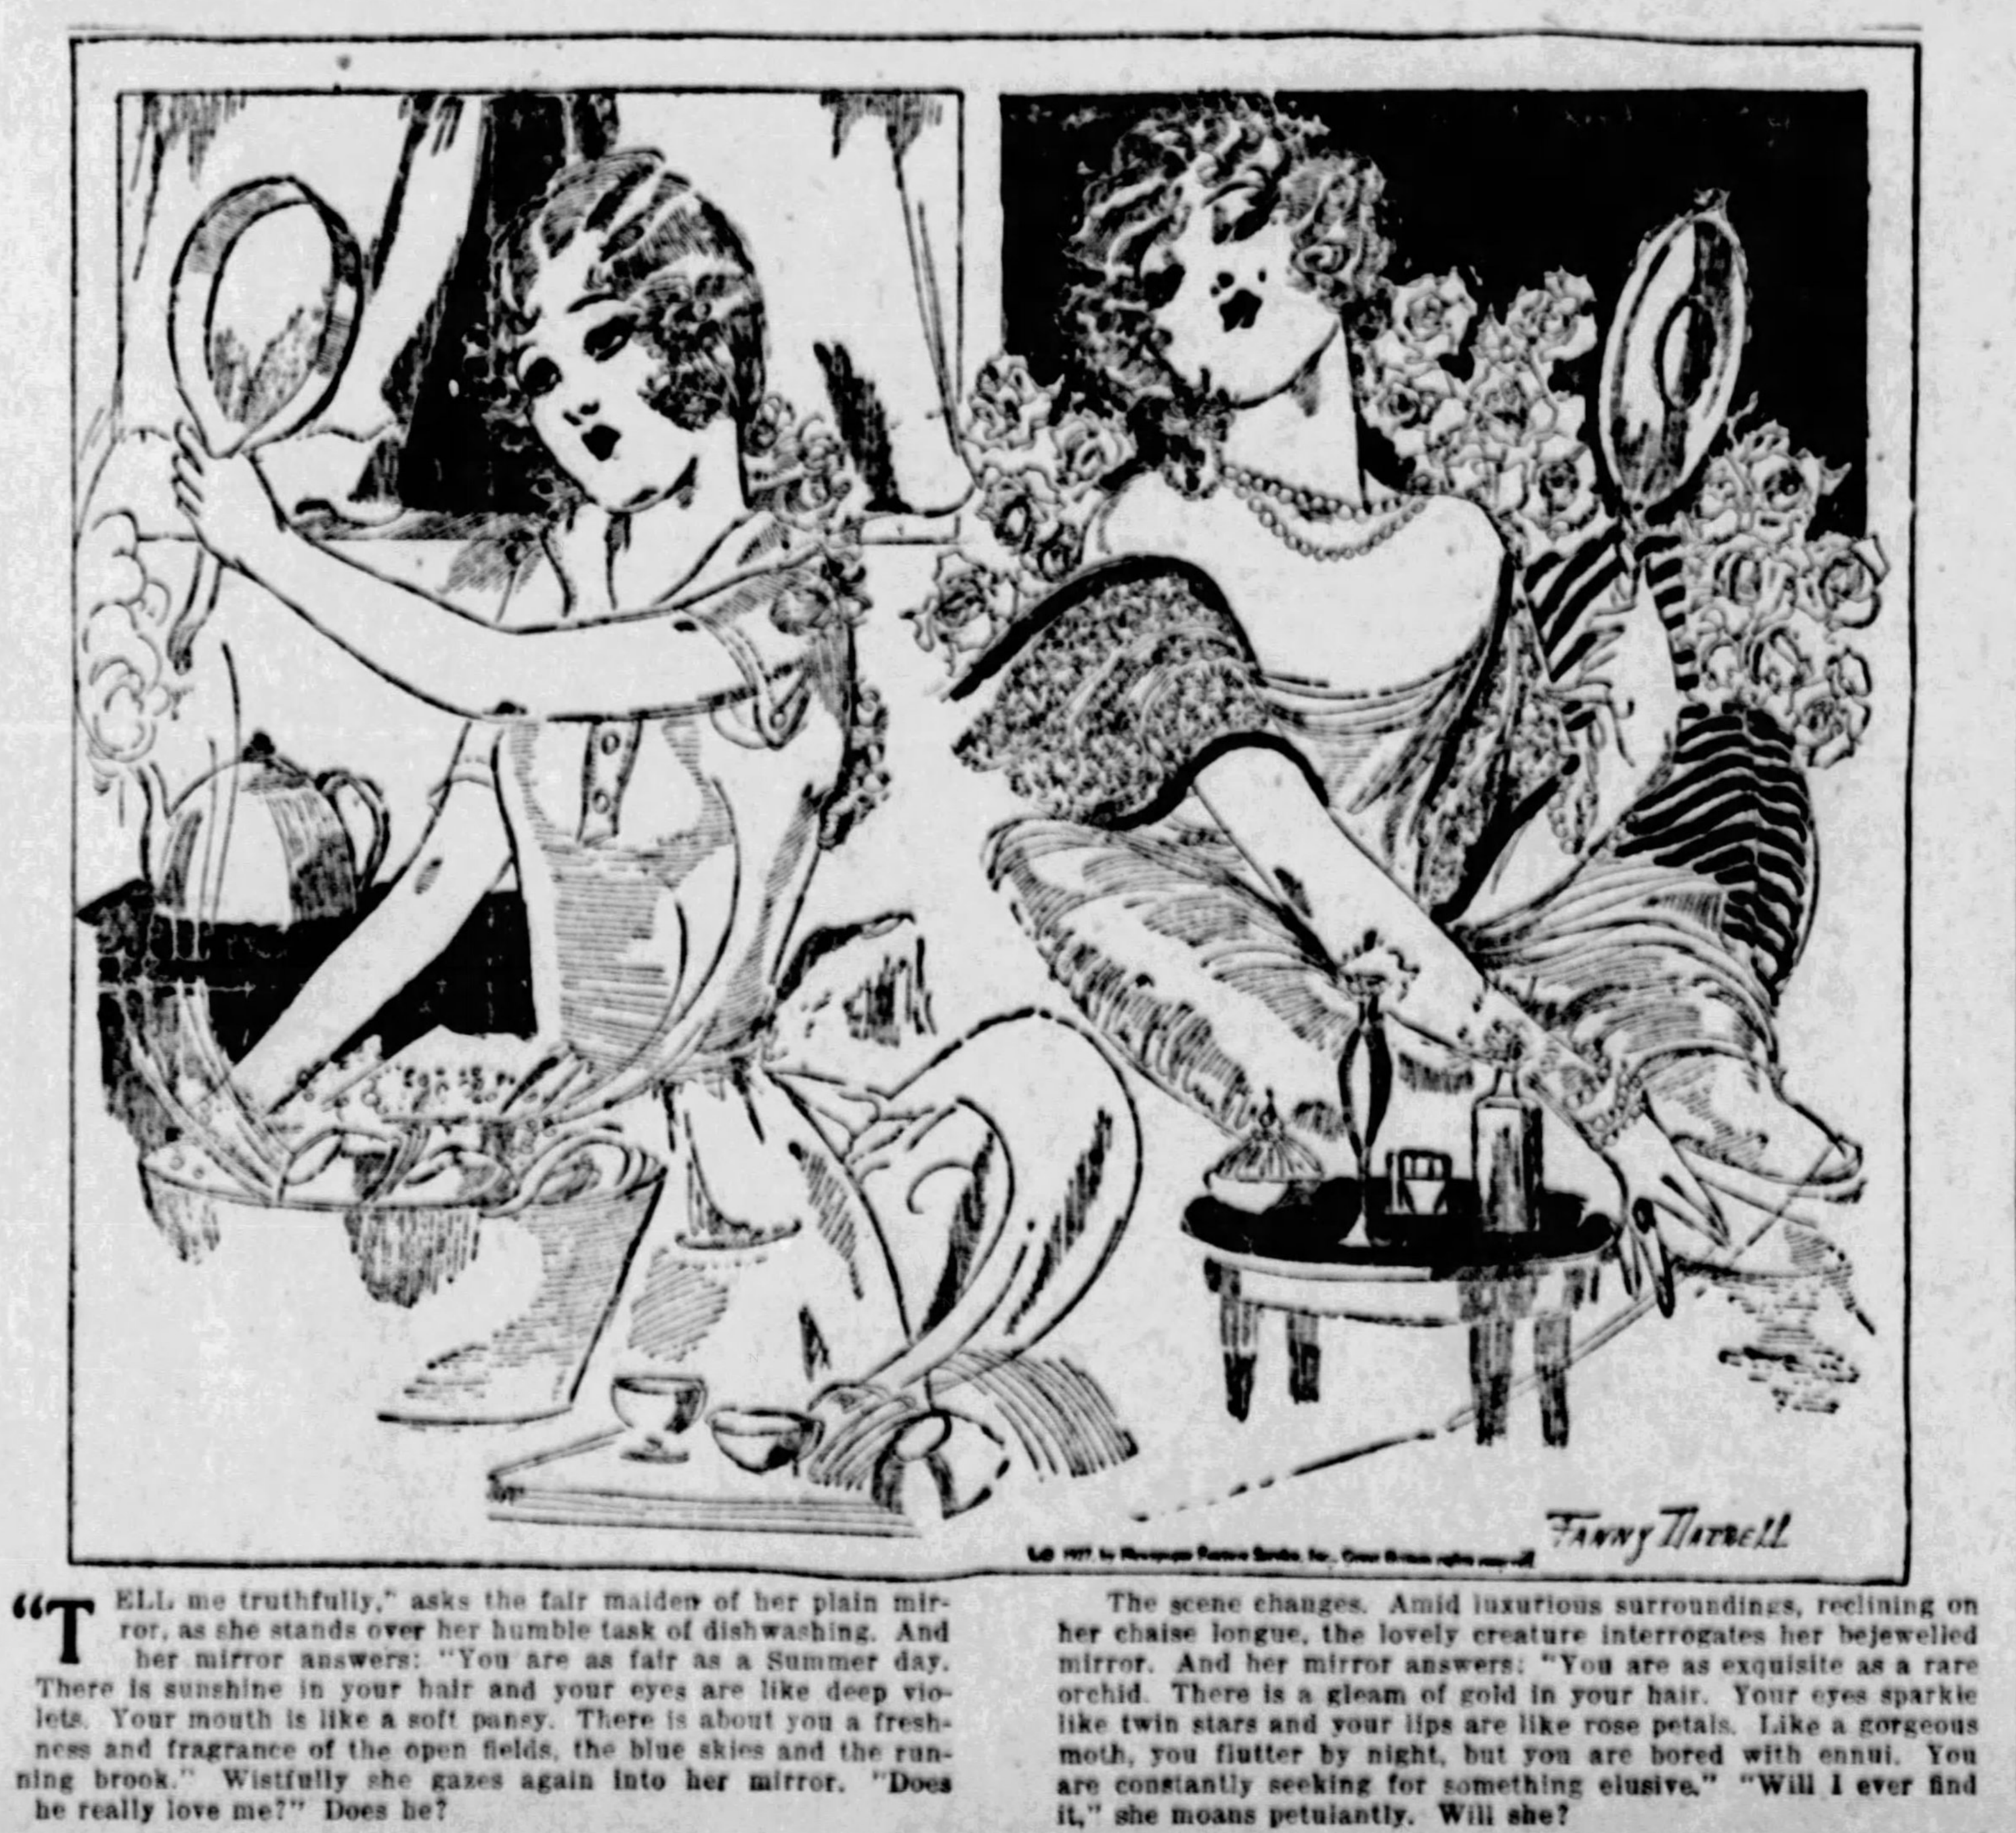
Fried Bread With Raisins

Cut six thick slices of bread and trim off the crusts. Fry the bread in hot fat. Drain, then place on a hot platter. Put into a saucepan two heaping tablespoonfuls of seeded raisins, a slice of ham chopped fine, a tablespoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a saltspoonful of powdered sage, and a half tablespoonful of curry powder. Put over the fire and stir. As soon as all is cooked and blended pour over the slices of toast and serve. Serve with cold sliced meat.

MIRRORS

By Fanny Darrell



"TELL me truthfully," asks the fair maiden of her plain mirror, as she stands over her humble task of dishwashing. And her mirror answers: "You are as fair as a Summer day. There is sunshine in your hair and your eyes are like deep violets. Your mouth is like a soft pansy. There is about you a freshness and fragrance of the open fields, the blue skies and the running brook." Wistfully she gazes again into her mirror. "Does he really love me?" Does he?

The scene changes. Amid luxurious surroundings, reclining on her chaise longue, the lovely creature interrogates her bejewelled mirror. And her mirror answers: "You are as exquisite as a rare orchid. There is a gleam of gold in your hair. Your eyes sparkle like twin stars and your lips are like rose petals. Like a gorgeous moth, you flutter by night, but you are bored with ennui. You are constantly seeking for something elusive." "Will I ever find it," she moans petulantly. Will she?

Solicitor for said School District.

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH OF McKEES ROCKS, PENNSYLVANIA
NOTICE OF SALE OF BONDS

Sealed proposals will be received by the Secretary of the School Board for the School District of the Borough of McKees Rocks, Hamilton School, May avenue, McKees Rocks, until

Monday Evening, October 17, 1927, at 8 O'Clock P. M., Eastern Standard Time for the Purchase of $100,000.00 Par Value BONDS of said School District at which time and place said bids will be opened.

By resolution of said School Board the bonds are dated as of October 1, 1927, and the dates of maturities are as follows, to wit:

October 1, 1953 $25,000.00
October 1, 1954 25,000.00
October 1, 1955 25,000.00
October 1, 1956 25,000.00

Said bonds bear interest at the rate of four and one-quarter (4¼) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of April and October of each year, without deduction for any taxes which may be levied thereon by the State of Pennsylvania, pursuant to any present or future law. Said bonds will be coupon bonds of One Thousand ($1,000.00) Dollars, with registration privileges.

The purchaser will be allowed on the purchase price the reasonable cost for the printing of the bonds not to exceed $100.00, and the reasonable cost of the legal opinion thereon not to exceed $150.00.

All bidders will deposit a certified check for $1,500.00, drawn to the order of the School District of the Borough of McKees Rocks. Checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned. No interest allowed upon the amount of the check of the successful bidder, and such check will be retained and applied as part payment for the bonds or to secure the School District against loss resulting from the failure of the bidder to comply with the terms of the bid.

Proposals should be addressed to A. D. Levy, Secretary of the School District of the Borough of McKees Rocks, Pennsylvania, and enclosed in a sealed envelope marked on the outside "Proposal for Bonds."

The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. For further information apply to the Secretary or Solicitor.

A. D. LEVY,
Secretary.

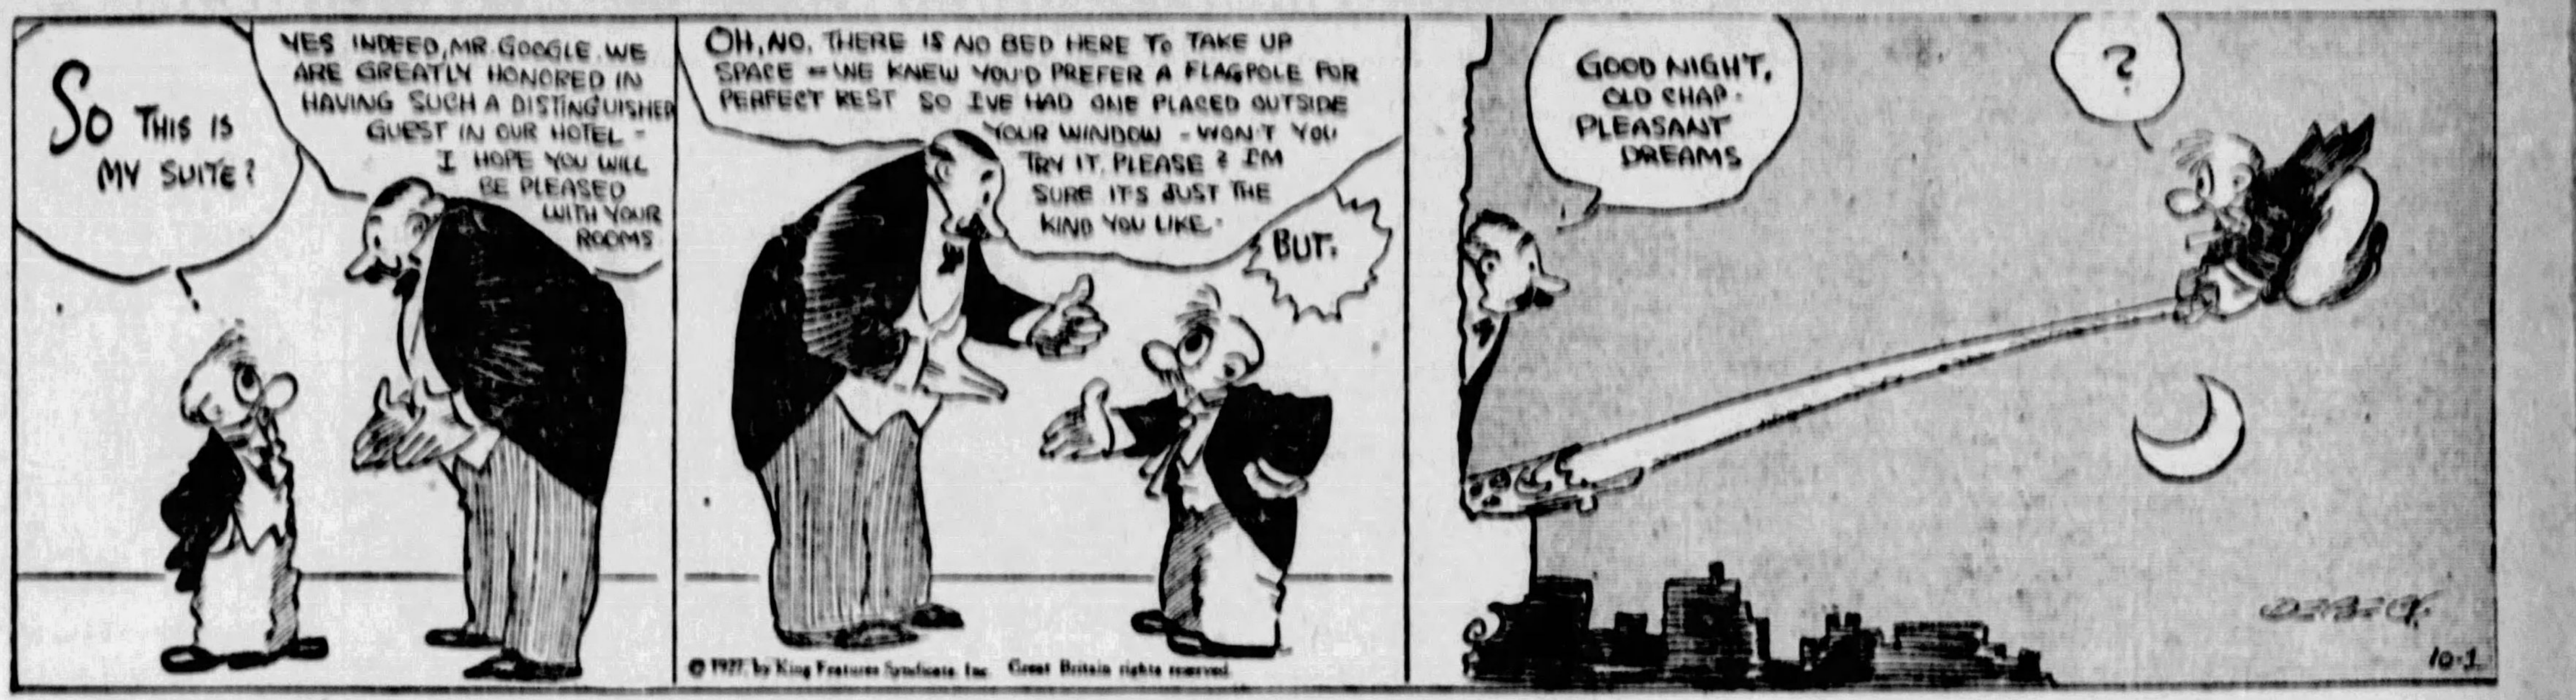
BARNEY GOOGLE AND SPARK PLUG

The Bed He Knows Best



So this is my suite?
Yes indeed, Mr. Google, we are greatly honored in having such a distinguished guest in our hotel - I hope you will be pleased with your rooms
Oh, no, there is no bed here to take up space — we knew you'd prefer a flagpole for perfect rest so I've had one placed outside your window - won't you try it, please? I'm sure it's just the kind you like.
But.
Good night, old chap. Pleasant dreams

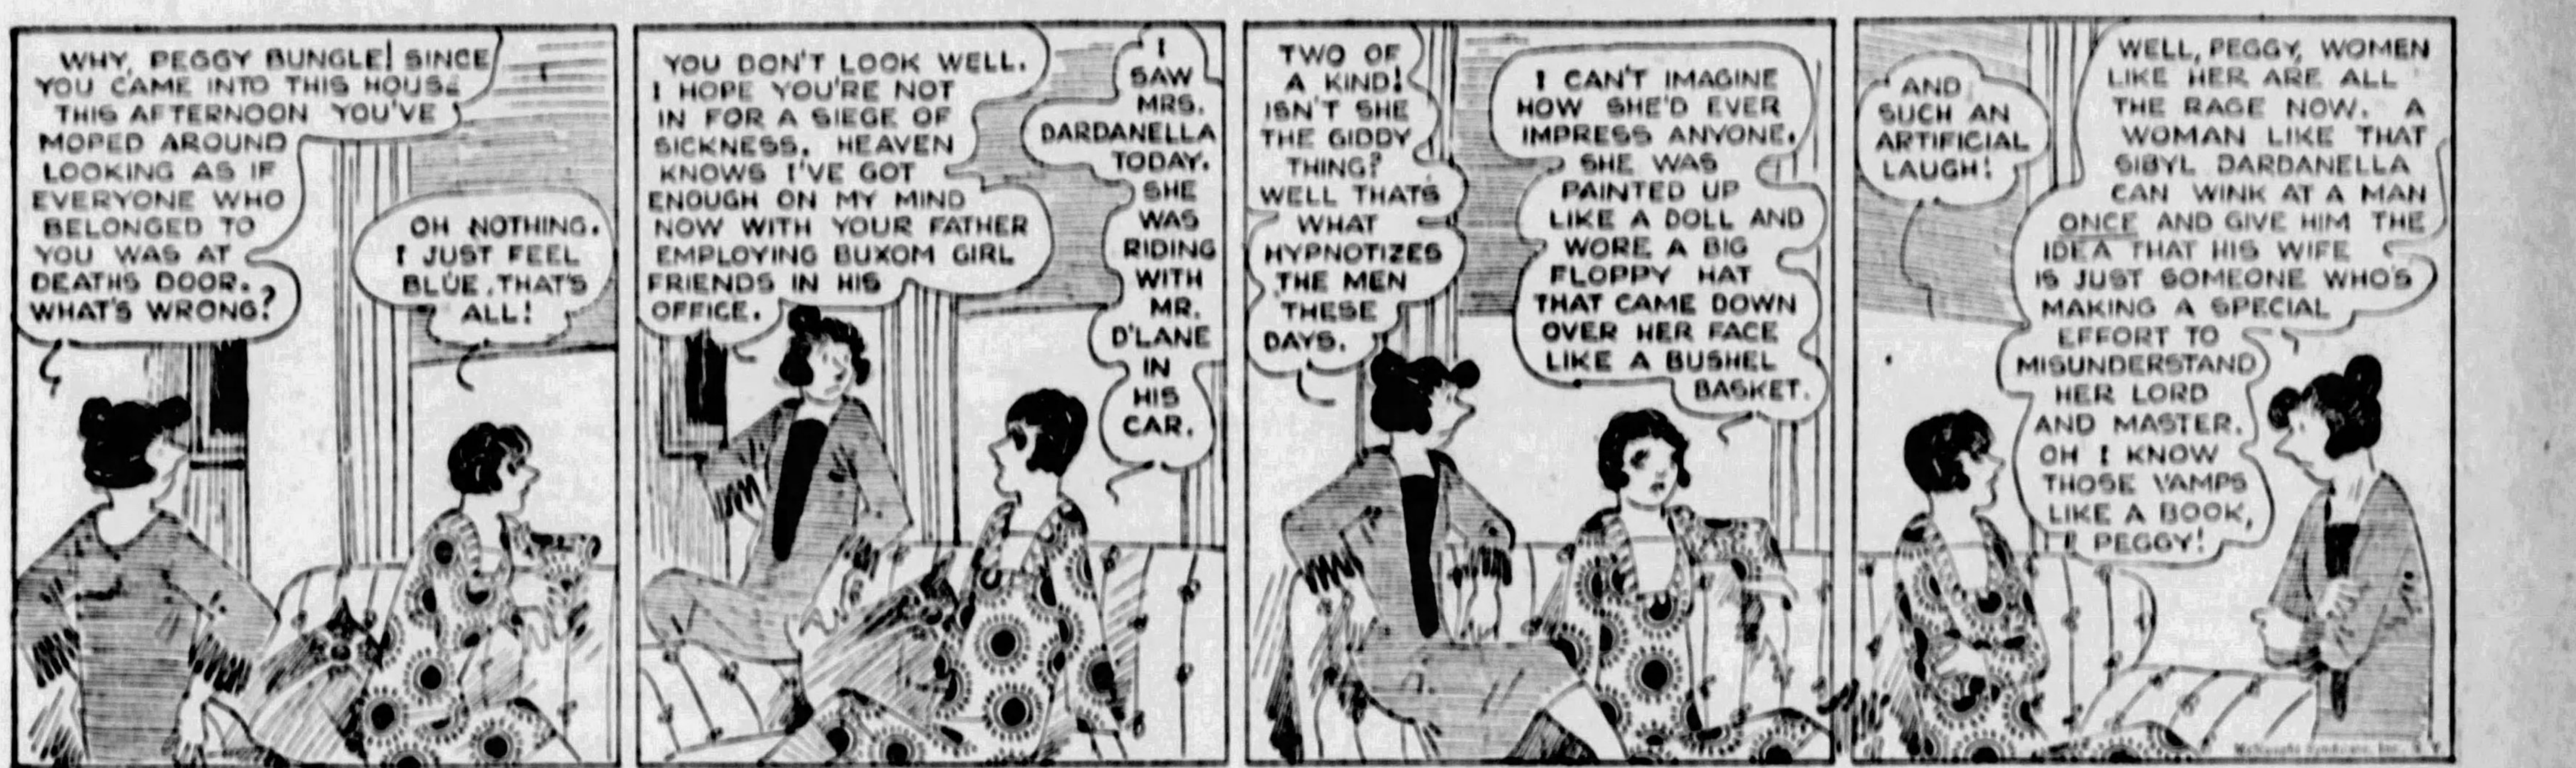
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

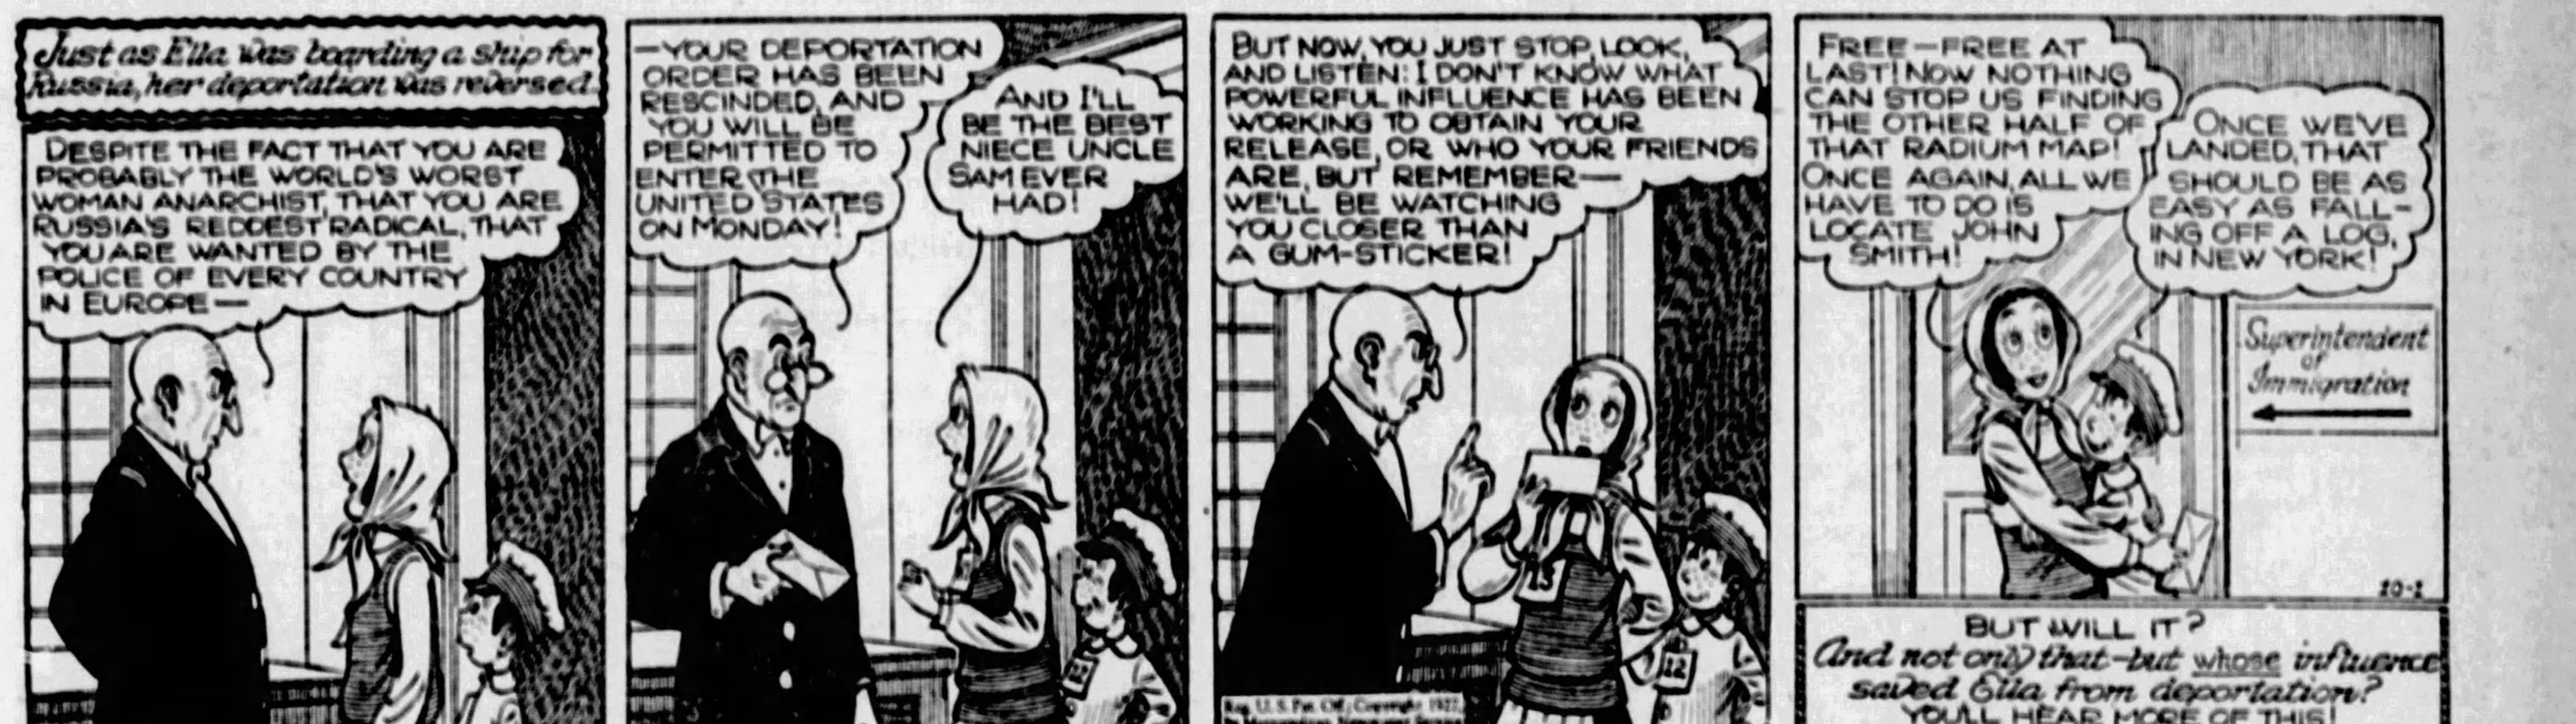
Sibyl Is a Dangerous Lady



Why, Peggy Bungle! Since you came into this house this afternoon you've moped around looking as if everyone who belonged to you was at death's door. What's wrong?
Oh nothing. I just feel blue, that's all!
You don't look well. I hope you're not in for a siege of sickness. Heaven knows I've got enough on my mind now with your father employing buxom girl friends in his office.
I saw Mrs. Dardanella today. She was riding with Mr. D'Lane in his car.
Two of a kind! Isn't she the giddy thing? Well that's what hypnotizes the men these days.
I can't imagine how she'd ever impress anyone. She was painted up like a doll and wore a big floppy hat that came down over her face like a bushel basket.
And such an artificial laugh!
Well, Peggy, women like her are all the rage now. A woman like that Sibyl Dardanella can wink at a man once and give him the idea that his wife is just someone who's making a special effort to misunderstand her lord and master. Oh I know those vamps like a book, Peggy!

ELLA CINDERS

Free At Last



Just as Ella was boarding a ship for Russia, her deportation was reversed
Despite the fact that you are probably the world's worst woman anarchist, that you are Russia's reddest radical, that you are wanted by the police of every country in Europe —
— your deportation order has been rescinded, and you will be permitted to enter the United States on Monday!
And I'll be the best niece Uncle Sam ever had!
But now, you just stop, look, and listen: I don't know what powerful influence has been working to obtain your release, or who your friends are, but remember — we'll be watching you closer than a gum-sticker!
Free — free at last! Now nothing can stop us finding the other half of that radium map! Once again, all we have to do is locate John Smith!
Once we've landed, that should be as easy as falling off a log, in New York!
Superintendent of Immigration

But will it? And not only that - but whose influence saved Ella from deportation? You'll hear more of this!

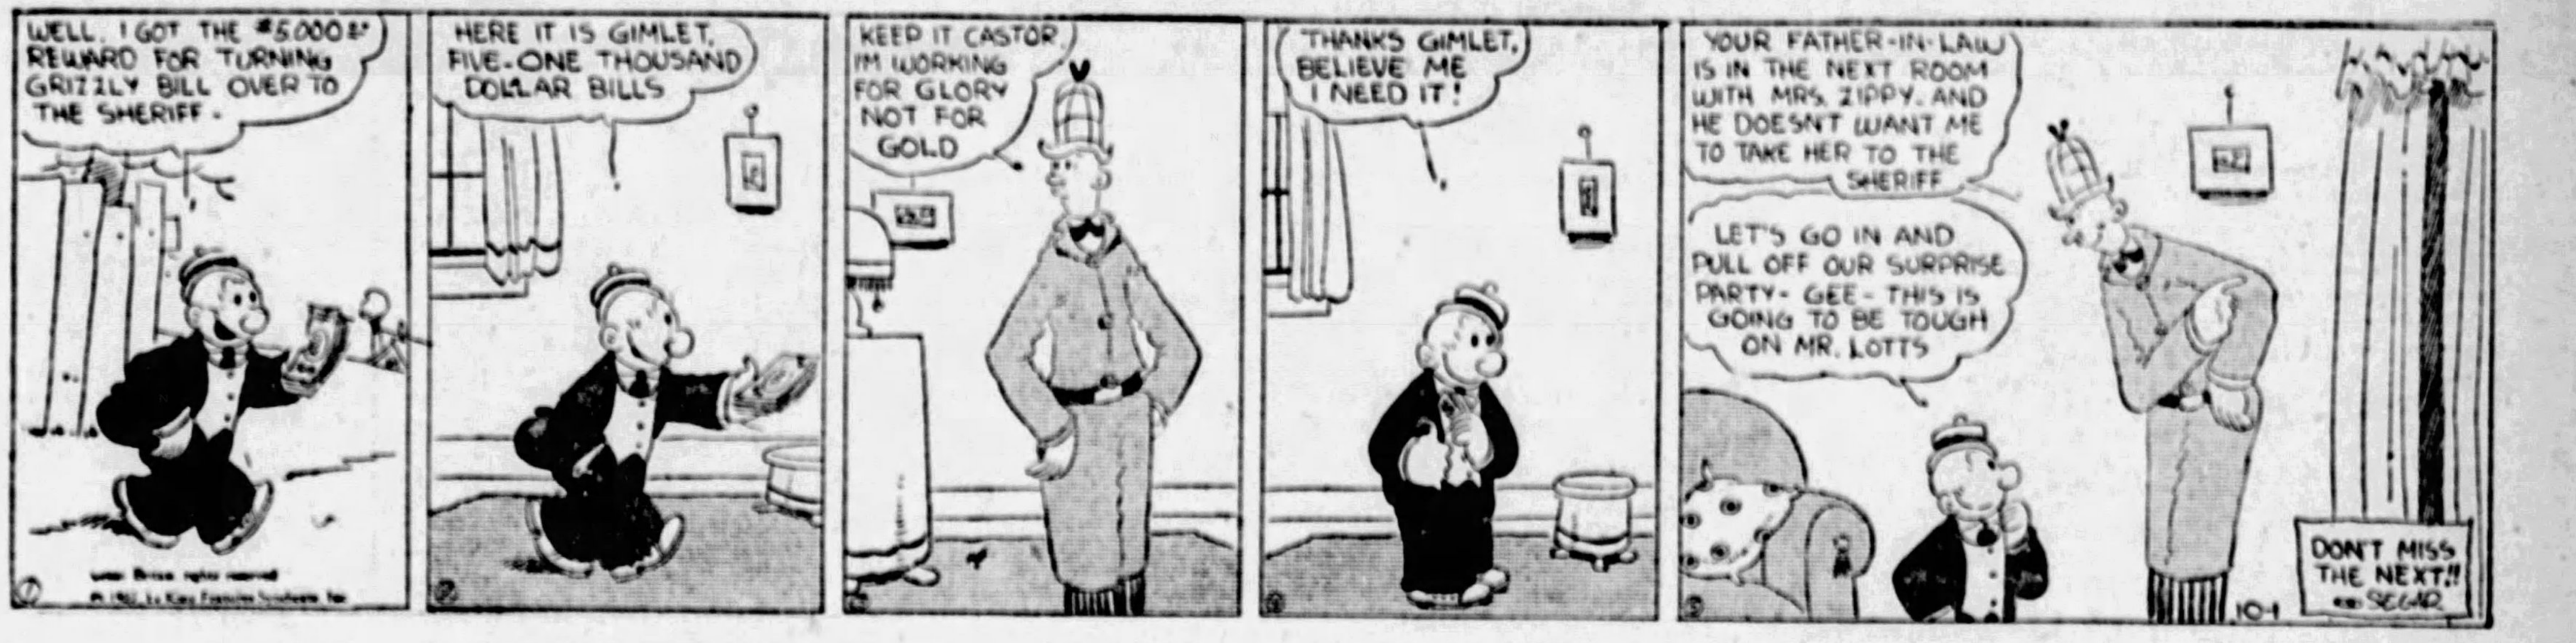
"Net Profit"



Well, I got the $5,000.00 reward for turning Grizzly Bill over to the sheriff.
Here it is Gimlet, five-one thousand dollar bills
Keep it Castor, I'm working for glory not for gold
Thanks Gimlet, believe me I need it!
Your father-in-law is in the next room with Mrs. Zippy, and he doesn't want me to take her to the sheriff
Let's go in and pull off our surprise party - Gee - this is going to be tough on Mr. Lotts
Don't miss the next!!

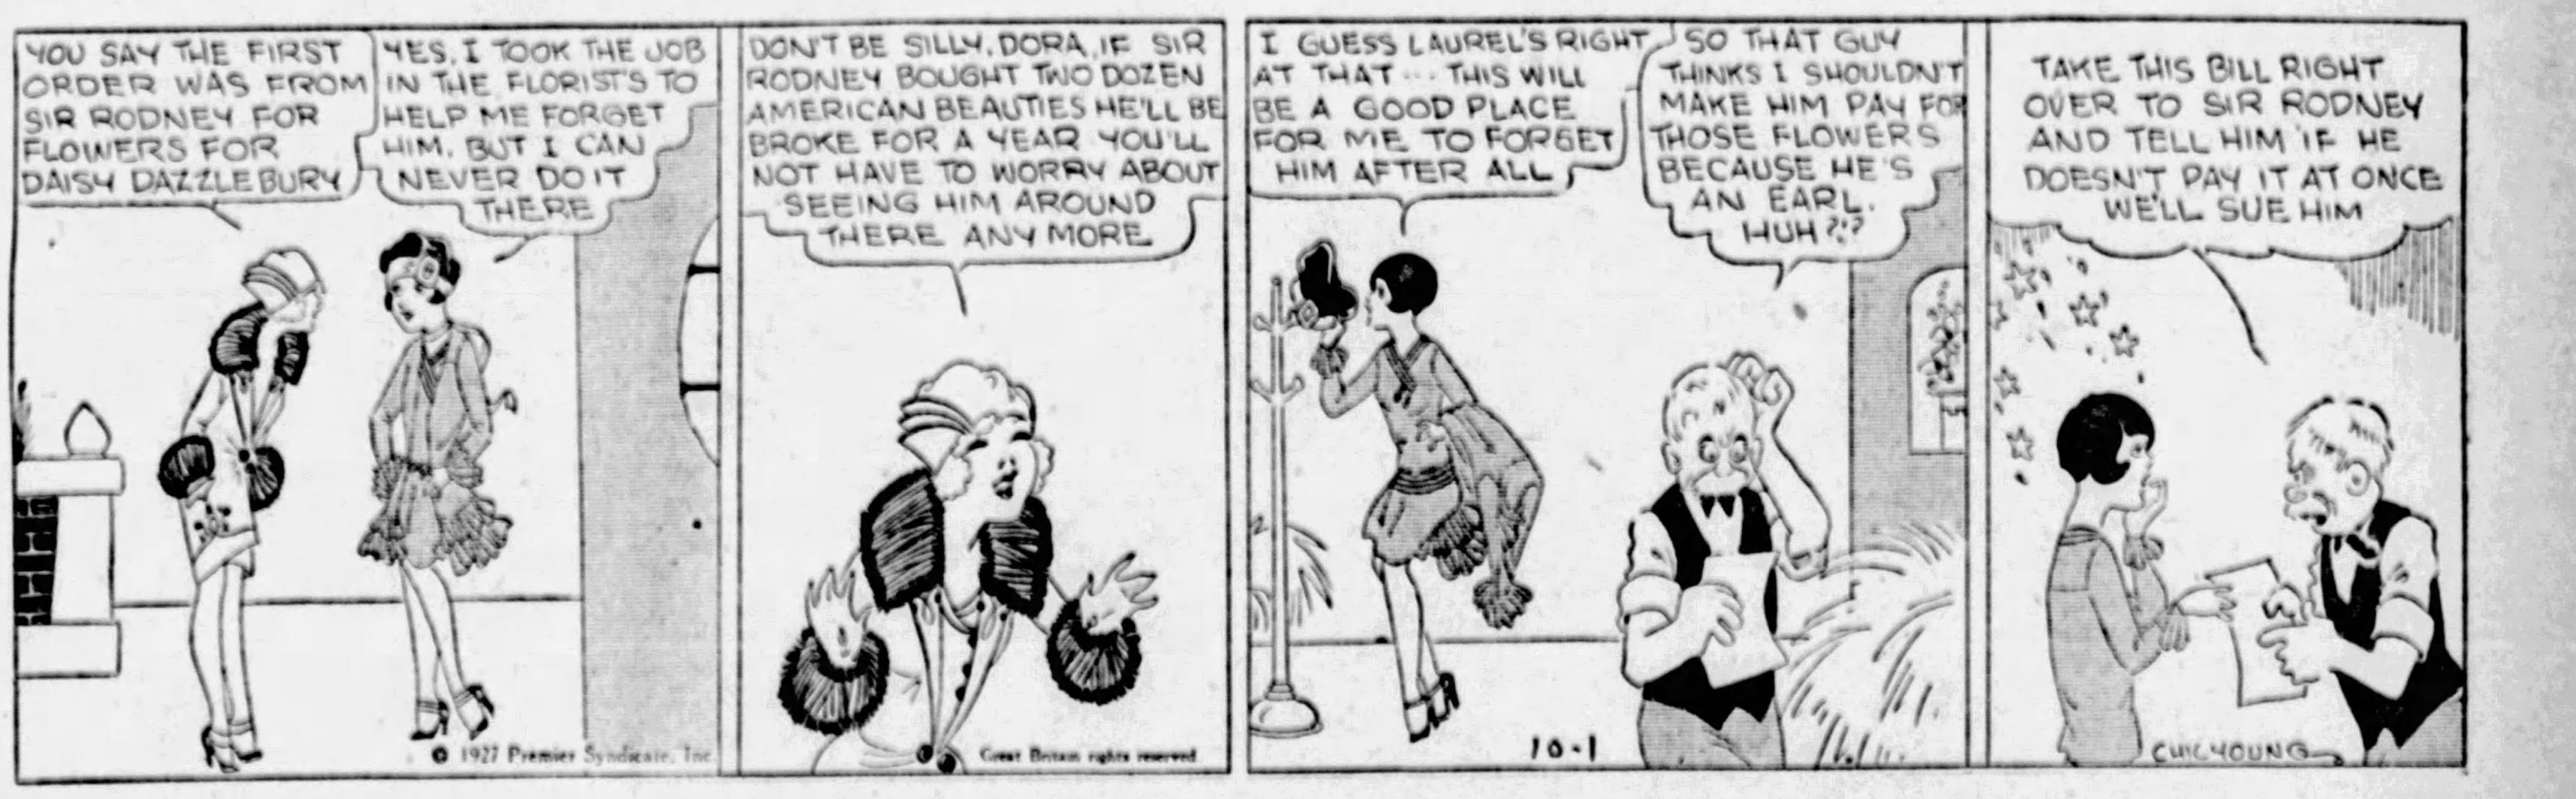
DUMB DORA

A Message for Rod



You say the first order was from Sir Rodney for flowers for Daisy Dazzlebury
Yes, I took the job in the florist's to help me forget him. But I can never do it there
Don't be silly, Dora, if Sir Rodney bought two dozen American Beauties he'll be broke for a year. You'll not have to worry about seeing him around there any more
I guess Laurel's right at that ... this will be a good place for me to forget him after all
So that guy thinks I shouldn't make him pay for those flowers because he's an Earl. Huh?!?
Take this bill right over to Sir Rodney and tell him if he doesn't pay it at once we'll sue him

BUGS BAER Says

REAR ADMIRAL MAGRUDER has just apologized to Secretary Wilbur after having said that our Navy had too many admirals.

The exact number of admirals is fifty-five.

The apology came when Wilbur threatened to make it fifty-four.

Magruder wasn't exactly superstitious, but he didn't need opera glasses to read the handwriting on the wall.

Wasn't so long ago that General Mitchell roasted the air service to a rich brown in oral cracker crumbs and hot fat.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

General Mitchell got a nice skidding promotion to colonel overnight.

The Magruder-Wilbur skirmish was a brief duel with rubber stamps. Magruder was outranged and outnumbered.

An admiral ain't got much to live for nowadays. The most heroic thing he can do is to go into drydock with his boat.

The only screaming projectiles he hears are government letters and countermanded orders.

And he cannot declare war on an enemy who is sharing the same payroll with him.

How can you get into close quarters with a foe whose battle signal is, "out to lunch?"

An admiral is a man who must have action. He chafes during times of peace and has a horror of being ordered to active service in a moss-spangled navy yard.

He grows tired of having a detail of 30 sailors polishing up the brass work on his epaulets and sags under the weight of gold braid.

Navy yard life is monotonous. There is a true story of an old admiral who lived on government property so long that when he died he willed it to his grandchildren.

Promotion in the Navy was earned in the days when Magruder, Dewey and Evans were punk middies. Now, honors are awarded by weight guessers and health statisticians.

You cannot blame an old line sailor for shooting off his kisser when he sees his pet Navy being operated by wireless guessers.

It wouldn't be a bad idea to go back to the old days when an admiral wore an epaulet on one shoulder and a chip on the other.

The apology has been accepted and the U. S. S. Magruder has been sunk. Only a few ink bubbles mark the spot.

"You Said It Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

On "RESTING PLACES."

SOME men are IMMOVABLE,
Lige big, HUGE
ROCKS in storm or calm,
In rain or SUNSHINE,
They remain forever
STEADY, strong and TRUE. When YOUNG
These men are very HARD
To put up with,
For they will NOT YIELD
Their IDEAS,
But when TIME has Mellowed them they Sometimes become GRAND.
MEN like TREES are
More flexible.
Their MOODS change as Often as the SEASONS,
But not as REGULARLY,
And a woman who LOVES them has Always to be READY for The Fall.
The DIFFERENCE, of course,
Is that one can RELY on the shelter of
A ROCK forever, but
One can REST in the Shade of a TREE
Only in the SUMMER.

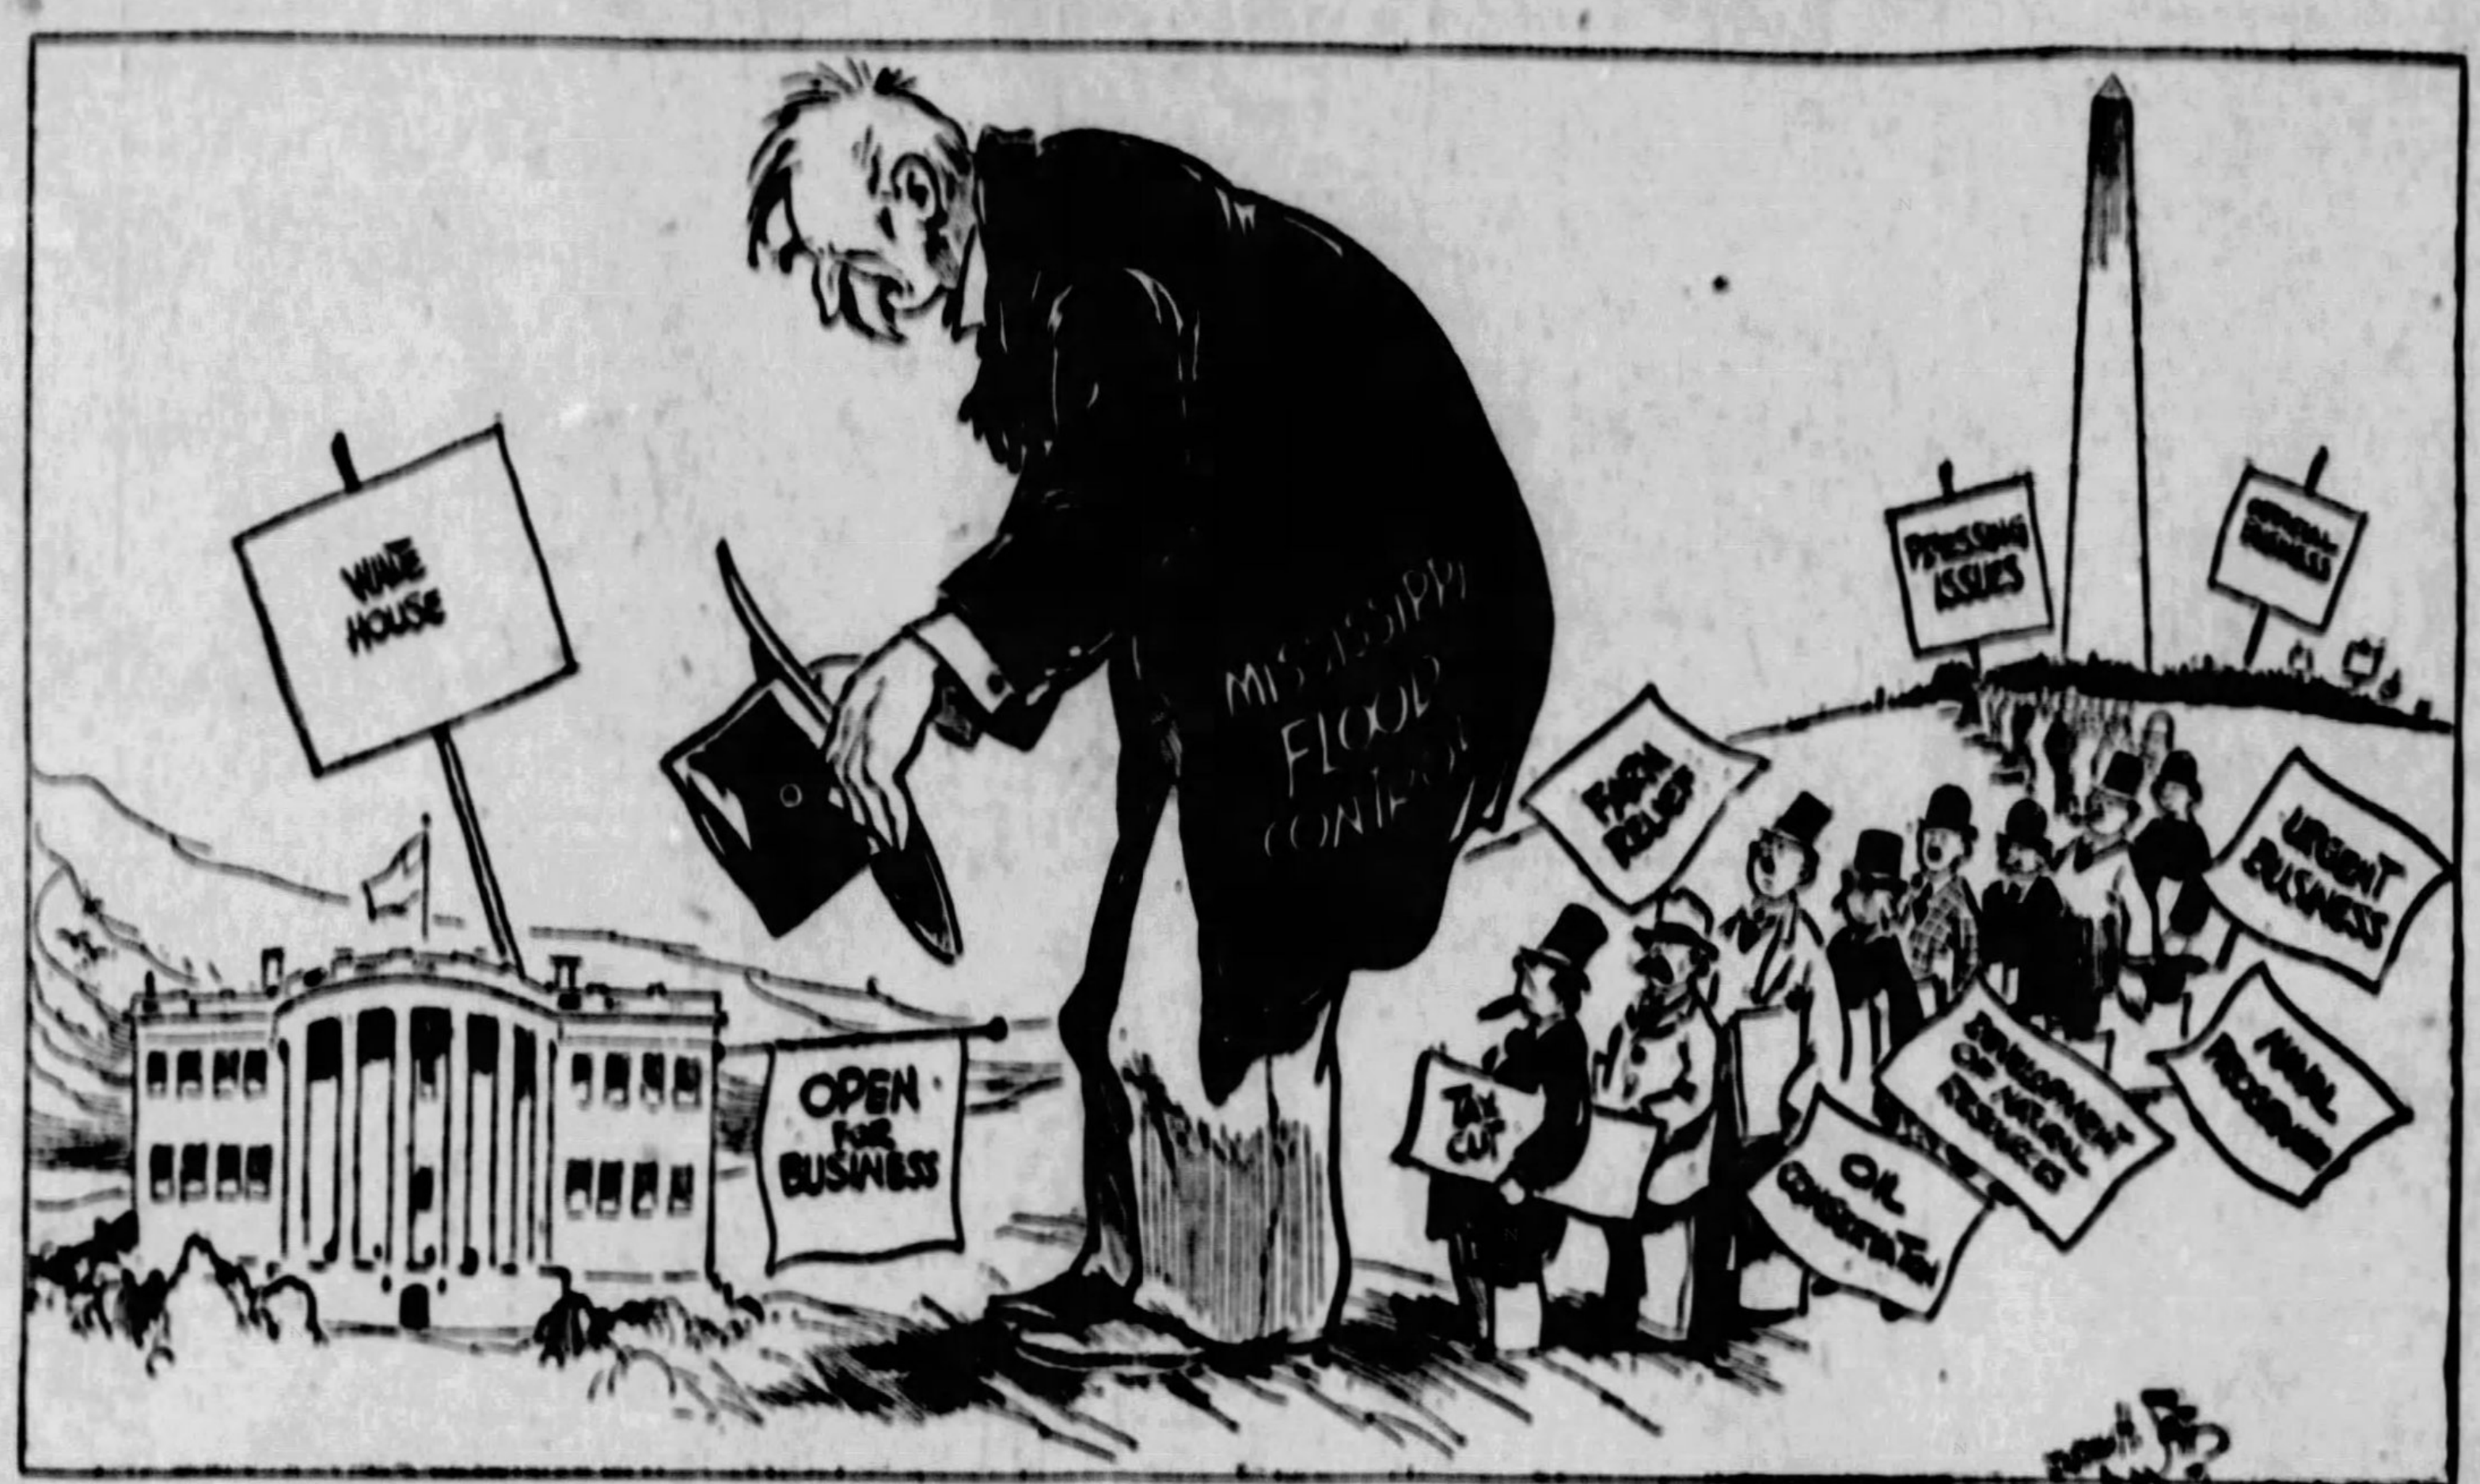
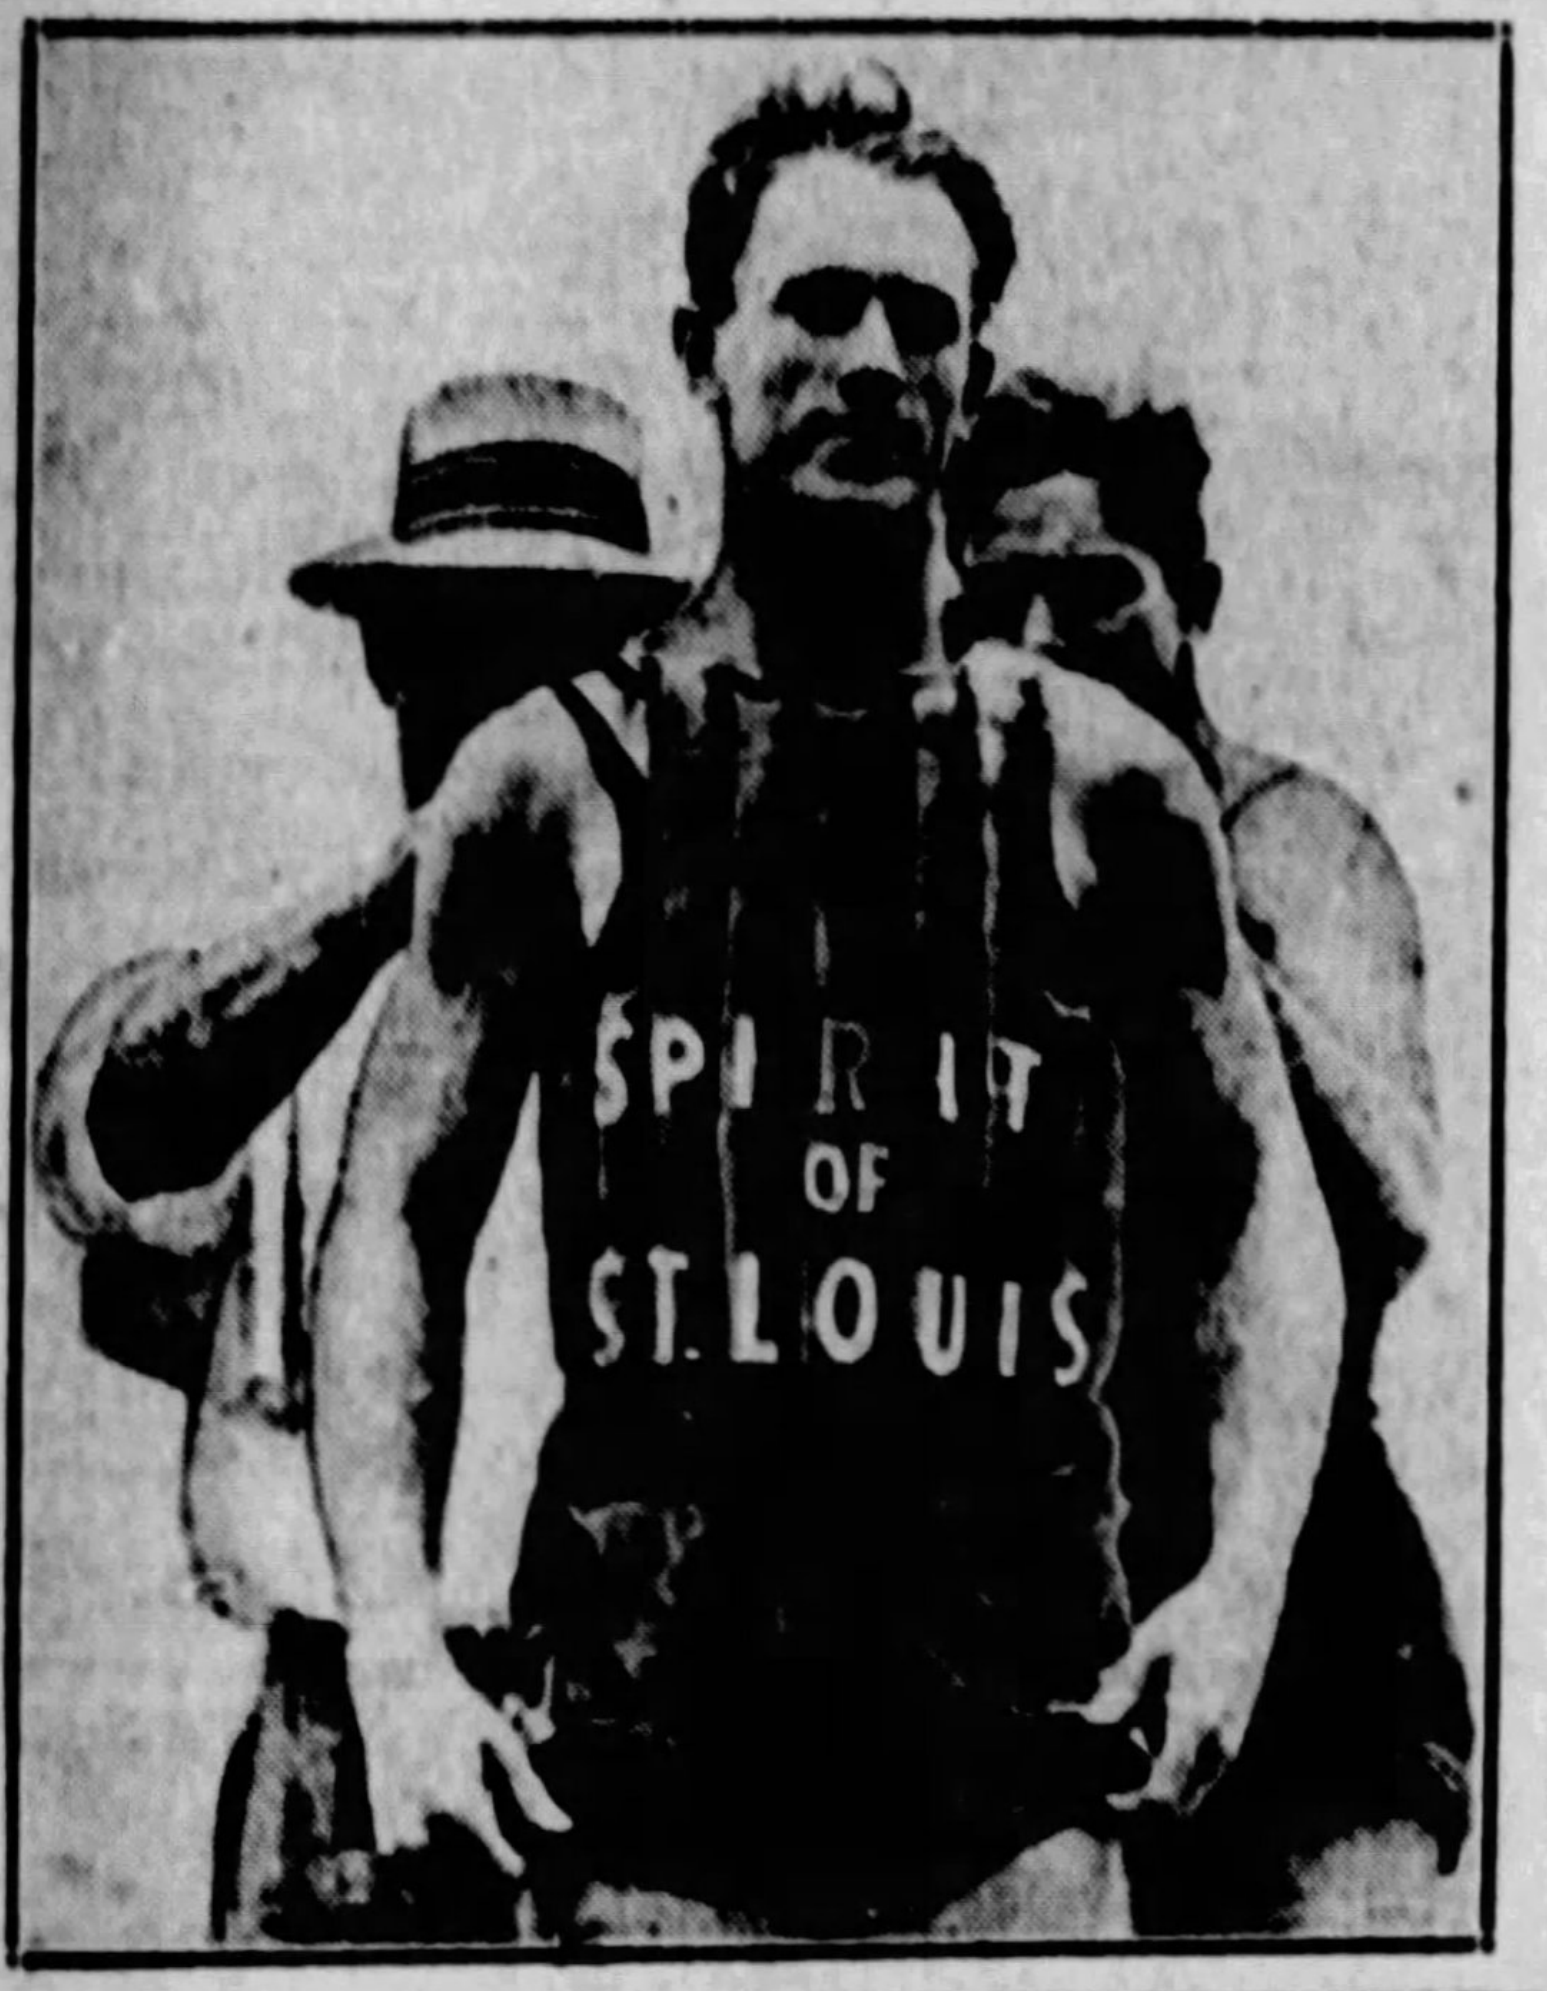
THE FIRST IN LINE



Real Nerve and Courage

It Should Have Better Use.



RAY WOODS, CHAMPION JUMPER.

The "Spirit of St. Louis," made famous all over the world by Lindbergh's great achievement, appears to be contagious. This young man, Ray Woods, displayed his share of that dauntless Spirit by a "back jacknife dive" from a height of 125 feet in the Mississippi River, from St. Louis' Municipal Bridge.

This young man proposed to jump from the Brooklyn Bridge and "do what Steve Brodie did."

The police wouldn't let him do it.

Somebody should have told the young man that Steve Brodie NEVER jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge. Nor did he ever go over the Niagara Falls, as people thought he did, when they spent their money in exchange for Steve Brodie's whiskey in the old Bowery in New York City.

Steve Brodie knew a shorter, safer road to fame than any dangerous jumping. He had himself taken out into the East River, in a small boat, friends threw a dummy heavily weighted off of the bridge. The dummy never came up, but Brodie swam around and the newspapers told of the dive from the Brooklyn Bridge. Some of the reporters at the time knew that Brodie never dived at all, that the dummy did the diving, but they did not feel disposed to ruin Brodie's chances as a prosperous saloon keeper apparently.

So the fools spent their money over Steve Brodie's whiskey bar until he died.

This is a fine looking boy of twenty-one with steady nerves, free from fear, and it is a pity that his courage cannot be used in some more useful way. If he jumped from the top of Pike's Peak into the Pacific Ocean it would be a high and far jump, but it wouldn't do anybody any particular good.

Courage is valuable when IT DOES GOOD, as in the case of Lindbergh.

Unfortunately the world offers little opportunity for spectacular and useful displays of courage, outside of war.

However, the ordinary hard grind of life takes plenty of courage to begin at the bottom and work your way undiscouraged to the top.

Young men that successfully undertake that upward climb will find plenty of chances to show one most important kind of courage, which is the power to keep at it.

Synthetic Music

A German inventor demonstrates a device calculated to upset further those already alarmed by the ascendancy of radio and phonograph.

Manipulating a small square box fitted with wire-bound brass rods, the scientist produced sweet music in imitation of many instruments. The music is made, he explained, by the interference of two electrical waves, each inaudible in itself.

From the experimenter's predictions it is to be gathered that he hopes his square box will eventually supplant all instruments. Our present canned music must at least originate in the real thing; the thought of music that isn't music but only an electrical trick is a bit devastating.

Let's hope the thing never gets on the market.

Healthful Styles

Feminine fashions get a hearty pat on the back from a German scientist addressing a meeting of the (hold fast!) American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons.

Many of the ills that once afflicted women are disappearing, proclaimed Prof. Strassman, thanks to the modern way of attiring the female form divine.

"Mode rules the world," he declared, "and the accident that caused strangling corsets and other torturing apparel to be thrown into the discard has been a boon to humanity."

As you are, ladies! The ayes undeniably have it, even the doctor's eyes—we means ayes.

Here's a Scheme

Hundreds of war-built government ships swing rusting at anchor in many harbors. For years they have served no purpose other than to make citizens whose Liberty Bonds helped build them fume at such hopeless waste.

Now from the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission comes a novel suggestion of a way to make these hulks pay their way—in fish.

It is proposed to sink the sorry relics of the great conflict all along the Jersey coast; as the marine animal and vegetable life collects on the hulks scattered along the ocean bed, great schools of food fishes will be attracted, it is confidently asserted.

A roundabout salvage plan; but if the experts are right, e's a way to get some of our money back.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Gravitation

THE earth on which we dwell in the ocean of space like marooned seamen on a floating isle weighs six sextillion tons (i. e. six million multiplied by a thousand times a million millions) and is darting through space at a speed of 18½ miles per second. You can calculate for yourself the stupendous momentum of such a flying body.

Yet, the force of the sun's attraction, called gravitation, easily curbs the careering earth, and compels it into an orbit from which it cannot escape.

Now we human beings, weighing on an average less than 150 pounds, are held on the surface of the speeding earth only by its (the earth's) attraction, which is essentially 330,000 times less than that of the sun. Nevertheless the mighty sun is unable to tear us from the grasp of our rock-ribbed parent. He is 330,000 times as strong, yet she holds us secure. We do not cling to her, but are held to her. He swings her around, but cannot pull us away, though his tug upon us is measurable.

It is well worth while to consider why this is so, for the explanation gives a simple account of the basis of gravitational astronomy, or of that mysterious force which holds not only the sun and its planets, but all the multitudes of the starry heavens, under its control.

The key to the explanation lies in the way in which distance diminishes the effective force of gravitation. We must also take note of the fact that the distance is to be reckoned from the centers of the earth and the sun. Thus a body placed on the earth's surface is about 4,000 miles from its center. That same body is more than 23,000 times as far from the center of the sun, which is 93,000,000 miles from the earth.

But there is an important peculiarity about the way distance affects the force of gravitation. It diminishes the force in inverse proportion to the square of the distance, i. e., to the distance multiplied by itself. If the distance is doubled the force becomes one-quarter of what it was.

So, although at equal distances the sun would attract the body in question 330,000 times as strongly as the earth, yet, when the body is 23,000 times nearer the earth's center than the sun's, the sun's force of attraction upon it is diminished 23,000x23,000, or 529,000,000 times. Thus the sun's advantage of inherent power (330,000 to 1) is altogether done away with, its attraction on the body becoming only 1-1,600th as great as the earth's.

But we are much safer from being snatched away by the powerful sun even than appears from the above calculation. Because the sun pulls upon the whole solid earth as if he had a cable attached to its center, the effect of his simultaneous pull upon loose bodies on the earth's surface is again greatly reduced, so that, in fine, his attraction upon each of us when he is overhead is only about one nineteenth-millionth of the force with which vigorous old mother earth, whom age cannot wither, presses us to her bosom.

Social Contacts

DO YOU choose your associates from the standpoint of social prestige or from what they represent as real men and women?

Are you a member of a crowd that meets your desires as far as society requirements are concerned, but yet it does not satisfy you?

What is lacking?

Isn't it friendship that you are missing?

There seems to be none to whom you could turn in time of trouble or to whom you could go for sympathetic counsel.

Fair-weather friends, and as such they are all right.

But as a means of appeasing your vanity, plus satisfaction, there is much left to be desired.

That something lacking is real friends.

You have had opportunities to meet those who would have met this natural human desire, but because they could not meet other requirements you did not cultivate them.

You have many acquaintances, few friends, but a world of disappointment is worth the heartaches if you have found one genuine friend.

Tales That Are Told

His Good Trait

A NUMBER of people at a dinner party were talking about an actor who was away on tour. The things they said about him were far from complimentary.

One man, however, attempted to put in a good word for the absent player.

"Oh, I always understood he was the kindest of men," he observed. "He writes to his wife by every post when he's away."

"He does," agreed a woman on the other side of the table. "He writes a lot of rubbish about the agony of absence, but never by any chance does he send her so much as a shilling postal order."

Discrimination

"GEORGE and Gerald," said the angry teacher, "you will both stay in after school and write out the names of your birthplaces 50 times each."

For some time they wrote in silence. Then the teacher suddenly heard sobs. Gerald was in tears.

"What's the matter?" she asked, not unkindly.

"It isn't fair!" wailed Gerald through his tears. "George was born in Rye, and I was born in Littlehampton. He's nearly finished, and I've only done 12."

Other Cloth

THE film producer was a very poor golfer and an ignorant man into the bargain.

One day he was playing a round with a certain bishop, when he made several bad shots and indulged in a burst of profanity.

The bishop was shocked.

"If you don't respect me, sir," he said reproachfully, "you might at least respect the cloth."

"Ah, go on!" snarled the producer of modern pictures. "We ain't playin' billiards!"

Ye Towne Gossip

by K. C. B.

MR. K. C. B.—Dear Sir: I am the Trained Flea Man whom you visited on the Board Walk on your way through Santa Cruz. I have just read what you have written of Minnie and of your belief that she escaped from your room on the person of a stout chambermaid. It was undoubtedly my Minnie, as she has been gone since your visit to us. Where did you stop in Santa Cruz and if in a hotel, what was the number of your room? I would like Minnie back as she was trained to run the little Merry-Go-Round.
THE TRAINED FLEA MAN.

DEAR TRAINED Flea Man.

WHILE WE were sure.

AND STILL believe.

THAT MINNIE went away.

WITH THE chambermaid.

I THINK I should tell you.

THAT TWO or three times.

WHILE WE made the trip.

FROM SANTA Cruz.

TO SAN Francisco.

I HAD the feeling.

THERE WAS something on me.

THAT FELT like Minnie.

AND BUT for the fact.

THAT AT the same time.

THE BOY insisted.

THAT HE had Minnie.

I WOULD have been sure.

SHE HAD gone with us.

BUT INASMUCH.

AS SHE couldn't have been.

ON THE both of us.

AT THE very same time.

IT IS not unlikely.

THAT WHAT we felt.

WAS OUR sunburn peeling.

WHICH IT has been doing.

SINCE WE lay on the beach.

AT CATALINA.

AND THEREFORE, Sir.

IT SEEMS to me.

WE MUST conclude.

THAT THE Missing Minnie.

STAYED IN Santa Cruz.

AND IN reply.

TO YOUR request.

AS TO the hotel.

AT WHICH we stayed.

HAVE TO advise.

THAT MR. McDonald.

WOULD LIKELY object.

IF I should tell.

SO PUBLICLY.

THAT I'D taken a flea.

INTO ONE of his rooms.

AND HAD lost it there.

AND IN conclusion.

I WANT to say.

THAT WHILE I regret.

HAVING BEEN a party.

TO MINNIE'S departure.

FROM HER Board Walk home.

I THINK any man.

WHO HAS an idea.

HE CAN find a flea.

AND BY that I mean.

ONE PARTICULAR flea.

BY THE name of Minnie.

IN SANTA Cruz.

OR ANYWHERE.

HE'S NUTS or something.

I THANK you.

O. O. McINTYRE

In Tia Juana

TIA JUANA, Oct. 1.—The old-time slot machines—from a nickel to a silver dollar—whirr madly in every Tia Juana bar and dance hall. A lady in our party tapped one for $20 and a minute later with Weber and Field mock seriousness a sign was hung around it reading: "Out of Order."

Roulette games are manned by broken down old gamblers with sunken noses and a limp. In the open poker games you are likely to sit between a pock-marked, shifty-eyed Mexican and a Chinese. Save for one game in gold coins, the biggest single winning is limited to $99 on a given number.

Several times it was noticed a winning bet was held up because the croupier spotted a counterfeit silver dollar which he had himself given out in change. This trifling gyppery will, if not stopped, kill the goose laying the golden egg for the Tia Juana syndicate.

Tia Juana visitors go there intent on losing, but they want to lose half fairly. The slot machine privilege is owned by a Los Angeles gambler. He retains 60 per cent and the cafe where the machines are operating 40 per cent. In one of the biggest cafes the net profit from slot machines is $5,000 a month.

The Foreign Club, a handsome new structure, is the biggest gambling house in Tia Juana at the end of the main street and with acres of parking space. This holds several thousand people and roulette, fan tan, chuck-a-luck, chemin de fer, blackjack, dice games, slot machines and such flourish.

There are bars on all four sides of the room to stimulate customers and perk them up over losses. Crowds are orderly and a violent squawker finds himself being escorted over the line by a flea-bitten squad of comical Mexican guards. There is a lot of opera bouffe effects in Tia Juana.

No suicides are found as in Monte Carlo, staring up at the open sky at dawn for the simple reason individual losses are slight. Like the 5 and 10-cent stores, Tia Juana depends on the gross turnover. I am told the average loss of daily visitors is $25 a head.

The dog races are held in a beautiful park on the edge of town. Here razor thin grey hounds leap from spring traps to chase the electrically propelled rabbit they never catch. The dog race betting is by pari-mutuel and seems on the level, although I am inclined to believe, with an old Broadway gambler, the only strictly on the level sport left is fishing. The dogs run securely muzzled. If unmuzzled and one falls the others forget the rabbit, turn and tear the unfortunate to ribbons. The races are exciting. Dogs are led out from paddocks by jockeys in gay uniform for review before the judges stand. The rabbit circles the track once to stir up the dogs and at the second approach the trap is sprung—and they are off!

Speedy curb photographers are plentiful along Tia Juana's dusty streets and they reap a big harvest with quick five-minute photography. Everybody wants to be photographed and send a copy home to spread the notion they have been raising Old Harry in a wicked hell-hole.

* * *

About the most impressive as well as forbidding structure is the town calaboose. Sentries well armed pace back and forth at its gloomy portals. Old-timers here issue one warning: "Keep out of jail." It recently required seven months of wrangling to secure the release of an American sailor who kicked up a drunken row.

* * *

Tia Juana seems to have eliminated one resort annoyance and that is the hat check graft. It is worth a faint cheer for that at least.

* * *

In dance halls young men with megaphones arouse enthusiasm of wall flowers by urging them to dance with the percentage girls and afterward it is expected that you lead them up to the bar and treat. Some are Mexican girls, but the majority are Americans.

* * *

Tia Juana has made great improvements in the past two years. The vice and debauchery that brought the 5 o'clock closing have been largely eliminated. A visit to it is quite worth while.

* * *

On Monday we return to the goings-on in good old New York.

The Growth of Peace

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The peace idea is gradually growing. Peace will never be secured by any artificial means until there is sufficient sentiment behind it. That sentiment must grow. It cannot be manufactured.

Of course every intelligent effort to promote peace helps along the growth and should be encouraged, but it should be remembered that universal peace is not upon a solid foundation except as based upon the will of all the people everywhere.

Lillian Gish, the movie actress, said the other day: "I believe the screen will bring all men to a common conception of one God and to a universal sense of international relation and duty."

One of the great factors in the growth of peace is the movie. It speaks not in words suitable for one people and not another, but by pictures which are understandable by all.

An Italian paper recently protested against the influence of American Hollywood screens. This is like protesting against the procession of the equinoxes.

I have seen films all through Europe and most of the American ones. Europeans are fond of American films, for the simplest reason in the world. They are better than the European and cheaper.

Against these two arguments it is useless to object.

American films are steadily spreading the democratic ideas of freedom and equality all over the world. Old notions of vested privilege, old institutions founded upon tradition must give way.

Along with the film comes other things that are universal and international, that knows no nations and do not understand the language of "patriotism"—art, literature and commerce. In the matter of art it makes no difference where one comes from nor who was one's father. It is the same way with commerce, if it is profitable to trade with the people of a country, and no ideas of nationality can prevent that occurrence.

In proportion as these universal ideas, commerce, the movies, art, grow and spread, to that degree must provincialism and nationalism give way and a suitable basis be formed upon which to erect the structure of universal peace.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

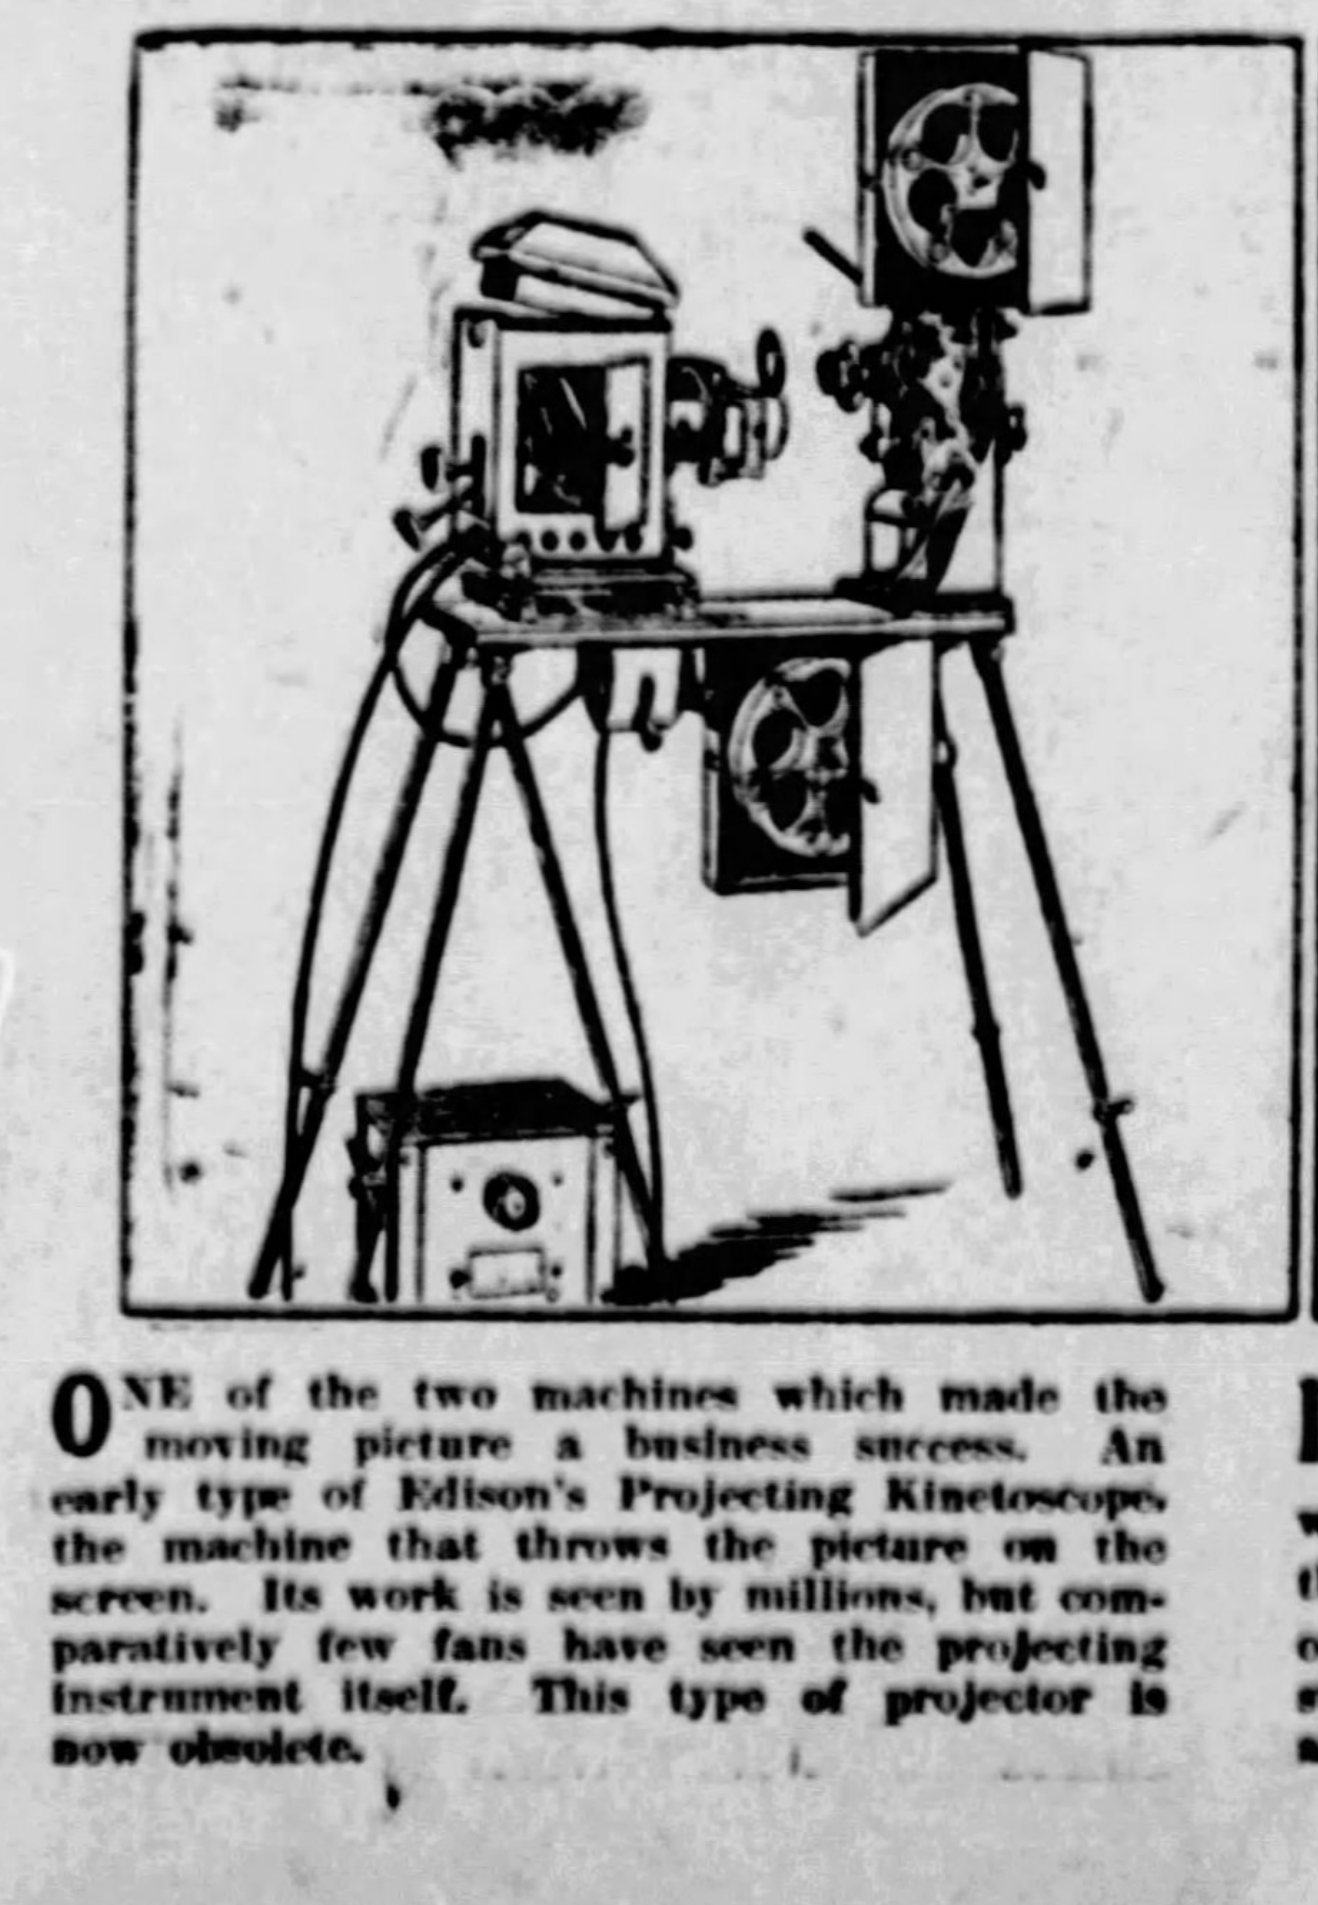
This Autumn

THIS autumn is a gypsy jade, as gay as gay can be; she flaunts red flags in every glade, drapes gold on every tree. I had it in my mind to grieve when Summer went away, for it was sad to see her leave with all her fair array, to see the pink and daisy pass, hear robin sing, "Good-bye," to watch the fading of the grass and hear the south wind sigh. Oh, it was sad when Summer went, her roses fell asleep, her shining splendor all was spent, and I had thought to weep. But then there came this gypsy jade, this Autumn, laughing, gay, so bright she banished every shade, drove every grief away! Her gold upon the fields is tossed, her scarlet on the trees; ah, who could sigh for beauty lost, amid such pageantries!

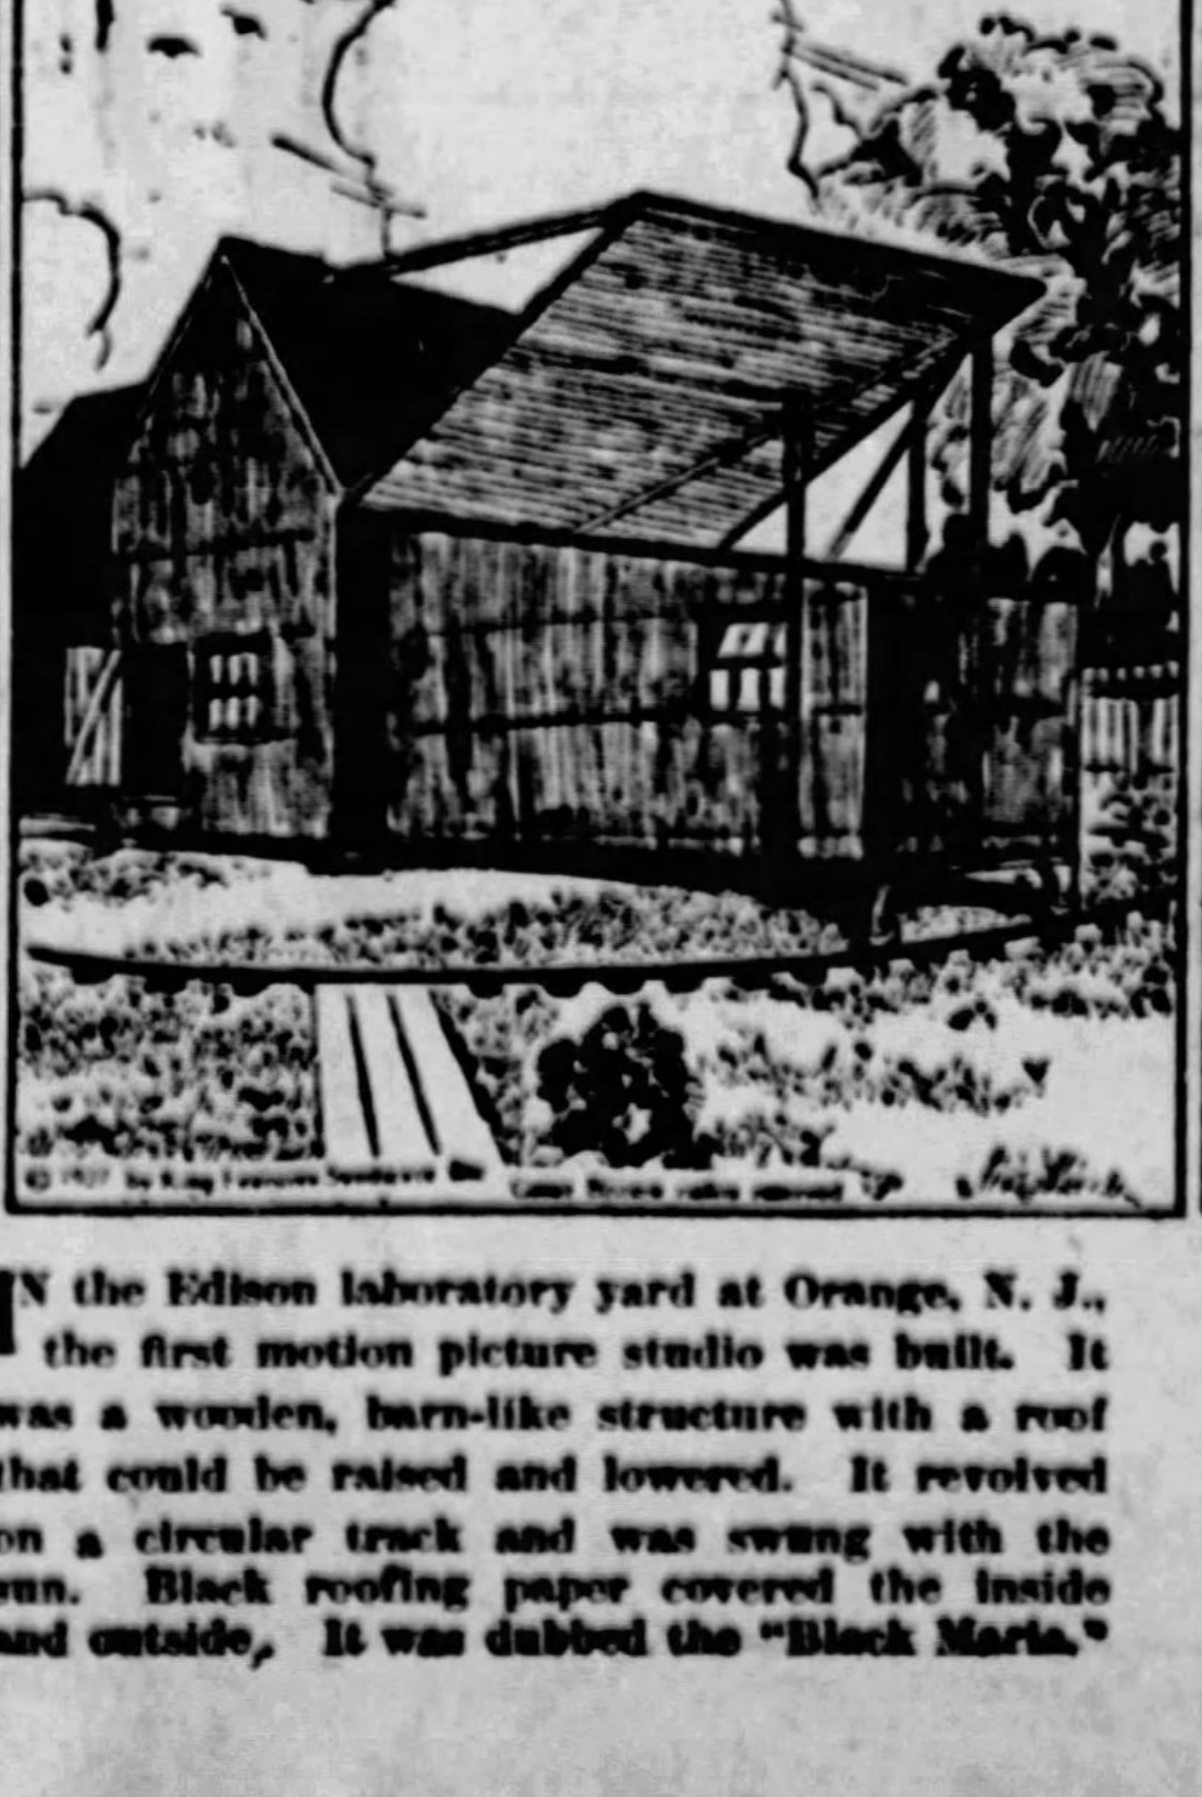
THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

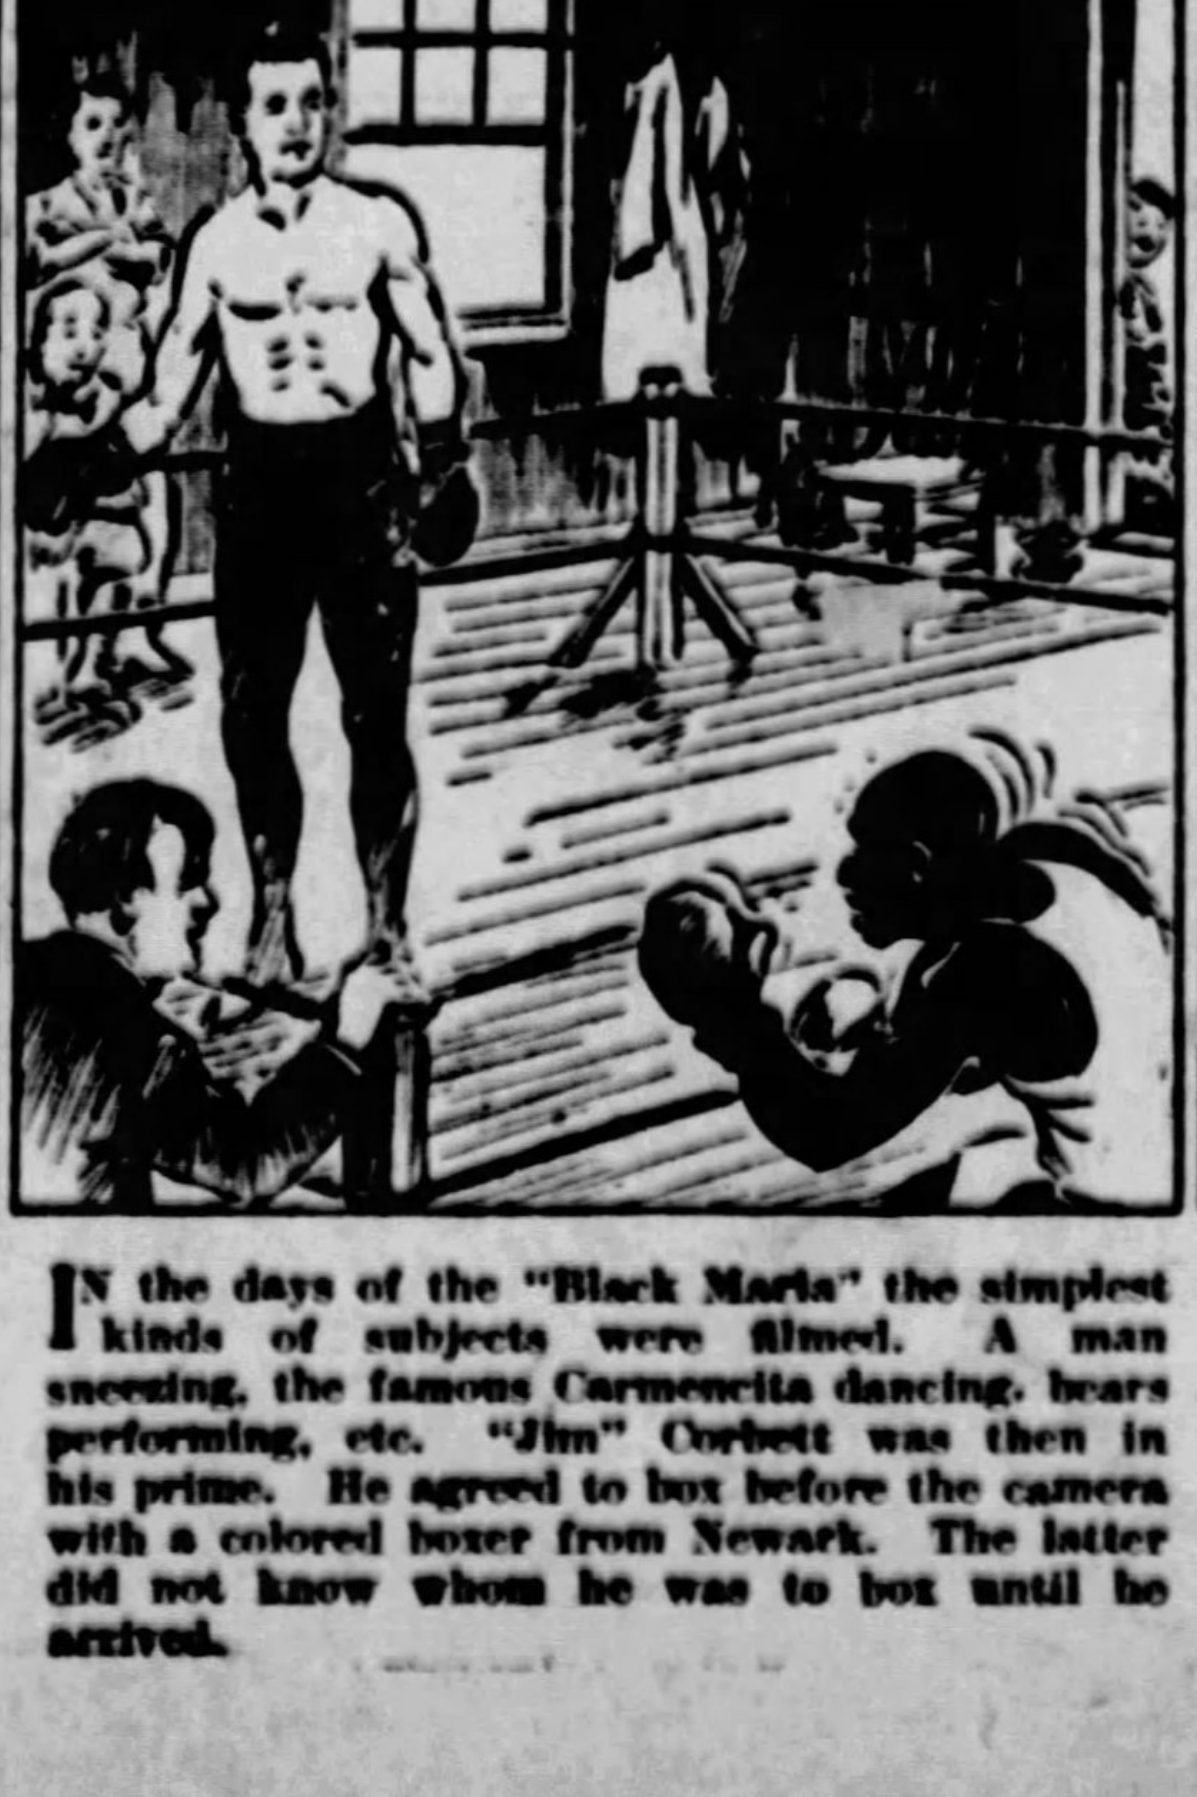
Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



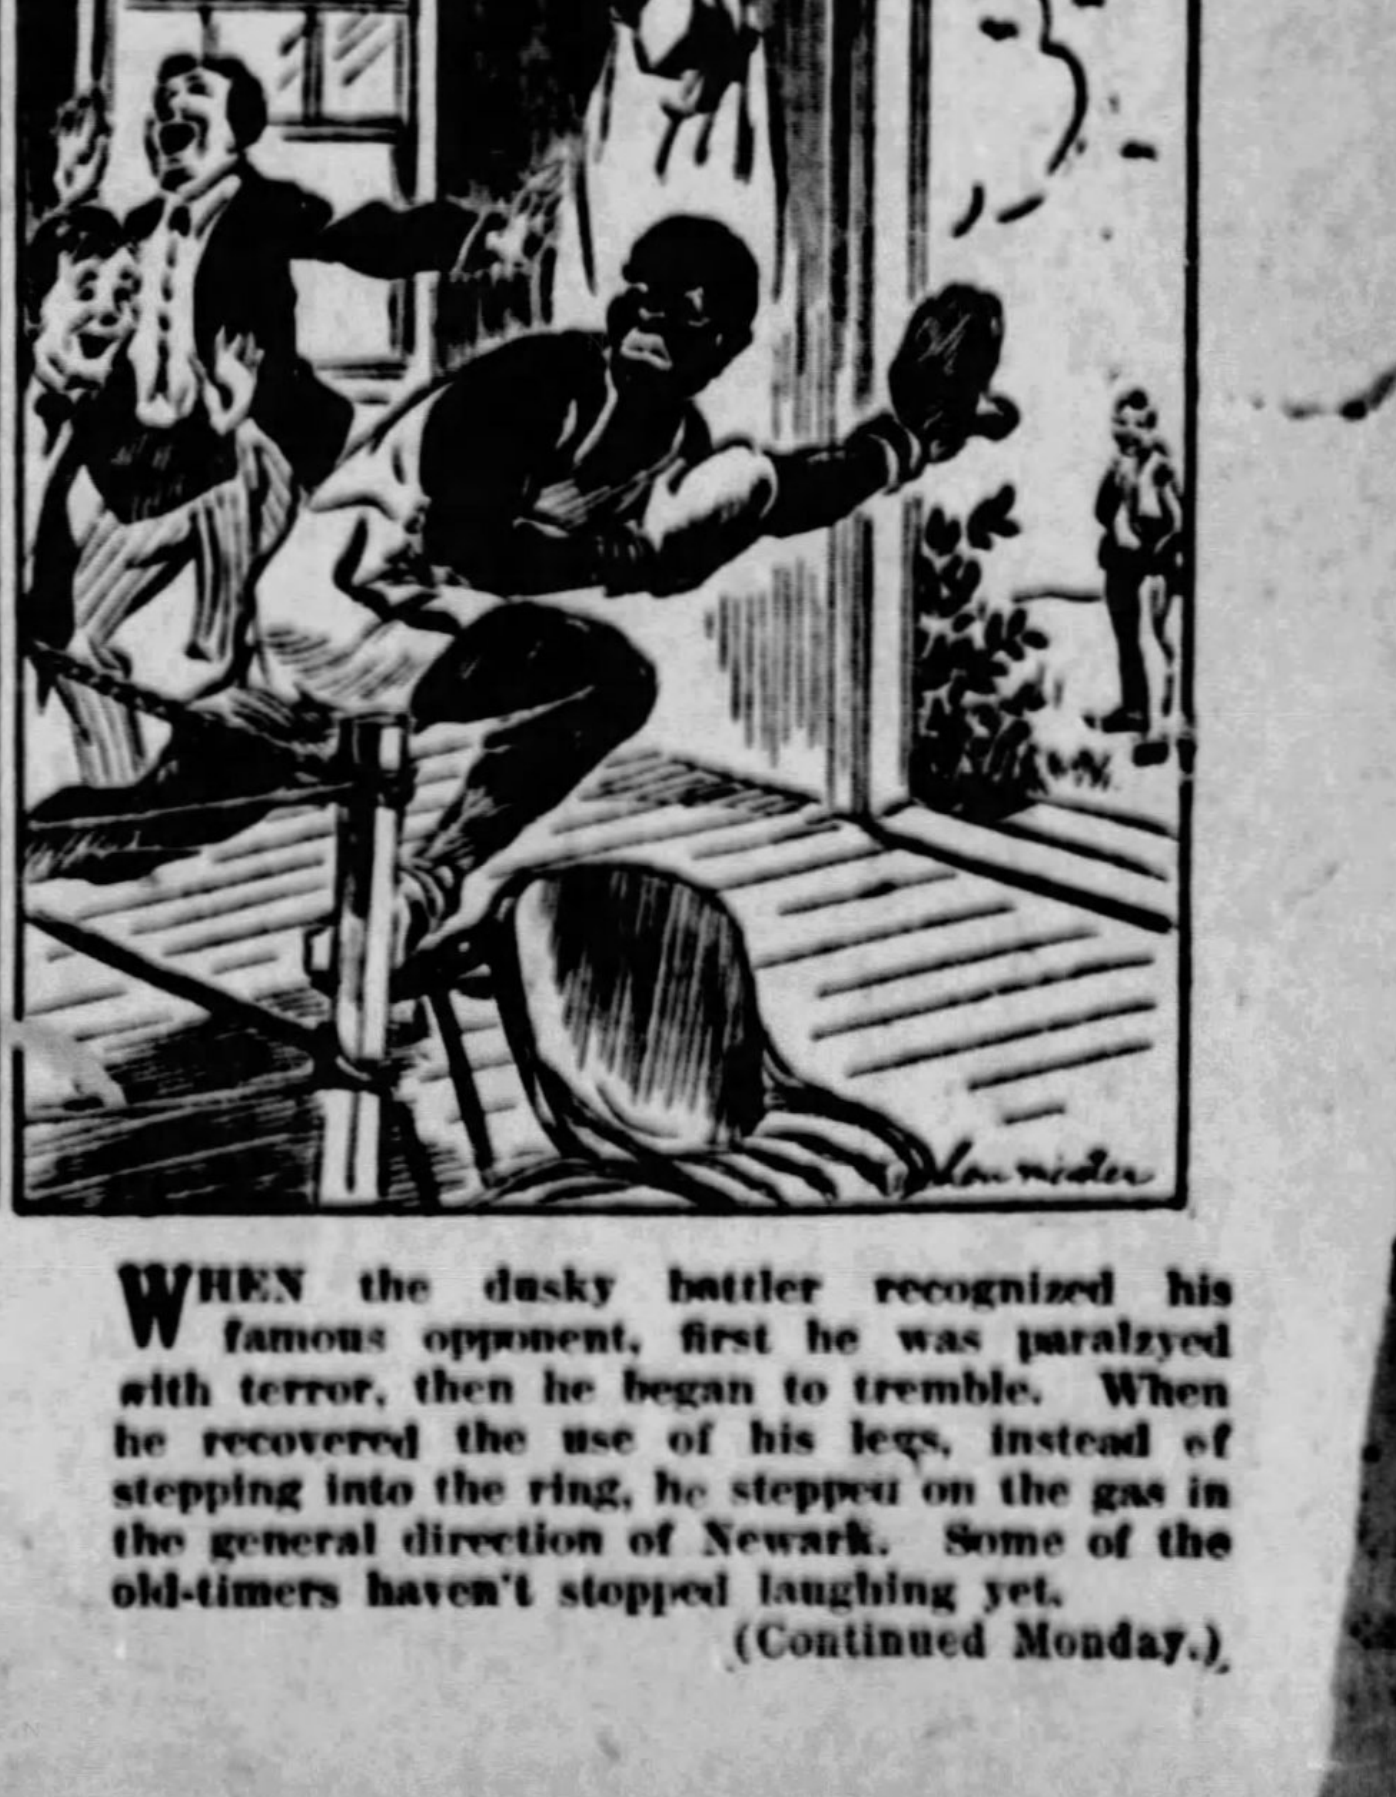
ONE of the two machines which made the moving picture a business success. An early type of Edison's Projecting Kinetoscope, the machine that throws the picture on the screen. Its work is seen by millions, but comparatively few fans have seen the projecting instrument itself. This type of projector is now obsolete.



IN the Edison laboratory yard at Orange, N. J., the first motion picture studio was built. It was a wooden, barn-like structure with a roof that could be raised and lowered. It revolved on a circular track and was swung with the sun. Black roofing paper covered the inside and outside. It was dubbed the "Black Maria."



IN the days of the "Black Maria" the simplest kinds of subjects were filmed. A man sneezing, the famous Carmencita dancing, bears performing, etc. "Jim" Corbett was then in his prime. He agreed to box before the camera with a colored boxer from Newark. The latter did not know whom he was to box until he arrived.



WHEN the dusky battler recognized his famous opponent, first he was paralzyed with terror, then he began to tremble. When he recovered the use of his legs, instead of stepping into the ring, he stepped on the gas in the general direction of Newark. Some of the old-timers haven't stopped laughing yet.
